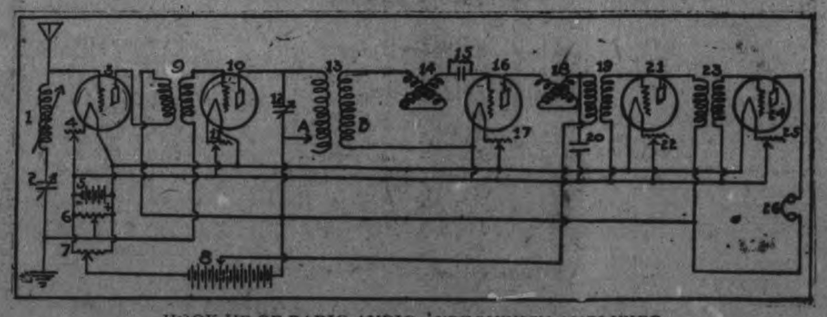
Try Radio-Audio Frequency Amplifier For Ideal Set, Expert Suggests



HOOK-UP OF RADIO-AUDIO FREQUENCY AMPLIFIER.

BY R. L. DUNCAN
Director, Radio Institute of America.

What's the best set of all for the reception of radio broadcasting?

It's hard to say.

But I think that the radio-audio frequency amplifier is close to the top.

The parts for this set cannot be made easily. But they may be bought in any supply shop and rigged up according to the diagram with little trouble.

Hook-Up.

No. 1—Antenna tuning inductance, which may be just a simple tuning coil.

No. 2—Variable condenser of .0005 or .0006 microfarads capacity.

Nos. 3, 10, 21 and 24—Amplifier, or "hard," vacuum tubes.

Nos. 4, 11, 17, 22 and 25—Filament rheostats.

No. 5—Six-volt "A" battery of 90 or more ampere hours capacity.

Nos. 6 and 7—"A" battery potentiometers.

No. 8—Variable "B" battery of 17 1-2 to 60 volts.

No. 9— Radio frequency transformer.

No. 12 — Variable condenser of .0001 microfarads capacity.

No. 13—Variocoupler.

Nos. 14 and 18—Variometers.

No. 15—Grid leak and grid condenser.

No. 15—Detector or "soft" tube.

Nos. 19 and 23—Audio frequency transformers.

No. 20—Small fixed telephone condenser. Note that this fixed condenser is placed before the audio frequency transformation.

No. 26—Head 'phones of high resistance.

Suggestions.

In using this circuit, do not ground the negative side of the six-volt "A" battery. The potentiometer, No. 6, may be dispensed with, if not used, the filament rheostat must be placed in the positive lead of the filament circuit.

This circuit may be used with an indoor loop.

FIRECRACKERS FIREDHOUSE

Children setting off firecrackers are believed to have started unwittingly the fire that completely consumed the home of Percy Price on the Norwood road about two miles east of Peterboro during the noon hour on Saturday. This was the opinion of Mrs. Price who told the Examiner she had bought some firecrackers for the younger children while in the city Saturday morning. Before dinner they were playing around the house letting off the firecrackers, and shortly afterward fire was discovered in the roof of the storey and a half log house that had been veenered with lumber outside.

At first glance it seemed that only a patch of shingles was burning, but by the time Mr. Price got a ladder and a pail of water and scrambled up to the roof the flames had dug themselves in and were past checking by that simple means. The family immediately turned their attention to saving furniture and with the prompt assistance of neighbors succeeded in saving all the contents even to the potatoes in the cellar.

A shed full of wood close to the house was also saved by a group of men who formed a water line armed with pails and milk cans full of water. The barns were on the west side of the house one hundred and fifty feet or so away, and as the wind was from that quarter the outbuildings were never in danger.

The name of Percy Price is an instant memory to the people of the city and district who recall him as a veteran of the Boer war. His house was on the north side of the road opposite the rifle ranges, and nearby is an old school which was vacated when the ranges were laid out. It provided a convenient roof for the family on Saturday night, and will be temporarily occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Price and their family until other arrangements are made. The household effects were removed to it on Saturday afternoon by the neighbors who did all in their power to assist the homeless veteran in his misfortune.

Mr. Price and his wife took their loss philosophically. They had got out all their household goods which were piled up on the lawn in the orchard. Mr. Price stood for a moment in his hurried labours looking at all that was left of his home, the stark chimney alone standing above the ruin and seeming to tower by contrast above the hot ashes and the smouldering logs some of which were still burning and crackling at three o'clock.

"I've been through far worse than this" said Mr. Price. His face was grimy with smoke and streaked with sweat. "I was through a fire that killed seventy people in one day in New Ontario."

Some of the neighbors who formed the bucket brigade and latter assisted in drawing the furniture to the old school house were: W. Simmons, who was the nearest and first there, Harry Wheeler, W. W. Brown Gordon Brown, Mr. Mortimer and his two sons, W. Lee and his two sons, Howard Quinn, Jos. Bray, Ernest Bell, Fred Carpentier, Bert Lee, Mr. Blewett and Chas. Gowett.

THE OLD LAW OF SUPPLY AND DEMAND IN REGARD TO TEA.

The supply of tea in the world today is very much less than the constantly increasing demand. The recent reduction of four pence per pound of the duty on tea entering England, which is by far the largest tea consuming country in the world, has had a decidedly stimulating effect on consumption. It is expected that this further demand will force the price of tea still higher.

A Daring Test With Scalding Steam. But The Heat Could Not Be Felt.

Live steam was discharged against a sheet of Ten Test Solid Fibre Board, and this intense heat could not be felt on opposite side for four and one-half minutes. This was one of ten tests made to prove its superior qualities.

TEN TEST SOLID FIBRE BOARD

used with Stucco, Brick or Brick Veneer provides ½ inch of the best insulation against heat, cold and moisture.

Ten Test Solid Fibre Board is literally two boards in one. An ideal exterior wall-base for stucco, it makes a lasting bond that will not allow stucco to crack, chip nor fall off. As an interior wall, enduring and beautiful, it permits fullest expression of personal taste in decoration with wallpaper, panelling or paints.

The first cost of building with Ten Test Solid Fibre Board is practically the same as a frame building. But homes built with this superior material are even more economical than frame construction. Ten Test Solid Fibre Board does not require constant painting and repairing. It is fire-resistive and carries a lower insurance rate.

CONFESSES TO THE MURDER OF A LITTLE GIRL

Eighteen - Year - Old Boy Says He Wanted Ransom Was Free From Suspicion

GUILTY CONSCIENCE.

CAMDEN, N.J., May 27.—Ida Kramer, 7-year-old Woodbury girl, who vanished March 25, and was found dead in Newton Creek, on the outskirts of this city, April 23, was kidnapped and murdered by George Elmer Monroe, 18, of 1,738 Fillmore Street, Camden, according to a confession he made to-day to Prosecutor Wolverton.

If the boy had not confessed, first in two letters then orally after he had been arrested this morning the mystery might never have been cleared up, according to the prosecutor. There was not the slightest suspicion pointing to Monroe, the prosecutor said.

"The kidnapping was for ransom and for no other reason, according to the confession," said the prosecutor. "It was a most extraordinary story. The boy said he had been out of work for several months. He comes of respectable parents, his father being Samuel Monroe, an employe of the Camden Water Bureau. The boy worked regularly, but lost his job some time before the crime was committed. He grew desperate finally and determined that he would kidnap some child and hold it for ransom.

Lured Child by Calling Name

"The boy said he went to Woodbury and saw little Ida playing with other children on the street near her father's butcher shop. Perhaps the reason he singled her out was that he heard another child say her name. He hid and watched his chance. Then, when she left the group of children he followed her. He called her by name and told her her mother wanted her.

"The child was unsuspicious and went with him. He led her away from her home and into a side street. He gradually got away from the neighborhood, using side streets, and got on a bus with her. They went from Camden to Fairview, he said, then along the Mount Ephraim Pike to Woodlyn and made their way to the creek.

The boy's idea was to find some nice place where he could hide the child until he was able to get a ransom for returning her. They reached Woodlyn by following back roads, so that no one saw them. When they were walking along near the creek, however, Ida saw some people and screamed to attract their attention.

That angered Monroe, he said, and he picked up a piece of rock and struck the child over the head. She fell, and he was afraid she was dead. He said he took off his shoes and tockings, picked her up in his arms, and took her out into the creek and threw her there. He did not know to a certainty whether she was dead or not when he threw the body into the creek.

Conscience Gave No Rest

"The boy went home but could not rest because of his conscience. He must have known he was safe when weeks passed and he escaped arrest. Finally, about the time the child's body was discovered, the gnawing of his conscience became too strong to be borne longer, and he wrote the first letter I received.

"This letter was so complete and circumstantial that I was convinced it had been written by the murderer It gave no name or address, and our efforts to trace it were in vain.

"Yesterday, after weeks of thought and worry, the boy decided he must make a clean breast of the murder. He wrote me another letter, in which he referred to the earlier one. I knew that we had the kidnapper and murderer, and the county detectives brought him in without difficuty".

PETERBORO IS INTERESTED IN BUSINESS DEAL

New Company Organized to Control Big Chain of Oak Hall Clothing Stores.

A few days ago the Hamilton Spectator referred to a rumor that one of Hamilton's greatest clothing concerns was to change hands.

This rumor was hardly correct, but partly so. The facts have now been made public as follows:—

The Sanford Manufacturing Co., have sold out their retail stores—twelve in number—know as the "Oak Hall" stores, situated in Toronto, (two stores), Hamilton, London, Windsor, St. Thomas Galt, Brantford, Welland, St. Catharines Owen Sound and Peterboro.

The purchasers are Walter A. McCutcheon, for some years Supervisor and Merchandise man for the Oak Hall Chain of Stores, and James Paterson, Canadian and European buyer of Woollens for the W. E. Sanford Co.

The stocks are said to inventory at over three quarters of a million dollars and were bought at a comparatively low rate on the dollar and includes all stocks on hand, fixtures, leases and good will.

The first of these stores were opened in Toronto and Hamilton just fifty years ago by the late Senator Sanford, and were intended to not only increase the output of the Sanford Wholesale Clothing business, but make it possible to keep the big staff of tailors employed all the year round. During the dull season large quantities of clothing were made up for the Oak Hall Stores.

It has been the proud boast of the Oak Hall Stores, that their doors were never closed for one business day during their long and very successful business history.

The new owners are not going to break their record by closing up for a single day to mark down their stocks for a sale. The several staffs have been at work on this for the past week and will be ready to launch a tremendous sale sometime this week.

Any rumors as to the Sanford Co. selling out are without foundation. The Company's travellers are all out on their respective grounds selling goods for next fall delivery and report fairly good business.

The new company being formed will be known as Oak Halls, Limited, with W. A. McCutcheon as President and Managing Director, and James Paterson, Vice President, Edward McCann, Secretary-Treasurer, Thomas Bryden and F. R. Smith, Directors

An "Oak Hall" store has been established in Peterborough the last ten years, and from its inception Mr. M. J. Maher has been its genial and popular manager. The grades carried of gent's ready-to-wear and furnishings, together with hats and caps are maintained at a high standard of quality in both manufacture and material. These facts, combined with approved business methods and efficiency in service, have built up for Peterborough's "Oak Hall," a steady, and ever-growing patronage in this city and county. And there is no doubt, but that under the new company, the chain of stores known as "Oak Halls" will continue along those same progressive lines which have won far them an enviable reputation for absolute dependability in all business transactions.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI

Bascot looked doubtful. But Disraeli kept a serious face.

"Postman Flooks," said the servant with a discreet cough.

"Ah—heavy bag this morning?" asked Disraeli.

"Rather light, sir."

Bascot took the bag from Flooks, and gave it to Disraeli, who quickly opened it and laid the letters on the desk near at hand.

"How's Mrs. Flooks?" asked Dizzy.

"Pretty middlin', sir. Glad to see you about so early. Heard you was poorly," said Flooks. Disraeli smiled.

"The village is quite upset over the report that you are ill," went on the postman.

"Give the village my love and say that I am not so well but feel a trifle better today. But Lady Beaconsfield is quite well, and the swans are quite well, and the peacocks—well the peacocks are out of sorts."

"Thank you, sir; good morning, sir," said Flooks as he left.

"Ah, Bascot; here are some letters for Lady Beaconsfield and Clarissa. Please see that they get them!"

As Bascot made his exit, Clarissa entered at the window. Running over to Disraeli she placed her arm about his shoulder, and bending over him, asked:

"How are you this morning, Mr. Disraeli?—Any news?"

"Not yet," replied Disraeli, and he patted the girl's hand

"Not yet?—not yet?—not yet?" Clarissa sighed. "It should have come days and days and days ago, shouldn't it? Shouldn't it?"

"Well—"?

"And every day the same story—'not yet!'"

Remember the task he has!—remember the difficulties!"

"And the dangers—"

"No, no! Forget the dangers. Have you breakfasted?"

"Breakfast—? As if I could breakfast! As soon as 8 o'clock strikes I want to be here to see if the telegraph boy has come."

"Are you so deeply in love?"

"Unspeakably!"

"Ah, I believe that absence is a great element of charm."

"Absence is deadly—not to love but to those who love. Tell me the news will be good. Tell me so!"

"I hope it will be good."

"No—no!"

"I'm sure it will be good!"

"Ah, that's better! You know it's quite dreadful to be so deeply in love as I am! Oh, I suppose that's a horrid thing to say. I'm sure mother would think it horrid!"

"I'm sure Charles would think it wasn't!"

"Enormous! But why is it so dreadful to be in love?"

"It's disastrous! It takes all the conceit out of one. I used to think I was rather clever; and now I don't. I used to think I was cleverer than Charles—but now, I know better."

There was a pause. Even the clever Dizzy was silenced by the girl's disconsolate mood. So he changed the subject. "Tell me about our little secret," he said.

"About Mrs. Travers?"

"Yes. Have you kept what you know of that admirable lady to yourself?"

"Yes."

"Haven't even told Mamma?"

"Parole d'honneur!"

"Good. Have you heard from her?"

"Not a sound. She is keeping very quiet."

"Yes. I don't like talkative people who suddenly begin to keep quiet."

"Surely she can't do Charles any mischief?"

"No. But should Charles have failed—"

"He hasn't failed," said the girl, clenching her hands.

"Of course he hasn't. But should he have failed, Mrs. Travers might do a great deal of mischief to the scheme."

"Do you mean that you will still carry out your plan even if Charles—"

"My dear. Do you think the British Empire will collapse when I do? No. Charles and I are only oiling the wheels. It is my duty to see that no dust gets into the machinery and so I have persuaded Mrs. Travers to come here—"

"Here."

"And help you nurse my sick peacocks!"

"Here—Why?"

"I want to have that ravishing creature where I can see her!"

"But how did you persuade her?"

"When the telegram from Charles failed to come, I threw out hints that he had succeeded, and she is perishing to know the truth. She leapt at Lady Beaconsfield's invitation. She is coming here to-day."

"What a pity Hughenden has no dungeon!"

"No. The garden is better. I couldn't watch her while she languished in a dungeon without being accused of deliberate cruelty."

"Good morning, Dizzy!"

"Mary, my dear; have you had a good night?"

"Of course I had, Dizzy. Slept like a top!"

"Really?"

"Now, Clarissa, listen to him! He doubts everybody's word. He even doubts mine."

"I never can believe anything you say about yourself, Mary," said Disraeli. And taking his wife's hand, he turned to Clarissa, and continued: "Do you know what this foolish woman did, Clarissa? The other night she drove to the House of Commons with me, where I had a very important speech to make. The footman slammed the carriage door, and crushed her finger in it."

"Oh!" exclaimed Clarissa.

"Yes," said Disraeli, taking the injured finger in his hand, "this poor finger! And because she knew how distressed I should be, she never uttered a sound, but bore the agony unflinchingly and I knew nothing about it until I got home."

He kissed the finger.

"Oh, how wonderful," Clarissa exclaimed.

"Wait until you are married my dear," said Lady Beaconsfield. "and you will be doing just more wonderful things all the time, and thinking just as little of them!"

"Well, if you have spoken the truth, you shall have your morning's offering, Mary," said Disraeli. "Here is your bouquet!"

"Lady Probert asks us to dine on Thursday week."

"Lady Probert?—That's rather amusing! Sir Michael denounces me, and thunders against me, and—asks me to dinner!"

"Shall I decline?" asked Lady Beaconsfield, somewhat shocked.

"Are you strong enough to go?"

"You absurd man. I am strong enough to go anywhere. You are trying to make me out an old woman. Why, the Probert's country place is just outside our gate. It's not a three minute drive."

"Then make friends with the mammon of unrighteousness, and accept!"

Clarissa had climbed on a chair, to place some flowers in a vase on top of the long row of bookshelves, and paid small heed to Bascot as he entered and walked up to Disraeli. But when she heard him say, "Telegram, sir!" she jumped down and ran to the Prime Minister's side, and stood peering over his shoulder.

"Thank you, Bascot," said Disraeli, as the servant turned to go.

"Open it—Open it!" cried Clarissa.

"Mary, please look after this impatient child, while I read this telegram as Lady Beaconsfield took Clarissa by the arm and drew her aside.

Disraeli opened the despatch. Suddenly he exclaimed:

"It's from Charles!—It's from Cairo!"

Clarissa broke away from her captor, and turning to Disraeli, she gasped:

"What does he say?—What does he say?—Read it!"

What the Famous Aces Are Doing in Civil Life

How the Gallant Heroes of the Air Have "Come Down Out of the Clouds" to Meet the Prosaic Circumstances of Everyday Affairs Where the Pay Envelope is More Important Than Medals; Some Find Work in Most Unexpected Fields

To left—1. Lieut. Geo. Vaughn, who brought down ten enemy planes; 2. Lieut. Paul Baer; 3. Capt. Douglas Campbell, California—eleven enemy planes to his record; 4. Capt. Campbell and his war plane.

Group of famous aces to left—5. Col. William Thaw and "Biddy"; Capt. Sonberan; Capt. Bridgeman; Lieut. Chris Ford; Lieut. G. de F. Larner (ace). Col. Thaw is the veteran American flier. He saw longer service at the front than any other American ace; to right—Judge Landis and Reed, his son, one of American "aces."

AT an interesting ceremony which will be held in New York city late in April, the Governor of the State will confer decorations on ten young men who were during the war internationally famous as being among the world's foremost "aces." And the importance of the ceremony will bring these men who have been widely scattered, together for the first time since they have entered civil life.

The announcement of this ceremony has given rise to a general curiosity as to "what has become the occupation of the nation's 'aces' now that peace and demobilization are definitely so far in the past that war-time atmosphere has, for most of them, completely vanished, and the environments and necessities of prosaic work-a-day existence have taken its place?"

One of these aces, for example, whose name was spread throughout the world by his heroism during the war is now a day laborer. Another one, whose record was just as startling, is an ordinary clerk. Another, who at 19 wore the much coveted red ribbon of the Legion of Honor and the little green ribbon of the Croix de Guerre, is running a cigar store, while a number of them are selling insurance, oil stocks, automobiles.

Each one of these young men, together with their fellow fliers, held the undivided interest and attention of the world just four years ago. They are now only vague shadows from the limbo of the past, their names meaning nothing and the memory of their exploits almost entirely forgotten save by a small group, perhaps, of friends and relatives.

Four years ago if one had stopped a man on the street and inquired of him as to whether or not he knew anything about one or all of the "aces" he would have immediately launched into a lengthy and detailed panegyric not only of their valor but also of the individual feats of bravery which they had performed. He knew the name of their squadrons, he knew the name and motto of their planes, and in addition to possessing an intimate knowledge of the exact date on which any of them might have made his latest victory he could also describe with glowing adjectives the personal feelings of the "ace" while bringing down the enemy plane. The color of the hero's hair and eyes; his height and weight, his disposition and his peculiar characteristics were as familiar to the man on the street as his own. Even to the smallest boy the word "ace" breathed a world of romance and heroism.

To-day not only has the small boy forgotten the name of the hero, but all the intimate knowledge so proudly displayed has completely vanished from the mind of the man on the street, and even the name which used to arouse so much enthusiasm is completely erased from his memory.

The fate of heroes who have accomplished unusual and oftimes miraculous acts demanding courage and bravery is a phenomenon of human nature. The execution of the events are all that remain within the memory, the man himself is quickly forgotten.

The legend of Achilles and the mythical labors of impossibility which he performed serve as a purpose of illustration. The name of Achilles immediately brings the thought of great prowess; most of the students who have read the story of his labors know nothing of his fate. What his tenth (or was it his twelfth?) and last labor meant nothing to the reader or to the child into whose eager ears the tales of the wonder of his strength and courage were told.

What happened to Hobson after he had received the spasmodic and excited plaudits of the American public for bottling up the Spanish fleet? Or to Admiral Dewey, or to Lee, or to so many other American heroes of the past whose names at the time of their achievements were the lions of the country? To the child in the school these names mean no more than that the men performed great deeds, but as to their life afterward they were not taught to appreciate the importance of that.

A great philosopher has said that the things by which we remember the famous men of the ages reveals the childishness of the human mind. And it is true—from Father Adam (with whose name we immediately connect the biting of an apple) to Charley Chaplin, invariably associated with a pair of huge shoes and baggy trousers, it is the ludicrous element which enters into and symbolizes for us the character of these famous men. Sir Walter Raleigh is not remembered for the fact that he was a famous statesman and a great warrior, but because he placed his coat in a mud puddle for the Queen to walk upon.

Abraham Lincoln's name instantly calls to mind the splitting of rails—George Washington, the habit of truth-telling and a cherry tree, and so on. When a hero's name is handed on to posterity—it is not his startling courage or valor that lingers, but some triviality which renders him immortal, and as to his life after the climax of his career had occurred, this is covered by almost total darkness.

Of course, the philosophers will always say that there are heroes everywhere—in the humblest walks of life. But would even a philosopher, no matter how kindly inclined, expect to enter the prosaic, dusty office of an ordinary nature and find bending over a large ledger, pencil behind his ear and a smear of ink on his face and fingers, a hero of the highest order, the owner of a name which rang around the see in the stooping figure of a bookkeeping clerk a young man who at nineteen was flight commander of his squadron, and who because of his bravery has been decorated by his country with great military honor?

On February the 18th, 1917, at 2 o'clock in the morning, when a thick darkness hung over the earth, young George A. Vaughn, Flight Commander and Captain of the 148th Squadron, left his tent and, leading a number of aeroplanes, started for the fighting line, which was about fifteen miles away. To the pilots of the other planes he issued his commands for the rendezvous at a certain point and at an exact moment. Taking the most dangerous position himself, that of going ahead and leading the way, he started off up into the air in the darkness.

Dawn would not arrive for some time, and the air had to be cleared for the fighting at the zero hour. This meant that enemy planes were to be engaged in battle in the darkness; that the observing planes guiding the movements of the infantry troops below who would go "over the top" at the zero hour had to be protected from above, and each plane was absolutely necessary for the success of the battle. The planes flew in formation, and unless shot down by an enemy before reaching the point of their rendezvous every man would arrive at exactly the same time and gather around their flight commander.

Stopping to scrap on the way with enemy planes was prohibited, as this was only a trap set by the enemy to break up the formation, and to keep as many of the planes as possible away from the rendezvous. Of course, it was only with the greatest amount of self-control that these scraps were avoided, because it was the natural eagerness of every one of the young pilots, most of them mere boys, including their commander, who at that time was about 19, to engage in combat with these enemy planes. But it was not only young Vaughn's business and duty to see that every plane arrived at the given spot on time, but also to direct the fighting.

When he had counted his planes from the seat of his "camel" he would shoot up to a high altitude, and watch the fighting. Every move of the planes below him had to be guarded, and when he saw an enemy slip in behind one of his own men and make for him, he would spiral down and wipe the "Fokker" off the landscape with a few bullets from his own machine gun.

This fighting in the three dimensions of space required not only the greatest daring and courage but a keen, rapid mind, and the eye of an eagle, for the air was so immense that very often the enemy would be directly above within almost a few feet before any warning sound of his motor could be heard, or his plane could be seen.

For two hours young Vaughn would fly and engage in battle. And then, as the machine's supply of gas would be exhausted, fly back to the aerodrome, leading what was left of his group of aeroplanes, and would report to his commanding officer the progress of the fight; the number of men wounded or lost, &c.

By the example for daring which he set to the men under him, George Vaughn proudly raised the percentage of his squadron to a high degree. The other pilots who were in his squadron boasted of their young commander who had thirteen victories to his credit and who was known as one of the bravest "aces" in the army.

Instead of resting after the two hour battle, the young commander would, with his own hands, immediately put his plane into perfect condition. The responsibility of the perfection of his motor, his guns, and that of the other planes was his, and when he had accomplished this, he would report ready to be sent off again. Often he would have to "take off" many times during the day and night and under all sorts of weather conditions; flying sometimes with the comforting presence of a fellow comrade, but again without any one, and endeavoring to keep a certain route and altitude, and at the same time watching for the enemy, in the pouring rain, or a heavy fog.

All day duty and again up at the hour of two or three so as to reach the fighting line before dawn, was the daily life of this "ace" and the exhibition of courage and daring, the cool sagacity required of a flight commander, and the sustaining at a high level of the morale of his command, were the daily requirements of George Vaughn in the winter of 1917.

To-day he arises from a comfortable bed, by no means a luxurious one, and at the ringing of the alarm clock hurries off to his breakfast and then to his office. Entering a large electrical factory, he stands in line with a hundred-odd fellow workers and waits for his turn to punch a clock. His excitement due to the fact that he has arrived in good time and will not be "docked," is almost as keen as the feeling he was wont to have when he had arrived successfully leading his command at the rendezvous, four years back.

All day he sits perched on a high stool, and bends over the huge pages of a ledger. His pride is to display a neat, unspotted page to the keen eye of the "boss," and at 12 o'clock when the luncheon hour arrives his one thought and desire is that the coffee in his thermos bottle is still hot.

Instead of the mystery of the French dawn, instead of the blue skies of Verdun, and in place of looking down upon rows of tiny masses of men marching to their death, he now looks down upon rows of figures neatly entered on the ruled page of his ledger, and in lieu of his former ambition to obtain the Legion of Honor, or the much to be desired Croix de Guerre, there exists a passion for an increased efficiency in adding figures, and the desire to get a $5 raise.

The shrill whistle of a huge steel mill proclaims to a world of tired working men that a few moments' respite has been granted them so that they may eat their luncheon. Out of the ranks of the day laborers who pass through the gates, their tin buckets swinging from their arms; the oil from the mills showing in the creases of their faces and in the folds of their grimy overalls, a casual observer would fail to pick young James A. Meissner, one of the most famous of all the "aces" the world produced during the war.

A Major at 19, he left school to take a command with the Ninety-fourth Squadron, the hardest fighting, the bravest, and the most renowned of all the squadrons which flew during the world war. He has been decorated by almost every European country as well as his own, and above the silver wings on his coat there has been pinned the Distinguished Service Cross, the Legion of Honor, and the Croix de Guerre with many palms.

Capt. "Eddie" Rickenbacker, who was perhaps the most popular of all the "aces," and who has the leading number of victories to his credit, meaning twenty-six enemy planes, is now selling automobiles. He also wears the highest awards of valor given by every friendly European nation and his own country.

Young Reed G. Landis, son of the well known baseball judge, left college to join the Twelfth Squadron when he was eighteen, and almost immediately became a Major. He had ten victories to his credit, and is now trying out the extent of his courage in the advertising game. His latest introduction to the world was an electrical clock for automobiles.

Lieut. Frank Lucien Hale, with sixteen accredited victories, is now selling insurance to make a living for his recent bride.

Capt. Douglas Campbell, who wears as many foreign decorations as any single "ace" is in the export business, and Capt. Harold Buckley of the Ninety-fifth Squadron, and fellow flier with the late Quentin Roosevelt, and who has been decorated by his country for his boldness in facing danger, is now displaying as great a spirit of intrepidity by selling goods in Russia.

A few of the aces are in the Government service, holding down dull, uninteresting positions in the various offices; some others are selling stock—oil, mining and insurance; a few have gone back to college to finish their studies, and still others have completely disappeared in the maelstrom of daily life.

Perhaps to only their immediate families and relatives does the memory of the heroic deeds of these boys remain—in the sweeping measure of their existence of to-day, not even to themselves does the thought of their former prowess; the excitement and tension of their former life ever occur, and cheerfully and quietly have they sunk from the ship of fame into the commonplace small waves of ordinary daily business life.

LEASIDE LOST TO GREYBIRDS

The C.O.B.L. game at Leaside Saturday resulted in a win for the Lindsay Greybirds 7 to 2. Lefty McGuire did the twirling for Leaside with Shaw receiving. He blanked the birds for the first five innings and Leaside took the lead with one run at the end of the fifth.

In the sixth however the Lindsay men came back strong. They got onto McGuire's curve and hit him all over the field. H. Cummings started the batting rampage with a two bagger. This frame ended with four runs to the birds' credit which they increased by three more in the seventh. Leaside was only able to get one run across the plate in the eighth inning. Allen did the pitching for Lindsay for the first six innings and Oulette for the balance of the game.

The Leaside lineup was the same as for the game with Lindsay on Victoria Day while the only change in the Greybirds' lineup was that Richman went into center field.

Diamond Dust

Good boy, Al.

* * *

* * *

If Oshawa had any more pitchers they should have been given a workout Saturday. The three they did use didn't show up any too well.

* * *

George East certainly had the grounds in good shape last Saturday. The average spectator does not realize the amount of work necessary to keep the diamond in first-class condition.

* * *

* * *

A ball rolling along the third base line seems to greatly amuse certain members of the Oshawa team. They can just stand and watch it for hours on end.

* * *

A nice hit by Holyman brought in the run in the fourth that tied the score.

* * *

Some one said to us after the game Saturday, "I felt sorry for the Oshawa pitchers; they had to change them so often." We also sympathize with them.

* * *

* * *

John MacIntosh of Belleville suffered a compound fracture of the leg on Thursday afternoon while playing third base in a High School game.

* * *

Raybestos and the C.G.E. will clash at the Riverside Park to-morrow evening at 6 o'clock.

* * *

The Petes will go to Belleville on Wednesday afternoon. The next home game is on Saturday with Bowmanville.

FOUR HITS OFF HECKMAN PETES HAMMER GALLAGHER

JOHNSTON STARS.

HANKS to Al. Heckman's superb pitching and the sturdy use of their war clubs by the Solomon crew, the Petes won an unexpectedly easy victory over the much advertised Oshawa gang in the Central League fixture at Riverside Park on Saturday. The Oshawa-Kingston Pony combination, claiming to be the strongest batting aggregation in the league, could only collect four scratch singles off Heckman's delivery, and their one unearned run was the result of two errors and a wild pitch. On the other hand, the Petes, who couldn't hit a lick at Cobourg on Wednesday, walloped three Oshawa twirlers for a total of thirteen hits and won handily by 10 runs to 1.

Both teams were shaky in their fielding, but while Heckman held the visitors helpless when hits might have meant runs, the Petes could not be kept in check by the Oshawa gunners, and their wallops, mixed with Oshawa's misplays, gave them a soft win. Manager Solomon shook up his batting order, sent Dugan to first base and gave Hatrick a chance to win his spurs, and the changes seemed to add considerable punch to the Petes' attack. At all events the homesters drove both of Oshawa's pitching aces out of the game, and First Baseman Saunders was on the rubber when the eighth innings was finished.

Pitching his third game in a week, Heckman was at the top of his form. He had perfect control, a barrel of smoke and a good curve, and the heavy hitters of the Oshawa gang could do nothing with him. He did not issue a pass, and the four singles credited to the visitors were of the scratch variety; the first, a slow roller to Collins that Rowden beat in the first inning, the next a pop-fly that dropped just inside the left field foul line in the second and a rap through the box and a roller down the first base line that Heckman couldn't field in the ninth. In three games only four runs have been scored against the Petes' heaver and only two of the quartette were earned.

Oshawa had Short-stop Fair and Second Baseman Rowden of last year's infield in action, with Saunders of the Kingston Ponies at first and Twigg of the same outfit at third. Dobson, Belding and Legge of the 1921 Oshawa champions formed the outfield, while the battery consisted of Gallagher and Evans of the Ponies. On paper that looked like an invincible aggregation—but you can never tell about a ball game.

Gallagher, heralded as a southpaw extraordinary, who would make the Central League fans forget Freddy Goyer, got by in good style until the fifth, when he ran into a storm of hits that chased him off the mound. A couple of bunts down the third base line formed the turning point in the game. After Collins had singled, Shaughnessy dropped one down the foul line. It rolled foul at first, but Third Baseman Twigg instead of picking it up when it was on foul territory watched it roll back across the chalk line and then grabbed it. Shaughnessy was perched on first by that time. Then "Shiner" Johnston laid down another bunt in the same place, and this time Gallagher repeated the bone-head performance, letting the ball roll fair before he picked it up. That filled the bases and put the Oshawa-Kingston all stars up above the clouds. The old ball game was slipping from their grasp then, and it went altogether the next instant when Max Swanston clipped a double over Twigg's head, scoring two runs. Gallagher couldn't get the ball over for Heckman, and a pass to the Petes' hurler filled the sacks again. Bill Hatrick promptly unloaded two of them with a ringing single to right, and Gallagher was through pitching for the day. Patten stopped the slaughter for a while, but the Solomon athletes got to "Pat" for two runs in the seventh, and after Johnston had doubled off him in the eighth he, too, was waved off the mound, and Saunders tried to end the fun. He finally got the side out after three runs had been scored.

The game was featured by the work of Johnston around second for the Petes. He made a sparkling pick-up of a low throw from Collins, and the manner in which he took two tosses from Heckman and hailed base runners off second was a treat. The pitcher's throw was swift and accurate and Johnston had both runners blocked without a chance to reach the bag. Shaughnessy had a nice catch of a long fly to left, and Fair and Rowden of the Oshawa team both made noteworthy grabs.

How They Counted.

The scoring did not start until the fourth, when both teams got an easy run.

For Oshawa Rowden was safe on Collins' fumble. Saunders, in attempting to sacrifice, bunted to Heckman, who hailed Rowden at second. Fair rolled to Collins, who missed the grass-cutter, and both runners were safe. Gallagher was tossed out by Johnston, the base runners advancing. With Dobson up, one of Heckman's fast ones turned into a wild pitch, and Saunders registered. Dobson then grounded out to Johnston.

The Petes got it back in their half. With one out, Heckman got a life when Saunders failed to keep his foot on first in taking Twigg's throw. He was forced at second on Hatrick's bunt to Gallagher, but Fair helped the Petes along by booting Dugan's roller. Holyman came through with the necessary hit by burning a single over second, scoring Hatrick and sending Dugan to third. Holyman stole second, but Lowe fanned.

The Solomon crew had a field day in the fifth when they broke the game wide open. Collins started it by singling down the first base line. Shaughnessy bunted, and when Twigg watched the ball roll fair the batter reached first. Johnston dumped another in the same place and was safe without a play being made on him, filling the bases. Swanston cracked a double over Twigg's head, scoring Collins and Shaughnessy. Heckman drew a pass, again filling the bases, and then Hatrick cracked a single to right, sending Johnston and Swanston in. That was enough for Gallagher and the ex-Kingston southpaw was taken out of the box, going to right field in place of Legge, while Patten went to the rubber. He stopped the fun for a while by getting Heckman at third on Dugan's bunt, striking out Holyman and tossing Lowe out at first.

The Petes got two more in the seventh. With one out, Heckman singled past third and Hatrick drove one through short. Dugan hit to Fair, who threw low to third, Heckman scoring. Holyman rolled another to Fair, and Dugan was caught between second and third, Hatrick crossing the plate. Rowden tossed out Collins.

The eighth saw the end of Patten. With one out, Johnston doubled to left, and the veteran right-hander was yanked. First Baseman Saunders going to the mound. Swanston singled to centre, sending Johnston to third. Swanston stole second. Heckman walked for the third time, filling the bases. Hatrick tapped to Fair, who threw low to the plate, Johnston and Swanston scorning, while Heckman reached third and Hatrick second. Dugan singled to right, scoring Heckman, but Hatrick was out at the plate. Holyman grounded to Fair for the third out.

Oshawa had a good chance to score in the final innings. With one down, Saunders singled past the box and Fair got a life on Holyman's fumble. Gallagher scratched a single on a roller down the first base line, and the bases were full. Dobson hit to Heckman and Saunders was out at the plate. Then Belding missed three, and it was all over.

The game was well handled by Umpires Butler and Rosevear. There was a big crowd out, including a delegation from Oshawa—who looked as if they wished they had remained at home, or that some of the Kingston Ponies had.

LACROSSE UNDER WAY THIS WEEK

Four City League Games, Including the Juvenile, Opens on Wednesday.

Four games in the city lacrosse league are scheduled for this week. Riversides and Athletics in the senior group play tonight at the Nicholls Oval beginning at 6.15 o'clock. This is the second game in this group and will test the comparative strength of the Ashburnham and uptown teams. Sutherland's Riversides were the last to get going, but they claim to have gathered together a bunch that will make things lively. The Athletics represent the efforts of George Mein and Bert Todd to give the game a new impetus in Peterboro through the medium of a city league, and like the other teams include a sprinkling of experienced men with youngsters who are breaking in.

The Junior O.A.L.A. group has been revised to admit Marmora making a four-team group. Peterboro's first game is at home with Hastings on Thursday June 8th, and the junior practices at Central Park this week on Tuesday and Thursday evening should bring out all the candidates for the team. Hastings won the group last year and have most of their team intact. They are all good stick-handlers and will no doubt make a strong attempt to start here with a win.

The junior game at Campbellford on the holiday and the Crescent-Strathcona city league game both illustrated the need of ordinary lacrosse intelligence on the part of the home sections of these three teams. Offensive plays should be carefully planned and practiced, and advantage should be taken of the odd man in going in to the goal. At the same time the mid-field players should not let opponents get away with the odd man leaving him, as was noticed in a number of instances, an open way through the defense. Coaches should attend to these details at once and co-ordinate team play, otherwise the practices will be fruitlessly frittered away and weaknesses will be discovered only too late.

FANNED 17 IN FIVE INNINGS

High School Twirler Accomplishes Freak Play and Wins With Difficulty

In these days of record performances at the bat, in the field and by the pitchers, one cannot overlook a feat recently turned in by a high school twirler at Washington, D.C.

A youngster by the name of Roudabush, pitching for Eastern High School against another Washington preparatory school team, struck out 20 men, yet had his troubles winning the game 10 to 7.

The freakish part of Roudabush's performance came from the second to the sixth inning inclusive. In those five innings he struck out 17 players an average of better than three each inning.

Yet in that time his opponents were making five runs on five hits, a walk and an error.

How come you say? Let us explain.

Although Roudabush struck out 17 men in five innings, two more than enough to retire the oposition, his catcher failed to hold the third strike on three batters, so that only 14 players were actually retired on strikes.

While his teammates were retiring the other man, the oposition managed to shove over five runs.

With Roudabush is was a question of striking them out or base hits. While he officially retired 17 on strikes, three others reaching first because the catcher couldn't hold the third strike, his oponents piled up 11 hits and scored 7 runs, while his team mates were getting the other ten outs.

HIGHER PRICES FOR CIGARETTES THIS MORNING.

MONTREAL, May 27.—(Canadian Press).—Cigarette smokers were counting out 22 and 23 cents for their smokes this morning. The Imperial Tobacco Company has issued a statement that until it can issue new price lists, cigarette prices will be increased three dollars a thousand, plus increased sales tax of one and a half per cent.

PORT HOPE TOPS BELLEVILLE NINE

Heavy Hitting Contributes Greatly to Victory For Port Hope in First Home Game.

PORT HOPE, May 29.—(Special to The Examiner).—The Belleville string of pitchers failed to stop the slugging of the home team here on Saturday afternoon in the first home game of the season, the locals coming through with a win by 11 to 8. A large crowd turned out. Kellehar, Holman and Williams were on the mound for Belleville, while Boyd and Deer twirled for Port Hope. Three runs in the second, two in the third and six in the fourth made the game all safe—all clean hits for extra bases. Belleville got their runs in the first, fifth, seventh and ninth innings. Kay and Boundy officiated and gave satisfaction.

SCHOOL LACROSSE IS COMING ALONG

Aid From Older People is Necessary to Give the Youngsters a Chance at a Good Clean Sport.

Jackie Coogan was responsible for drawing many of the boys away from the School Lacrosse League practice Saturday morning. A number of the boys, however, turned up and gave the new sticks a try out. They expressed their entire satisfaction with the new playing apparatus and a good practice was held.

The league expects to get started next week if enough sticks can be obtained for the boys.

Many of the youngsters have not sufficient funds, and an appeal was made several days ago for money to buy sticks for those boys who could not do so for themselves. A number of public-spirited citizens responded, and Walter Smaill, who has volunteered to look after the sticks and see that they are used properly, was enabled to purchase enough sticks for one team. Another dozen sticks are necessary before the league can really get on its feet with a proper schedule, and a further appeal is made to the big brothers of the community to help out the youngsters in this respect.

The sticks already purchased are being held by Mr. Smaill and lent to the boys for each practice or game. This insures that the sticks are well cared for and each boy gets an equal opportunity to play, but enough sticks to equip two full teams are necessary before the league can get down to real business.

GIRLS' BASEBALL.

In the Girls' Playground Ball League Saturday the Centrals defeated C.O.S., 42 to 25, and the P.C.I. team trimmed the Normals, 22 to 11.

BELLEVILLE TO BE INVADED BY SOLOMON CREW

LEAGUE STANDING.

The Petes go to Belleville on Wednesday, leaving on the 8 a.m. G.T.R. train for the Bay of Quinte City. A victory over Billy Mills and his crew would leave Manager Solomon's outfit in a very advantageous position in the league race, for their next two games are at home, Bowmanville playing here on Saturday and Port Hope a week from that date. As a result of Saturday's games, Cobourg is out in front in the league race, with Peterborough and Lindsay tied for second. Cobourg has not yet played a game away from home and their test will come in Lindsay on Wednesday. The league standing is as follows:

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Cobourg	2	0	1000
Peterborough	2	1	.667
Lindsay	2	1	.667
Belleville	1	1	.500
Port Hope	1	1	.500

INTERSCHOLASTIC FIELD EVENTS TO BE STAGED SOON

Track and Field Sports For the Boys of the City to Be Held Twice a Week.

POINT SYSTEM.

A series of track and field contests will be held during the next few weeks between the Public, Separate and High School students in Peterborough. The boys making the honor standard are allowed to compete in the city interscholastic meet, which will be held before the schools close.

A meeting of the teachers in the different schools will be held this week at a convenient time to discuss the final arrangements and draw up a schedule.

A point system for scoring will be employed and the classes for entrants will be determined by weight. The scoring system and the weight schedule will be announced later.

The events will be divided into four groups—sprints, runs, jumps and throwing and weight events—and a contestant will not be allowed to compete in more than one event in each group.

JUST A WORD TO THE FANS

Wether the Peterborough Central League club is to prove a consistent winner in this year's race or not depends in a great measure upon the fans. If the people in this city who love baseball support the team as it should be supported—and by that we do not mean financially, but morally—Manager Solomon's outfit will give all the Central League teams a real battle for the honours. The fans should be solidly behind the team, overlooking their misplays and fighting with them in every game. If they are, keep your eye on the Petes, for they have the real fighting spirit now, and will continue to have it unless it is driven out of them by unkindly criticism on the part of a section of the fans.

Through circumstances over which he has no control, Manager Solomon is without the services of three-quarters of the regulars of last season. That means he has had to practically start all over again to build up a team. It is not by any means perfect. The fielding is unsteady, the team has been making errors and will probably make some more, although it will continue to improve if the players realize that the fans are with them. At present the Petes are handicapped, not only by the inexperience of some of the players, but by the physical condition of several others. Holyman, for instance, has been out there with a lame shoulder that would have kept him out of the game if there was another short-stop to replace him. But he, like the rest of the squad, realizes that it is up to him to get out and give his best under the circumstances. That is the spirit of the whole team. They are pulling together and there is no crabbing among the players. "Never mind that one, kid; go and get the next one," remarked Heckman on Saturday when Frankie Collins was bemoaning the fact that he had paved the way for Oshawa's only run. With harmony like that existing in the squad, and every man giving all that he has to win, the Petes are going to be hard to beat—if the home fans show the same spirit.

It is up to the people who go to the games. If they want to convert the harmony and fighting spirit that at present exists among the players into a winning factor, they have only to go over to Riverside Park and pull for the Petes, passing over their errors and mistakes. But if they prefer using the hammer and riding the players who make a slip, they may succeed in killing the fine spirit that exists at present, and kill at the same time all chances for the pennant.

When You Score

If the batsman hit a foul fly to a player and the ball is dropped, and the batsman on his next effort is retired before reaching first, the player who dropped the foul fly is charged with an error. At one time such a slip was not charged as an error if the batsman was retired before reaching first.

NOTABLE SALE

BELMONT PARK, N.Y., May 29. (Canadian Press.)—One of the most notable sales of the turf this year was closed recently when J. S. Cosden paid $85,000 to the Hurricane Stock Farms for Snob II., a three-year old colt by the English sire Prestige, dammed by Mary Dora.

Snob II. is a candidate for all the eastern classics. His new owner will nominate him for the $50,000 champion stakes at Latonia, June 24, where the horse probably will meet Morvich for the championship of the three year olds.

TALES OF A WAYSIDE TEE

By GRANTLAND RICE

(Copyright, 1922, New York Tribune Inc.)

Willie Hunter, the British golfer who caused such a stir in our last amateur championship at St. Louis, starts in on Monday to defend his British crown over the testing links of Prestwick.

Dillie has spent most of his time in the United States since beating the big field at Hoylake, but he went back in time to make thorough preparations against the assaults of such star golfers as Wethered, Tolley, Jenkins, Carter, Braid and the big flock who will come to grips in the title hunt.

Hunter should be favored against any single entry in this next British championship, as he is the most consistent amateur golfer in Great Britain, even at times when he doesn't quite reach the more erratic brilliancy of Wethered and Tolley.

Whether Hunter wins or loses he will start on his way back to the United States in June and will then begin to get ready for the big international test at Brookline, to be followed by our own championship, where he intends to take another whirl.

Two Winning Factors.

In the first place, he has one of the best golfing temperaments that we have ever seen.

By this we mean a combination of poise and unruffled determination.

He has about him a look of studious sereneness where the rest of the universe is completely detached when it comes to a hard match.

In his match against Bobby Jones at St. Louis, through the morning round, he looked to be completely outplayed, yet he only finished two down.

In those first eighteen holes we counted no less than seven holes where Jones was closer to the pin on his second shot than Hunter was on his third.

Yet Hunter in each case got his half, either through a wonderful chip shot or a steady procession of eight and ten-foot putts which he tapped into the cup.

In behalf of Jones it might be said that this is one of the most heart-breaking experiences that a golfer can suffer—to count as many as seven holes almost surely won and then find each in turn snatched away.

Hunter on every green went boldly for the cup. Even if he were thirty or forty feet away he gave no indication of trying to get dead on keen greens. He was out to hole the ball, often going six and eight feet over, but always making the return journey in safety.

If Jones, whose higher pitches to the green left the ball covered with mud, had been putting as well as Hunter that first round he might have easily turned in a sixty-six.

Hard Battle On.

The result of this coming British championship will be more than normally important to American golfers, as it will have no small effect upon the selection of the British team that is to invade Brookline in September for the biggest international golf match ever played in America.

Hunter, Tolley and Wethered are sure to be named, no matter how they fare. But others, such as Braid, Carter, Darwin, Jenkins, Sandy Armour, Holderness, etc., can increase their chance for selection by getting among the last eight.

Hunter has a terrific time of it before he wins again. Where the test is over the eighteen-hole route up to the final match a slow start may easily bring unexpected defeat.

And no British golfer has repeated his triumph in many years. H. J. Whigham, Walter J. Travis, Chandler Egan and Jerome D. Travers have all won two championships in succession over here, but those repeating in Great Britain have been extremely scarce. Winning two eighteen-hole matches a day is a smashing test for any many to face, for there is only a slight chance to recover from a bad start where one's opponent moves steadily along.

H. H. Hilton and Walter J. Travis are the only amateur golfers who have ever held both American and British titles. Evans, Ouimet, Travers and Gardner have all gone after the British title in vain. Tolley and Hunter have tried to follow Hilton's example, without success. In September Hunter and Tolley will try again, and if there is a new British champion crowned he also will take the field. As Larry Jenkins will also make the trip there may be four British champions or ex-champions launching an attack upon the growing golf prestige of the United States.

The championship at Prestwick may play a big part in deciding the final selection of the invading roster to come over this summer. As this invasion will call for an international match at Brookline, then the amateur championship and later the battle for the Walker Cup over the National Links, it will be the most comprehensive international test among amateurs the game has ever known. It can be put down now that both countries will make their selections with the greatest care for what should be the most sensational golfing month written in the records.

The American entry with the best chance to get somewhere at Prestwick is John G. Anderson, who before sailing some two weeks ago had five. That clip is fast enough to anchor six successive rounds under seventy-noy any one.

WOOLLENS WIN FOOTBALL GAME

Lakefield Team Puts Up a Good Game But Fall Before the Canadian Woollens.

Lakefield played the Woollens Saturday at the Oval, and though beaten 5 to 1 the score doesn't nearly represent the run of the game. In fact Lakefield scored the first and held the Woollens for forty minutes before Shuttle evened the tally, Summers being the marksman for Lakefield. A hard and fast first half ended with the score 1 each. In the second half Summers of Lakefield was unable to resume, and thus shorthanded his team had a hard time to keep out the eager Woollen forwards ably led by Gaskell. A word of praise must be given the Lakefield players especially Aitken who played well and was in no way to blame for the goals scored against him.

Woollens got four goals this half both the Monkman's and Shuttle with Chambers getting the other from a penalty for hands given against Trude. Final Score—Woollens 5, Lakefield 1.

The players were:—

Woollens—Williams, Read, Chambers, G. Monkman, Hillman, C. Monkman, Murray, Shuttle, Gaskell, Roberts, Downes.

Referee—F. McKinley.

A FAST MAN

MAURICE ARCHDEACON.

Maurice Archdeacon will have his fling in the major leagues next season. Detroit recently purchased him, paying $15,000 and several ball players.

Archdeacon is the fastest man in baseball. Ty Cobb says that.

George Tweedy Stallings, manager of the Rochester Internationals, the club for which Archdeacon is now playing centre field, goes further than that. Stallings says Archdeacon is the fastest man that ever played baseball. Stallings has been in the game more years than he cares to tell. He has seen all the fast flyers that ever broke away from the plate for first.

AT THE CAPITOL.
TO-NIGHT
TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY

ANOTHER VICTORY FOR C.G.E. TEAM

Owls Meet Defeat at the Hands of Undefeated Electrical Footballers.

C.G.E. repeated their 2-0 win of 13th May, at King Edward Park on Saturday. 'Both teams were understrength, Owls being short of Ralston, Hardie, Burrows and Hannah, while C.G.E. were without Peel Williams, Hurrle and Gatfield. Neil Hurry playing right half for C.G.E. made a good impression.

C.G.E. won the toss and set the Owls to face a strong sun, and right off were down at McFadden's end but an offside turned them back. After three minutes Sharman netted a pass from Hurry to open the score.

Owls were the better team in the outfield at this stage but C.G.E. were the more dangerous, and in their fourth run down the field Sharman made it two, when he beat McFadden with a hard shot.

The play was very even after this, the hot sun interfering with the players. At half time the score remained unaltered. C.G.E. 2, Owls 0

Owls started off strongly in the second half and had some likely shots stopped by Griffin, who was playing at top form. A free kick for the Owls, just outside the penalty area, looked dangerous for the C.G.E. but Burgess, who took the kick shot over. Play fell off a bit towards the close, some of the players seeming to think that the best place to put the ball was in touch. Bartley and Sharman giving fancy touches to the play. Final score—C.G.E. 2, Owls 0.

The players were:—

C.G.E.—Griffin, Lupton, Parkins, Hurry, McMillan, House, Manders, Monks, Dyer Sharman and Bartley.

Owls—McFadden, Frost, Hosker, "Wag" Hotston, Turner, Edwards, Burgess, Hutton, Willis, Bills and Ted Hotston.

Referee—J. L. Howarth.

ROSE TO PITCH FOR ELECTRICS.

Big Game of Local League With Raybestos as the Opposition.

Canadian Generals and Raybestos provide the baseball entertainment at Riverside Park tomorrow evening with an intermediate series game, starting at six o'clock. Look out for fuss and feathers. Canadian Generals had to extend themselves, and throw two pitchers in one battle to get a decision over Y.M.C.A. on the holiday, while Raybestos had an easy time defeating Classics. Willow-wielding is a strong point with the Raybestos crew, which means that the Electricians will use Ray Rose on the mound for the game tomorrow evening. A big crowd of fans will see the contest.

Juveniles Wednesday.

Lakeviews and Maple Leafs of the juvenile series play at Riverside Park on Wednesday evening at six o'clock. Lakeviews will be minus Whitlow, LeBarr and Ash, who are being reserved for the junior race. Maple Leafs have added several players who will strengthen the team. This is the series whre the youngsters are developed, and the games are always marked by smart fielding.

Lakefield and Keene will play a league game at Keene on Wednesday evening. The game is billed to start at six o'clock.

Maple Leafs and King Edward School seniors will play an exhibition game at the school grounds at 5.30 o'clock this evening.

MINERS STILL FAR FROM AGREEMENT.

CALGARY, May 29.—(Canadian Press)—Coal operators and representatives of the miners in district number 18 held another session Saturday on the suggestion of W. E. Knowles, K.C., Chairman of the Conciliation Board with the object of endeavoring to arrive at some amicable settlement.

"We are further away than ever" was the remark of William Potter, one of the members of the mine's committee, when asked what progress had been made. From this statement it would appear that there are many obstacles to be overcome before an agreement is reached. Failing this, as previously mentioned the board will procced to make its findings.

AT THE THEATRES

CAPITOL—Most sensational and beautiful screen spectacle ever shown, "Queen of Sheba," love romance of the most beautiful woman who ever lived. Also Snub Pollard comedy.

ROYAL—Richard Bathelmess featured as David Kinemon in "Tol'able David," a romance staged and filmed in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia. A First National selection. Also comedies.

REGENT—Wm. S. Hart in "The Whistle" and Will Rogers in "An Unwilling Hero." A very special programme.

AT THE ROYAL.

Those who read theatre news in the Toronto papers know that Richard Barthelmess was the main attraction in that city last week. To-night we present that popular actor in a First National feature, entitled "Tol'able David," which is the play that established him as a star. This is a virile and romantic story laid amid the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia. The characters played are those found among the sturdy, honest, but quick-tempered mountaineers. The plot shows how a young dweller of the mountains avenges his father's death, caused by newcomers to his remote part of the world, and also wins the hand and heart of his sweetheart.

Constance Talmadge, confessedly the leading comedienne of filmdom, appears in a feature picture called "Good Intentions." This is a delicious comedy-romance that is beautifully staged, in which romance, emotion, and fun vie with one another in holding attention of the onlooker. The plot is based on a girl's winning a position as secretary to a society woman in New York by forged references. It was only after she secured the position and made good that she learned her references which obtained the position were forged. An irresistibly funny comedy of the highest kind.

Then there is a Mack Sennett comedy, in two reels, called "The Duck Hunter." When we mention that Billy Bevan plays the leading part, that is "'nuf sed!"

The Royal is electrically cooled and the air is constantly changed, so that comfort of an audience in the hottest weather is assured.

Capitol Entertainment

The World's Greatest Motion Picture, "The Queen of Sheba," at the Capitol To-night. First Time at Popular Prices.

Visions of the Orient—of barbaric splendor, of gorgeous settings and rare exotic perfumes — everything that appeals to the eye and the senses, together with a story that finds its origin in the Bible, help to make the vehicle in which Betty Blythe is at her best, a film that stands out above hundreds of others, even in this industry which present something new, with the rapidity of a genii. Miss Blythe, will spell "Sheba," to moveing picture patrons, for many a long moon. No matter what else she may do afterwards it will take a good while to forget, the woman who gave Solomon, so many worrisome days and sleepless nights. The Bible story of the wise King and the splendid Queen from a distant country, means to many commentators a tale which has taken on recently something of legendary vagueness. It is quite certain that a powerful female ruler did visit him and caused all kinds of trouble at his court— but whether she was the predecessor of the Queen, as Betty Blythe portrays her, is a mooted question. She was anxious to find out for herself the true state of affairs in Judea, and she proved herself the courageous female she was by starting out on a journey which might appal some of her voting descendants. However, Solomon was "Sport Royal" and the results probably proved worth the effort. The film version of the familiar story, is considered by many to be unrivalled in the realm of artistic and correct settings—nothing was spared in the way of expense to make the production the very best possible and the service of artists, men of letters and even scientists were called upon by the director and property man. If you want to see something almost as good as a trip to the East, to the land of romance and ancient glory, see Betty Blythe and "The Queen of Sheba" at the Capitol Theatre to-night.

AT THE REGENT.

LET HART FANS REJOICE!

Popular Paramount Star to be Seen Here in "The Whistle."

The big armyof Willim S. Hart fans have cause to rejoice! Their favorite is coming, in another virile vehicle in which his fistic ability is displayed to the utmost. The new Paramount starring vehicle s "The Whistle," a rattling story of life in a manufacturing town in New England. It will be shown at the Regent Theatre to-day. Mr. Hart has the role of a mill foreman who fights for the rights of the mill, and for protection against accidents, and when his own son is killed in an unguarded shafting, he plans cengeance against his negligent employer. He saves the child of the mill owner from drowning and disappears with the infant whom he rears as his own son in order to "make him jump at the sound of the whistle." But when a good woman, the mother of the boy, enters his life, his scheme is abandoned. Myrtle Steadman is leading woman.

The art of making artificial eyes was known in Egypt as early as 500 B.C.

MOVIE MAN HAD A BIG CONTRACT.

Prize-Winners in Jackie Coogan Contest at the Capital Theatre.

The Capitol Theatre on Saturday morning was filled with ambitious aspirants for the prizes offered to the most successful imitators of "Jackie Coogan," the clever little actor in the "My Boy" picture. Some twenty feminine and masculine reproductions were on hand, with the ragged attire, the heavy peaked cap, and visible braces of the original 'Jackie."

The Toronto man in charge of the moving picture machine which took their pictures for screening next week, had a wonderful time arranging the small things in line, and then getting individual "shots" of them.

One little boy cried so hard and made such a fuss that he had to be taken out altogether, and lost the chance of his lifetime to appear in a real moving picture.

Winners of the large dolls representing "Jackie" which were given as prizes, were:

1, Jessie Scholey; 2, Olga Wright; 3, Norma Paquette; with a smaller doll given to every child competing.

OBITUARY

CHARLES DREDGE.

George Dredge, 339 London Street, received word to-day of the death of his father, Charles Dredge, in Edmonton.

Deceased was in his 80th year.

Funeral notice later.

AGNES BRENNAN.

At two o'clock yesterday morning, Sunday, the 28th, the death occurred at St. Joseph's Hospital, of Miss Agnes Brennan of Marysville. The deceased, who was in her twenieth year, succumbed to pneumonia after an illness of ten days' duration.

A student at the Normal school here, she had just completed her preparation for a teaching career, her untimely death cutting off in its beginning a promising young future. She was a general favorite with her teachers and classmates, her amiable, gentle disposition and bright intellect making her a host of friends in the city. The Normal students and members of the Sodality of St. Peter's church visited in a body yesterday at the home of Mr. Martin McFadden, Elm street, where the remains were brought from the hospital, and many beautiful floral emblems testified to the esteem in which the young girl was held.

Requiem Mass for the departed was sung at St. Peter's Cathedral this morning by Rev. P. Costello. The remains were taken to-day, via Port Hope, for interment on Wednesday morning at Marysville.

Household Suggestions

WRAPPING PAPER

Keep the wrapping paper in which your material comes from down town stores. You'll find good use for it—such as laying out on wet kitchen floors and wrapping various articles for storage.

Cleaning Taffeta.

If you would clean the taffeta frock soak it in water in which two tablespoons of salt have been dissolved. Then wash it in luke warm water and good soap. Add half a teaspoon of borax to the rinsing water to stiffen the silk. Lift from the rinsing water and hang on the line without wringing. Press on the wrong side before quite dry.

Laundering Pongee.

Following laundering, pongee is often spotted and unsightly. This is the result of ironing the fabric while it is damp. Pongee, if it is to look its loveliest, should be dry before being ironed.

Save Threads.

If the threads which are pulled out of the table linen which is being made ready for hemstitching are wound on a spool and saved they can be used for mending worn linens. Such threads are better for mending linen than ordinary cotton thread.

BREAD KNIFE

A saw-edged bread knife is being sold. It has been found to cut fresh bread more easily than the regular straight-edged knife.

RUBBER GLOVES

Many housewives use rubber gloves when washing dishes. That keeps their hands dry, and prevents their fingers rom becoming lined and chapped.

DISH RAGS

Dish rags should never be kept wet when not in use. They should be washed out after using and hung up to dry. Otherwise they become fatty and spongy. They should be changed often.

BUTTER

Housewives have become so accustomed to thinking of butter as being yellow in colour, that they shy away from white butter. For this reason, at certain times of the year, some dairymen have to color their butter in order to sell it.

RHINESTONE BAG.

A very novel handbag is a pouch shaped affair that looks much like a beaded bag until a close examination reveals that it is made entirley of small rhinestones.

COLOR COMBINATION.

A tiffin table, painted a soft French blue, sports a tea set of canary yellow china, with a medallion design in black.

FOR GIRDLES.

A PUBLIC APPEAL FOR ASSISTANCE

Fire Victims Are in Destitute Circumstances — Bedding Wanted.

Th fire a day or two ago, at 500 Gilchrist Street, that destroyed the entire household furnishings, along with the dwelling, has left Mrs. Margaret Thompson practically destitute. Everything she had, including clothing, etc., went up in smoke.

Mrs. Thompson is the widow of an Imperial soldier (Andrew Thompson) of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, who was killed while on active service. She has the usual British pension for herself and her children, but the sum per month is quite inadequate to even assist in meeting the conditions in which she now finds herself.

Several friends who appreciate her circumstances are asking for contributions of used articles to get the family (there are four children) into some sort of a shelter and equipped for the time being.

So, willl people who have a heart, and som: things that can be spared, kindly send to or advise the War Veterans' staff, and all will be thankfully received. Bedding, beds, chairs and tables, in fact, anything that will answer the purpose, will be received.

Kindly telephone, and instructions will be given to have the things called for, if the donor cannot deliver them.

INDUSTRIAL LIFE OF B.C. AT STAKE

Affected by Working of Crow's Nest Pass Pact

OTTAWA, May 29.— The industrial life of British Columbia is absolutely at stake on the issue now before this committee, said Premier Oliver of British Columbia in his argument at the enquiry on transportation costs this morning, especially with respect to the coming into effect of the Crow's Nest Pass agreement, which he is opposing.

He filed a number, of schedules showing that on some commodities the return of the Crow's Nest scale would mean a discrimination in rates against British Columbia running from fifty to over two hundred per cent. These included grain, flour, implements, fresh fruits and furniture. Reminding the committee that Mr. Beatty and Mr. Hanna had estimated that great loss in revenue would result to the railways, Premier Oliver said: "The statements appeal to my reason to have some force, I am prepared to discount these statements by fifty per cent. and they still would be a matter for very serious consideration.' He also contended that the coming into effect of the agreement would make it impossible for Parliament to give British Columbia the reductions required, while the nation would also have to meet the increased deficit on the railways if the latter decided to reduce rates on basic commodities so as to square them with the Crow's Nest Pass scale.

Premier Oliver also contended that the decision of the Railway Commission, which had been inquiring into the rates question for some months, should have ben placed before the committee before it began its sessions, it being the only body competent to deal with the question of the real effect of the Crow's Nest agreement.

COMPLIMENTED P. C. I. CADETS FOR SMARTNESS

Lt.-Col. G. H. Gillespie Praises Battalion for Maintaining Its High Standard of Efficiency

NEW GROUP GAMES

Under propitious weather conditions the inspection of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute cadets by Lt.-Col. G. H. Gillespie of Kingston, came off in snappy style yesterday afternoon and the inspecting officer complimented the battalion on its smart appearance. The manoeuvre, which started about 2.30, were not over until late in the afternoon. Battalion, company and platoon drill was held, the machine gunners gave a smart exhibition and the bugle band supplied martial music. The number of spectators was not large, possibly due to the absence of adequate seating accommodation. The staff of the Institute, and practically all the co-eds were among those present.

Officers All On Hand.

The inspection was threatened with disaster earlier in the day by the suspension of several of the officers who came from out of town, for nonpayment of fees, but the difficulty was settled before inspection, and the officers were on hand.

High Standard of Efficiency.

When the inspection was concluded Lt.-Col. Gillespie showed several new group games to the cadets and for fifteen minutes provided a lot of fun with some of the younger boys. A square was then formed and he addressed the Battalion. "I am glad the battalion is going ahead and maintaining its high standard of efficiency," said the inspecting officer.

He remarked that he had noticed numerous medals for proficiency in rifle shooting on the boys' breasts, and he congratulated them on the extent to which they had take up shooting here. "I just want to say I am greatly pleased to learn this corps is doing so well in rifle shooting." As Peterborough came second in the King's Trophy shooting last year, he expected that this year they would head the list.

All In Uniform Next Year.

The inspecting officer regretted that the cadets were not all in uniform, but he assured them it was not their fault. On the whole the showing was good and next year under the new arrangement of the government the corps will be fully uniformed. In regard to the machine gun drill, he said that the boys made as good a showing as the R.M.C. cadets, and that he assured them that was saying something.

A Good Band.

Peterborough was fortunate in possessing a good band and he particularly referred to the addition of trumpets. He hoped the corps would always be able to maintain a good band. The ambulance section, he said, had acquitted themselves splendidly. He was glad to learn that they had come second in the St. John's Ambulance competition.

Some Weakness.

The march past in column platoon was well done, he said, but in regard to several other movements there was room for improvement. He announced that this year there would be no cadet camp. "I am very sorry for that. Indeed I am just as sorry as you. We had expected every cadet at Barriefield this year and had made splendid arrangements for a big camp." They had planned with the athletic commission for a fine athletic programme and had even gone so far as to get Walter Knox to take charge of things, he said.

Physical Training.

Lt.-Col. Gillespie here emphasized the importance of physical training, and commended the Royal Military College as an institution where physical and mental training was stressed. "It behooves every young man to take a certain amount of physical training, whether at school or not. If everyone would just take up five minutes' physical training a day they would always keep fit and moreover keep young," he remarked.

Presented Medals.

An interesting part of the afternoon's proceedings was the presentation of the St. John's ambulance prizes to the tow teams that came first and second place in the proficiency tests. Those wining medals were: Team No. 1—Robert Fowler, captain, Allan Neal, Frank Taylor, William Yelland and Alvin Yelland. Team No. 2—William Breyfogle, captain, Ross Thompson, Don Joran, Ray Allen and Ernest Elliott.

The Officers.

The officers of the corps who had charge of the inspection follow:

Officer Commanding, Cadet Lt.-Col. R. Breyfogle; Adjutant, Captain F. White; Quartermaster, Captain T. Miller; Musketry Instructor, Captain R. Sherlin, Captain K. Greene; Ambulance Officer, Captain R. Fowler, Lieut. W. Breyfogle.

Women Need the Help of the Men

VANCOUVER, B.C., May 30. — (Canadian Press).—Addressing the Canadian Club here last night, Miss Joan Arnoldi, President of the I.O.D.E., declared that women needed the help of men. "If they are to become good citizens," she said, "you must act as our elder brothers in the school of life. We want your sympathy and assistance, not your criticism.

"Most of us know that we must look to you for help. Not that we think you have made such a great fist of running the country, but you are all we have to look up to."

ALBANIANS PAY A TAX ON BEDS

And Biblical Tithe is Still Chief Source of Revenue.

TIRANA, Albania, May 30.—(Associated Press)—The Biblical tithe is the chief source of Albanian revenue, and has constituted until the present time a 'singe tax' policy A new fiscal policy is being introduced and prominent among the many items proposed for taxation are beds, for in this primitive country a bed is regarded as a luxury.

The origin here of the tithe can be traced to the Turks, who for centuries have collected it from the people of Albania. It being a simple method of levying and a circumstance to which all the inhabitants had become accustomed, it was adopted by the new independent government as a means of revenue. The new government, however, has not found it a very productive kind of tax because of the ability with which the taxpayers are able to conceal their incomes. So skillful are the inhabitants in evading a large share of the tithe, that new methods of taxation are being put into effect

"The tithe is still our chief source of revenue", said Kol Thaci, Alabanian Minister of Finance, to the correspondent of The Associated Press. "We depend upon it for the current expenses of the government but we find that it does not render sufficient return to let our taxing stop there. We are already planning a new scheme of taxation. It is proposed to place a tax on beds for to us the bed is an absolute necessity. Our people have been used for centuries to sleeping on the floor and continue to do so to this day. Today we see that beds are gradually being introduced by those who can afford them so we are proposing to place a tax on these beds as an article of luxury."

GOOD BUSINESS AWAITS CANADA IN WEST INDIES

NO TRADE RISK

Rotarian Reg. H. Turner described his experiences in the West Indies with the Canadian Manufacturers' party on their nine weeks' trip, to the Kiwanis Club to-day, and the sidelights given on conditions there proved interesting.

Rotarian Turner recommended the trip from a pleasure and a business standpoint, and he pointed out that opportunities for Canadian business are good. Personal representation, he felt, was necessary to sell the goods. Trinidad was using 90 per cent. Canadian flour and 80 per cent. of the fish sold came from Canadian waters.

On account of the slump in the sugar trade, 1921 was a bad year in the islands, but the prospect is better this year.

"I believe 1922 will be a better year than 1921," he said. "We heard in many places that Canada was not buying all the West Indies produce she might. They complained particularly that she was not buying enough sugar. I believe now, however, the Government has taken steps to encourage the West Indian sugar trade."

Wonderful Trip.

"It was a wonderful trip, and well worth while. I think one may say we came back primed with information, and ready to do business. You need not worry about the risk in doing business there. The firms are reliable, and you need only use the same caution as in business in this country."

Rotarian Turner said that everywhere they went the party was received with great hospitality. On all the islands the Chambers of Commerce, Government, and different societies provided a continuous round of dinners and entertainments.

In addition to visiting the islands, the party touched at Panama, Venezuela, and British Guiana.

In Demerara, British Guiana, Rotarian Turner declared that on account of there being no market for Demerara rum, the finest in the world, it was being poured into the gutters. In fact, on all the islands there was no scarcity of liquid beverages. The Canadian Merchant Marine service on which they travelled he described as the only dry fleet in the world.

Dr. Graham McDougall presided at to-day's luncheon.

John Meyers, pointed out by Gray Copping as one of the oldest members in point of years, but as young in spirit as any, was booster.

The fortunates to-day were Walter Lacey, Dr. Joe Middleton, and D. C. Grant.

Opening of Dining Hall.

It was decided to-day to let the executive decide when the official opening and presentation of the dining hall at Jackson Park will take place. On Friday evening at 6.30, the finishing touches will be put on A large number to-day volunteered to be on hand.

Following a baseball practice last night, at which pretty fair form was displayed, the members as a whole were in high fettle to-day, and ready to meet anything.

C. R. Widdifield lost no time in challenigng the Lindsay club, and they will be asked to meet the Petes next week. The Kiwanis and Rotary will clash on Thursday next.

"That will be just a practice," said one unusually cocky member.

Dr. John Craig, who is reported to be holding down the backstop position, called out all the players for a workout on Nicholls Oval on Thursday evening.

MUSICAL CRITICS HERE TO-NIGHT

Writers on Toronto Papers Here for Initial Performance of Mr. Asa Huycke's Light Opera

It has been learned on good authority that musical critics representing the Toronto Saturday Night, Toronto Globe and Telegram will be here to witness the initial performance of Mr. Asa Huycke's light opera, "The Message of the Bluebird." There was a fine dress rehearsal last night and the three acts were run through with a surprising smoothness. Everything is all ready from the overture to the last chorus. Just one final word, don't miss this, and to-night's the night.

Real Cave Man Wooer Gets Swift Justice in an Atlantic City Court

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., May 30.—Jersey justice moved with accustomed swiftness to-day in the case of Frank Rooney, 31, a laborer, who attempted caveman courting tactics. He was arrested, arraigned before Acting Recorder Joseph A. Corlo and within twenty minutes was on his way to serve ninety days in the county jail at May's Landing.

According to Rooney, who has not been in the United Staes long, a fellow-employee told him that this was a free country and that he could have any girl he saw on the street merely by going up and throwing his arms around her and saying, "I want you to be my wife.'

Full of hope, Rooney sallied forth looking for a girl to his fancy. He discovered one answering the specifications just at the entrance of City Hall. Without hesitation or preliminary approach he darted forward, and, throwing his arms around the comely young woman, announced:

"You are mine. I want you to be my wife."

Quite overcome, the girl shrieked. An officer heard her and arrested Rooney. Rooney told the Recorder that after he had served the sentence the first man he wanted to meet was the one who had given him his instructions.

PRODUCE SKULL ON A WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS

MURDER MYSTERY

NEW YORK, May 30. — The identification of the Rockland County skull as that of Miss Lillian White, former inmate of Letchworth Village, near Thiells, N. Y., was upheld by Justice Arthur S. Tompkins sitting in the special term of the Supreme Court at Nyack, before whom the skull of the writ is believed to have set a precedent, according to Mrs. Mary Hamilton, New York City policewoman, whose investigation led to the identification of theskull as that of Miss White, who had been missing from Letchworth Village since last Fall.

When Mrs. Hamilton returned to New York she said she was extremely gratified that Justice Tompkins had affirmed the identification made after the skull had been reconstructed in plaster and wax by former Police Captain Grant Williams of the Missing Persons Bureau. The identificaton of the skull was rejected by the Rockland County Grand Jury several days ago following an investigation directed by District Attorney Morton Lexow.

"District Attorney Lexow must now make a thorough investigation of the disappearance of Lillian White', said Mrs. Hamilton. "A murder was committed and if the Rockland County authorities fail to make an investigation after Justice Tompkins was upheld the identification of the skull I will lay the whole case before the Attorney General.

Writ Obtained by Relatives

The writ on which the skull was produced before Justice Tompkins was obtained on behalf of relatives of Miss White, desiring to get possession of the skull and the rest of skeleton for burial. The court awarded the remains to the relatives The skelton was found at a lonely spot on Cheesecock Mountain early last month.

The skull was produced in court by Coroner Edward Stahlmann, of Spring Valley, pursuant to the writ obtained by Mrs. Pasquale Capertino, of 14 Bergen Street, Brooklyn a sister of the missing girl. The rest of the skeleton had been interred.

Copies of the writ were served upon Dr. Charles Little, Superintendent of Letchworth Village for the Feeble Minded, Coroner Stahlmann and District Attorney Morton Lexow of Rockland County, requiring the officials to produce Lillian White, if alive, or her skeleton, if she was dead, in court.

When the restored skull was brought into court it was placed on a table at the side of the court stenographer, where Justice Tompkins and the witnesses were enabled to view the features from different angles.

The plastic likeness of Miss White, with the hair bound by a strip of ribbon was compared in turn with the features of Mrs. Capertino, Mrs. Rose Barnes and John White, sisters and brother of Lillian White. Former Captain Williams produced photographs of the skull taken before and after he undertook its enthnical reconstruction. Pictures of Miss White were also furnished the Court.

Says He Used no Photographs.

Captain Williams testified, and he later was corroborated by Mrs. Hamilton, that he reconstructed the girl's head without the aid of any photographic or other likeness of Miss White, and made no change supplied with a photograph of the missing girl, save for the addition of the bandeau of ribbon suggested by a photograph.

Phone Transmits From Throat

The operator at the new "aerial lighthouse" at College Point, N.Y., wears the most novel radiophone headgear in existence. Not only are the earpieces encased in leather, for sound efficiency, but the transmitter is attached to the throat by a band around the neck. This "mouthpiece" picks up the vibrations of the vocal cords through the muscle and membrane of the throat.

VETS. DRUMMED OUT 5 SUSPECTS

The Result of Riley's Army's Fear of Spies

GANANOQUE, May 30.—(Special to The Examiner).—The unemployed veterans decided to dispense with their flying advance guard at a meeting here Monday night. They discovered that it was the Provincial Police who were responsible for all the arrangements for food along the line. The motor cyclists of the advance guard whose movements were much criticized were given the opportunity of marching in the ranks the rest of the way, but, strangely enough, they both had urgent private affairs to take them home. This morning they are beating a retreat into the city.

As a result of the army's continual fear of spies, they decided to drum out five suspects. While Riley, their leader, was denouncing the work of the sleuths in a fiery speech, two of them, accused of belonging to ex-service organizations, slipped out. The other three got a ceremonial dismissal before the assembled army this morning.

Thirty-four miles, including a night march into Brockville, is today's routine. The column left here at 7.30, and it is proceeding out fourteen miles, where the men will lunch along the road. There they will bivouac until 10 p.m., and then march all night. However, there has been a proposal to get motor cars from Brockville people to decide whether they are to walk or ride.

LENNOX APPEARS BEFORE COMMITTEE

TORONTO, May 30. Canadian Press. — T. H. Lennox, M.L.A., North York, before the Public Accounts Committee to-day, took up the charges he had made in the Legislature in connection with the enforcement of the O.T.A. and declared that he had made them because he appreciated the serious sentences which followed conviction of violation of the law. He submitted the names of men who had been convicted of crime while in the employ of the government.

He denied that he had given Frank Budway money for information but stated that he had given him $20 because he was out of work.

In connection with the Sutton raid he refused to withdraw charge that it was a "frame up" to "get" him.

THE PRICELESS HERITAGE OF A HEALTHY BODY

Dr. Bruce Robertson Talks to Local Rotarians on the Cure of Crippled Children.

WARDS OF CLUB

The priceless heritage of a sound body was emphasized to the Rotary Club and its guests last night at a lecture and demonstration at the Empress Hotel by Dr. Bruce Robertson, of the staff of the Sick Children's Hospital, Toronto, founded by his uncle, John Ross Robertson, of the Evening Telegram.

Dr. Robertson outlined the work being done at the hospital, and made his talk practical by pointing out how deformities in several crippled children brought before him last night might be corrected. These children are wards of the club in this regard and W. R. Breyfogle said that the club has some 20 or 23 children listed who need treatment, and that the club has pledged itself to see that proper treatment is given.

Large Attendance.

The dining room of the Empress Hotel was filled with Rotarians and their guests. President John Crane presided. Between the president, Rev. Harold Young, Chris. Graham and other notables the proceedings were kept in a progressive and mirth-provoking state. Calls for music were frequent and exceded to, The bachelors' group was called upon once or twice for choruses and eventually developed quite a tone. The ladies, however, for not having any previous workouts, acquitted themselves beyond all others. In the legitimate numbers, Robert Brown was given a prominent place, and it is likely that the club will often have the pleasure of hearing him as last night he was among the list of new members.

Boys' Camp Started.

President Crane announced that the concert of the Scots' Guard Band here netted the club $152.43 after all accounts had been paid. Past President Fred Roy pointed out that the boys' camp was definitely started. Five members went up to the site on Saturday and unloaded the lumber off the scows. T. Ephgrave struck the levels and got the posts in, and also the lower sills on the building. The start was a satisfactory one. In connection with the camp the president announced that Andrew Brown was appointed a transportation manager, and on him rested the responsible duty of seeing that the boys got to and from the camp. He gave Rotarian Brown full authority to commandeer Rotary drivers and cars. To draw up camp rules and provide for the general policy to be adopted the following were appointed to work with G. A. Macdonald: J. M. McHardy, Claude Rogers and C. E. Smith.

Presentation to Fred Roy.

An interesting part of the programme last night that preceded the talk by Dr. Robertson was the presentation of a splendid lunch kit to past president, Fred Roy. Referring to Rotarian Roy's services President Crane said that it was principally through his efforts and courage that the club had been started and kept going for the first and always most difficult year. He expressed the hope that the members would not lose sight of the pioneer work of Fred Roy. The presentation was a complete surprise. Past President Roy assured the members of the club that if he had done anything for Rotary, it had done a great deal more for him.

Eight new members were installed by H. R. H. Kenner. Rotarian Kenner put the candidates through a unique examination, in which the answers, however, were of such a uniformly correct nature as to lead one member to allege "it was a frame-up." In charging the members Rotarian Kenner placed before them the high principles and ideals that must always serve as their guide. The new members received were: T. Barrie, Gerald Wood, Jack Primeau, Percy Hooper, Fred Case, Robert Brown, Fred Hodgson and Hugh Bertram.

Godspeed.

The president extended to Jack Seels and Dr. N. D. Buchanan, who left to-day for Los Angeles convention the wishes of the club for a safe and happy journey, and Rotarian Seels promised to tell what a live club there was in Peterborough wherever he goes.

Crippled Children.

Dr. Robertson showed a large number of lantern slides illustrating typical cases of the common deformities that are divided into the two groups of acquired and congenital cases. He stated that tuberculosis of the bones and joints was a frequent condition that required careful, specific and patient treatment. Good food, fresh air, sunshine and rest are important to secure a cure, he said. He showed the effect of infantile parlysis in children.

POLICE SEARCHING FOR ROY CHERRETT

RECENTLY MARRIED

After positively identifying as Mrs. Agnes Cherrett, 224 Rubidge Street, the woman who was found drowned above the Peterborough Lock Monday morning, the police were to-day trying to locate her son, Roy Cherrett, who had gone out with her to visit a friend on Sunday night about 9 o'clock, and hadn't since returned home.

Investigations by Detective Meagher and P. C. Carey disclosed the fact that neither the mother nor the son had called upon the friends for whose house they are said to have set out in bright and normal spirits. And while several possible constructions were being placed upon the absence of the son, the police were informed yesterday evening thrat he had been seen crossing the Hunter Street Bridge Monday afternoon about 1.30 o'clock.

Chief Newhall, in discussing this mysterious case, said that the man who had reported having seen Roy Cherrett was entirely reliable, but the possible explanation in that direction lacked until this afternoon any corroboration.

Dragged the River.

Detective Meagher indicated one of the official theories in regard to the absence of the young man by taking charge of the dragging of the river yesterday afternoon from the upper gate of the lock to the Keene road and G.T.R. bridges. It is thought possible that Mr. Cherrett may have taken the midnight train out of Peterboro, but this thought raises the question as to why he should not have taken into his confidence his young wife, to whom he was married a few months ago.

Mrs. Cherrett, Jr., was only recently home from the hospital, where she underwent an operation for appendicitis, from the effects of which she has not yet fully recovered. She told the police that about nine o'clock Sunday night Roy had called upstairs that he and his mother were going out to call on a friend of the family, whom he named. He seemed to be in a bright and cheerful mood, and Mrs. Cherrett remarked that he was even in lighter spirits than usual.

The Wife Informed.

Neither mother nor son visited the house of their friend, and neither returned home. Mrs. Roy Cherrett, who has had her sister with her recently, was unacquainted of the tragedy that had fallen upon the family until late in the afternoon, when the police, accompanied by Rev. Robert Pogue and Dr. Carmichael, broke the news as guardedly and lightly as they could.

Earlier in the day Mrs. Cherrett admitted to the police that there had been a disagreement between her husband and herself, but this admission was not pressed or emphasized by the investigators.

No Delay at Station.

A report yesterday that the first announcement of the finding of Mrs. Cherrett's body by the lockmaster had been delayed by trouble in getting the Police Station by telephone was denied as far as any remissness at the Police Station was concerned. Chief Newhall asserted that Sergeants Wigg and Deannard were changing their shifts at that hour, and the telephone call was answered immediately. If there was any delay it was at some other point in the telephone system. P. C. Carey made the trip to the Locks in barely four minutes.

Chief Newhall has called attention to the fact that the body was not removed from the water when discovered. There is no legal objection in such cases to lifting a body out on to the bank, and in this instance there was some opinion that life might not have been extinct when the lockmaster made the discovery. It was said that blood had trickled from a small wound on the forehead made by the grappling pole, and

OPEN MEETING OF HUMANE SOCIETY

Public Invited to Be Present in Council Chamber Tonight.

Attention is called to the open meeting of the local Humane Society in the Council Chamber at 8 o'clock this evening, when the question of appointing an inspector will be discussed.

The practical interest shown in the work of this organization on its tag day encourages the hope that the public will generally respond to the invitation extended them to attend this meeting. For the inculcation of humane principles and their enforcement are matters which should find whole-hearted sympathy and co-operation in this community generally.

Those who have not yet realized the importance of a Humane Society may, by being present on this occasion, learn the scope of and need for the society's activities, while all will be given opportunity to enroll as members of a Peterborough institution which aims at seeing to it that no living creature at the mercy of many shall be subjected to either thoughtless or wanton cruelty.

Let there be a bumper gathering at this humane meeting to-night, the result of which should be not only the appointment of an inspector, but a strengthening of the local organization—morally and practically—in the interest of a cause which finds a commanding place in all Christian and progressive communities the civilized world over.

Officials of Letchworth Village and District Attorney Lexow informed the Court that they did not wish to oppose the desire of the White sisters and brother to obtain the skull for burial, if it could be proved that the identification was positive. They said they could not give assurance that the skull was that of any known person.

Justice Tompkins sustained the writ and ordered the skull turned over to Mrs. Capertino. The order also entitles the relatives of Miss White to exhume the rest of the skelton.

When Mrs. Hamilton was placed on the stand she testified that the skeleton was believed by some of the authorities to have been that of a Swedish girl who disappeared from a construction camp near Letchworth Village. This theory, she said had been disproved by the discovery that the missing Swedish girl was alive.

FATAL QUARREL OVER SUIT CASE.

Newly Arrived Settler is Shot By Homesteader After Disagreement Over Personal Property.

EDMONTON, May 30. Canadian Press. — J. C. Bosserman, formerly a professor of music in Edmonton, and now a homesteader at Rocky Rapids, 40 miles south of Entwhistle, shot and killed Lewis Davies, a Welshman and returned soldier only in Canada six weeks during a quarrel Saturday night over the possession of a suit case and a broad axe. Bosserman gave himself up to the police and is being given a preliminary hearing to-day at Entwhistle. But little is known of Davies, save that he was a widower. Bosserman has a wife and family at his homestead where the shooting occurred.

FOREST FIRES ARE RAGING IN WEST.

A Heavy Wind Threatens Much Property Loss in British Columbia Forests

PRINCE GEORGE, B. C., May 30.—(Canadian Press.)—There were serious forest fires on the east side of Prince George yesterday. A heavy wind quickened outbreaks which had been smouldering for the past two days and nearly all the country along the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific between here and Griscome is on fire. It is feared that several sawmills, which were getting ready for operation, may be wiped out.

The forestry department has taken out a special train with eighty men to fight the fires. There are large quantities of ties and logs in the area where the fires are running, which represent the winter's logging, and unless the fire is promptly checked the damage will be greater than in any previous year in this section.

WOULD NOT HANG A CAT ON EVIDENCE OF THE SPOTTERS

Montreal Judge Does Not Favor Using "Blackmailers and Liars" as Temperance Detectives.

APPEAL MAINTAINED.

MONTREAL, May 30. Canadian Press. — "The Quebec Liquor Commission is doing good work in the province, and if possible, should be sustained in every way. It must necessarily employ parties of doubtful character to make cases; but on the evidence of these self-constituted detectives, blackmailers and liars I would not hang a cat."

Mr. Justice Ducles spoke with the foregoing emphasis yesterday when delivering judgment in the Superior Court maintaining the appeal of Antoine Caron from a conviction condemning him to one month's imprisonment at Hull for having sold alcoholic liquor contrary to the Quebec Liquor Act.

SETTLEMENT OF EX-SERVICE MEN IS BIG SUCCESS

Col. L. C. Amery Would Like Agreement By Which British Dominions Would Encourage Immigration.

NEW MOVEMENT.

LONDON, May 30.— (Canadian Press.)—Col. L. C. Amery, secretary to the Board of Admiralty, speaking at Stratford last night, expressed the hope that when the Empire Settlement bill became law the British government would be able to reach an agreement with the governments of the Dominion regarding schemes for sharing in the cost of transportation of emigrants and also for settling the emigrants on the land, which was essential preliminary to any great flow of miscellaneous migration to the dominions. Col. Amery said he hoped the new emigration movement wold take youths out of blind-alley occupations. He said that the settlement of ex-service men in the Dominions had been in the main, an immense success.

WHAT HAS RUSSIA FOR EXPORT TRADE.

No Definite Statement Yet From Soviet Government.

MOSCOW May 30.—(Associated Press)—Soviet Russia's foreign trade department has no definite statement to make as to what products it has on hand for export from Russia this summer, but the departmental manager has told the correspondent that the exports of 1922 would greatly exceed those of last year.

Petroleum from the Baku fields is expected to be exported in considerable quantities, while lumber, flax and furs valued at several million dollars are already at the ports awaiting shipment.

Twenty thousand tons of petroleum have already been shipped to England. Leonid Krassin, commissar for foerign trade, recently informed the State Plan Commission that he had succeeded in breaking the oil blockade created by American and Dutch oil interests against Russian petroleum abroad was blocked by underbidding on the part of its competitors.

An Archangel dispatch to the Moscow papers declares that Archangel expects a great amount of business this year. Lumber exceeding the 1921 export is already said to be gathered in the Archangel regions for shipment. Last year Archangel's lumber exports, according to Soviet figures were valued at nearly $4,000,000.

MANY MINOR BILLS DEALT WITH BY PROVINCIAL HOUSE

Some Discussion Arises About Reducing the Size of the County Councils But No Action Taken.

O. T. A. AGAIN.

TORONTO, May 30 (Canadian Press). — A number of minor Bills were dealt with in the Legislature yesterday afternoon. The Bill introduced by the Hon. Howard Ferguson to increase the work to be done before a patent is granted on a mining claim, was voted down by the Government supporters. The Bill to incorporate co-operative credit societies went partially through the Committee of the House. The Bill which gives a wife the right to vote in municipal elections on property on which her husband is assessed, and the husband the same privilege on property assessed to his wife, went through the Committee of the House. It brought out a suggestion from the Hon. George S. Henry (York) that the Government devise some plan to reduce the size of County Councils. With the present unit basis of representation on County Councils fixed at 1,000 population, the Councils were becoming cumbersome in municipalities adjoining cities where their populations were increasing. He suggested the unit be increased to 1,500.

Hon. H. C. Nixon said one based on assessment rather than population might be fairer.

Premier Drury agreed that in some counties the Councils were too large, but did not think increasing the unit of population was a fair way of meeting it.

Not Against O.T.A.

Hon. Howard Ferguson referred to an editorial in a Toronto paper based on an assertion of Frank Budway, former O.T.A. operator, that he (Budway) understood the Conservative party had $2,500 to spend on getting evidence against the enforcement of the Ontario Temperance Act. Budway made this statement before the Public Accounts Committee.

"So far as I have any knowledge," said Mr. Ferguson, "that statement is without a tittle of foundation." He said the attitude of the Conservative members in the Legislature was not one of antagonism to the O.T.A. but to its being discredited by improper methods of enforcement.

University Act.

Premier Drury announced that the amendments to the University Act, which passed a second reading last week, would not be pressed this session, but would be turned over to a special committee to consider during the recess. This committee would would take up other questions respecting the University.

The Act respecting commercial agreements to prevent unfairness in buying and selling, will also be left over to a special committee to study.

Veterans' Club House.

Another Bill which ended its course, so far as this Legislature was concerned, was one of G. G. Halcrow (Hamilton East), which provided for the sale of the Hamilton Veterans' Club House. There has been a great deal of friction as to whether all the veterans of the Great War, whether members of the G.W.V.A. or not should have equal privileges.

Mr. Halcrow said conditions had changed since the Bill went through the committee, and it was now thought if it were left over for another year, the situation might all be straightened out satisfactorily. There was some objection to the Bill being withdrawn, but the speaker ruled that since it was a private Bill, the member who sponsored it could not be prevented from withdrawing it, if he desired. In making this rather important ruling, Speaker Parliament sai dthere was no precedent in the Canadian Parliaments, but he followed the practice in the British House.

Co-operative Societies.

The Bill sponsored by H. P. Hill (West Ottawa), which makes provision for the incorporation of Co-operative Credit Societies, was passed clause by clause by the House in committee. The Civil Service in Ottawa have organised such a society, where members take out shares, and are able to obtain small loans from it when they may find it necessary. It is expected that similar co-operative societies will be formed in manufacturing concerns, churches, lodges, etc.

A Bill very similar to the one introduced in the Legislature was passed in the House of Commons, but was thrown out by the Senate when Dominion incorporation was applied for.

Premier Drury endorsed the measure, and pointed out that a similar Bill was working out satisfactorily in the Province of Quebec.

Mining Act.

The Bill introduced by Hon. Howard Ferguson to revert to the old system of working requirements on mining claims was voted down by the Government. The Bill provided that the holder of a mining claim must do 240 days' work in the first three years.

Mr. Ferguson and Mr. Lang (Cochrane) claimed that the law at present in force was working a great injury to the north country, because under it a man could register a claim and could hold it for two years without doing any work on it further than to survey it. Even then, he could allow it to lapse, and by restaking it, hold it for another two years.

Hon. Harry Mills, Minister of Mines, strongly opposed the Bill, urging that the law introduced last year be allowed to remain in force long enough to get a fair trial. He had two leters from persons in Cobalt, urging that no change be made, and no person had asked the Department to go back to the old system, as Mr. Ferguson proposed.

Mr. Ferguson retorted that men dealing in mining claims wanted conditions as easy as possible, but it was not in the best interests of the country.

CANADA'S POSITION IN WORLD OF TRADE.

LONDON, May 30. — (Canadian Press). — Sir Charles Gordon of Montreal, who was one of the Canadian delegates to the Genoa conference addressed the parliamentary committee of he League of Nations Union last night dealing with commerce statistics which were the subject of discussion at Genoa.

Sir Charles pointed out that volume of imports and exports Canada stood fourth among the 34 nations represented at the conference. In volume of commerce per head of population Canada stood first and in export trade, third, being exceeded only by Great Britain and France.

OTTAWA, May 30. Canadian Press. — A deputation representing workmen employed on the Welland Canal was received by the Premier, Hon. W. L. MacKenzie King, last evening. The deputation, which was introduced by Tom Moore, President of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, and John Flett, represented to the Government that the terms of the Fair Wage Law were not being complied with on the Canal in that the current wages in the district were not being paid.

After hearing the spokesmen of the deputation the Premier promised that the complaints would be inquired into and that the terms of the Fair Wage Law would be carried out.

The premier was assisted in receiving the deputation by the Minister of Railways, Hon. W. C. Kennedy, and the Minister of Labor, Hon. James Murdock.

A despatch from Dublin Sunday, said the Provisional government had announced that in accordance with Article 17 of the treaty signed in London in 1921 and the schedule of the Irish Free State Agreement Act of 1922, it had been decided to summon Parliament to meet in Dublin, July 1st.

BOTTOMLEY GETS 7-YEAR SENTENCE.

The Well-Known English Editor Convicted of Misappropriating £150,000 in Ten Months.

LONDON, May 30.—(Canadian Press.)—Immediately after sentence of seven years penal servitude was passed on Horatio Bottomley yesterday he served notice that he intended to appeal.

In summing up the case, the judge in the Central Crimnal Court pointed out that the jurors must dismiss from their minds the defendan't appeal regarding work he had done for soldiers, and must consider cold facts and determine whether the money he had obtained was used fraudulently or not.

"He might well hope to repay it" the judge said, "but that is neither here nor there. There is no errand boy who steals a shilling from a till but hopes by some lucky chance to repay it."

It took the jury barely half an hour to make up its mind and return the verdict of guilty.

This is the latest of several charges of fraud that have been made against Bottomely. Years ago he figured in several notorious fraud cases, none of which, however, resulted in his conviction.

"The defendant has been rightly convicted of this long series of heartless frauds" said the court in passing sentence. "These poor people trusted him, and he robbed them of £50,000 in ten months. The crime was aggravated by the defendant's high position and the number and quality of his victims. It was also aggravated by the callous effrotery with which it was committed."

The court added that it could see no mitigation for the crime.

A remarkable scene occurred outside the court after the sentence had been pronounced. The immense crowd surrounding the Old Bailey surged after the van which was conveying Bottomley to prison, and strong police measures were required to quell the demonstration, which curiously had no vocal expresion.

Mr. Bottomley's conviction was immediately made known in a message by the judge to the Speaker of the House of Commons, who formally announced it in the House. This automatically vacates Mr. Bottomley's seat in the House for South Hackney, which constituency he served in Parliament from 1908 to 1912, and again beginning in 1918, when he was re-elcted.

LONDON NEWSPAPER 125 YEARS OF AGE.

Kelso Mail Celebrated Interesting Anniversary.

LONDON, May 30.—(Canadian Press)—An interesting newspaper anniversary that passed with little public notice was that of the Kelso Mail, which recently completed its 125th year of publication. The first printer, publisher and editor of the Kelso was James Ballantyne, founder of the Ballantyne Press, Edinburgh, and the paper was started on the advice and with the assistance of Sir Walter Scott. The noted poet and novelist was a schoolfellow of Ballantyne at the Kelso Grammar School.

The first of Sir Walter Scott's works, including first two volumes of the "Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border" were printed in the office of the Kelso Mail. For many years this was the only newspaper published between the Tyne and the Forth. Kelso is in Roxborough, Scotland.

NO DATE IS SET FOR DISCUSSION ABOUT EMBARGO

Austen Chamberlain Says Date Will Not Be Set Till After Whitsuntide Recess.

CATTLE KILLED.

LONDON, May 30.—(Canadian Press).—When asked in the House of Commons yesterday whether a date had yet been fixed for the discussion of the Canadian cattle embargo, Austen Chamberlain, government house leader replied that he was afraid he would not be able to name a date until after the Whitsuntide recess.

Another member asked whether a date would be fixed before the general election to which question no reply was returned..

Replying to a question in regard to the total animals destroyed since the outbreak of the foot and mouth disease in Great Britain, the minister of agriculture, Sir A. Griffith-Boscawen gave the followng figures 23,125 cattle of 0.35 per cent of the total herds in Great Britain; 20,908 sheep or 0.12 per cent and 9,395 pigs or 0.35 per cent.

TORONTO, May 30. — (Canadian Press).—The scheme for a tuberculosis sanitarium to care for members of the organization was endorsed yesterday by the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen at Massey Hall. The project cannot be approved until next session, but in the meantime a fund will be created by which members suffering from tuberculosis may receive funds to provide themselves with the treatment they require.

VALUE OF SHIPPING TONNAGE INCREASES.

STOCKHOLM, May 30.—(Associated Press)—Shipping tonnage is rapidly increasing in value throughout Sweden, according to the Stockholm press which comments on this fact as the most significant indication of returning optimism among shipowners.

Only a few months ago ships sold at 100 kronor (about $27) a ton. Later the price advanced to 180 kronor per ton for newly constructed ships, while now it is hard to purchase vessels at 300 kronor per ton.

The Stockholm papers see in this rapid advance fairly sure signs of brighter prospects in the business world which means that shipowners feel certain that they will soon have ample use for all their vessels.

VICTORIA PARK.

The caretaker of Victoria Park has asked The Examiner to express his appreciation of the manner in which the large crowd which attended Sunday evening's band concert conducted itself. The lawns in the lower section were respected by the vast majority of those who visited the park, and no damage was done to the turf anywhere. That is a good report, and it is to be hoped that at succeeding concerts a similar satisfactory record will be possible. This year, it should be understood, the lawn on the western half of the park is to be barred to the public, for the grass in this section has deteriorated to some extent, and a special effort is being made to improve the sward. The co-operation of the public is needed in this work, and if the people of Peterborough will look upon the park as their own property—which, of course, it is—there will be no need of Police Court proceedings to protect the lawns. The upper part of the park is a natural amphitheatre, where thousands of people can be accommodated on band concert nights, and there is no necessity of invading the lower lawns either on such occasions or at any other time. For some years these lawns have not been protected as they should have been, causing conditions which necessitate special precautions this summer. The public has made a good start, and all that is required is a continuance of the conduct shown on Sunday night to make Victoria Park a beauty spot in which every citizen will take pride.

THE ORANGEVILLE CASE.

The episode at Orangeville the other night in which a party of two hundred people subjected an Orangeville man accused of being too familiar with the wife of another resident to a treatment of tar and feathers, is not one that reflects credit upon the community. The action of the Orangeville mob differed only in degree from the conduct of a lynching party in the Southern States. In both cases the victim is condemned without a trial, in both cases the machinery of justice is ignored and the mob takes the law in its own hands. In Orangeville there were no fatal consequences, while in Texas, of course, nothing short of the death of the victim satisfies the blood lust of the crowd. But in principle Orangeville and Texas are alike. There is no justification for what happened in the Ontario town the other night. We have law courts in this Province in which we have confidence. The machinery is there to deal with the guilty and the administration of justice is such as to leave no doubt as to the punishment of those who have merited it. No circumstances can, therefore, condone the action of the men who constituted themselves judge and jury and undertook to pass and carry out a sentence upon a citizen who may or may not have been guilty of the offence charged against him. The ring-leaders, who forgot that there are laws in Ontario, should have an opportunity of studying them at closer range, and the reputation of Orangeville as a law-abiding community will not be restored until those most responsible for the outrage are haled before a magistrate. As The Toronto Globe puts it:

"If we denounce lynching in the United States, we cannot excuse the action of the mob in Orangeville. The victim may have deserved punishment, but once Judge Lynch takes the place of the courts a wide field is opened to abuse."

SPECIALISTS IN FLOWERS.

A few days ago we were talking of gardens, vegetables and flowers to a London man. In about two minutes it was evident that this Londoner was a florist, and a specialist in peonies and gladioli, says The London Advertiser.

From his pocket came a little notebook, carefully prepared. It ran according to the rows where his stuff was planted in the garden, and in all accounted for some fifty varieties of each of these splendid flowers.

He has a correspondence list a yard long, and regularly exchanges bulbs and roots with specialists all over this country, many points in United States and also in Holland, many of his gladioli being imported from the latter country.

His garden is a wonderful place. It is his workshop in spare hours, where he lives among his flowers, coaxes them along, crosses the varieties, and delves deeply into the mysterious secrets of floriculture.

He is simply following out the well-known idea that if a thing is worth doing it is worth doing well.

Mr. Man, do you ever get that much interested in your garden? You have a backyard, and every spring you have a bit of an ambition to make it look decent and respectable. Did it ever occur to you that it is just as easy to grow the best as the poorest, or the ordinary?

You dig up your plot, rush downtown and get a dozen of this, that and the other thing, and in they go. Of course, they'll grow and you get a certain amount of satisfaction out of them. But you are only dabbling, whereas you might far better invest a little more time, a little more care, and start and specialize in something worth while.

It is an education, and a delightful relaxation at the same time. Better think it over next time you are planning for your summer garden.

THE LEGISLATURE'S BONUS.

The members of the Legislature in offering the length of the session as a justification for the bonus of $600, which is to be added to their sessional indemnity of $1,400 each, would have a good case were it not for one thing which causes their defence to collapse like a pricked toy balloon. They themselves are responsible for the undue prolonging of the session. The people of Ontario are in no way to blame for the fact that the Legislature has wasted months in the transaction of the public business, yet they are expected to cheerfully pay the bill after the members of the Legislature have voted themselves a bonus based on the long duration of the session. It may be that some members have found that the extra expenses involved in the drawing out of the proceedings have cut in heavily upon their sessional indemnities, and in their case the additional grant will be needed. But the number of men who are in that position cannot be large, and in any event the conditions have been brought about by the members themselves. Just who is to blame for the slow functioning of the Legislature is by no means clearly defined. Perhaps a share of the censure should be passed around to all the groups in the House. The Government is certainly not blameless, for it has not proved itself businesslike in its presentation of its new legislation, and time might have been saved had the Government's programme been in better shape. Nor can the members of the two parties in the Opposition seats dodge a portion of the responsibility. They have done far too much talking, wasted far too much time quibbling over unimportant matters. The result is that the session will not be over until next month, and that the people of Ontario will have to dig down in their pockets and contribute $600 extra to every member of the Legislature. In a year when economy is supposed to be the watchword, the salary bonus is difficult to justify.

PUBLIC LIBRARY VANDALS.

Mr. F. M. DelaFosse's complaint about the vandals who have been mutilating books and magazines at the local Public Library is supported by The Toronto Globe, which adds its condemnation of the practice and intimates that the hiring of detectives to catch the offenders would be a step in the public interest. Says The Globe:

"The head office of the Peterborough Public Library speaks severely of the vandalism shown in tearing pages from books and stealing illustrations from magazines. A volume belonging to a costly set of books, such as an encyclopaedia, is sometimes mutilated in this way. It is theft of the meanest kind, robbing the other users of the library for the sake of saving the trifling trouble or expense of copying the passage required. It tends to discourage those public-spirited librarians who try to give the people the freest possible access to books. Hiring detectives is a disagreeable thing, but if some of the offenders could be caught and severely punished it would be a boon to the decent reading public."

MINIMUM WAGE BOARD.

The Minimum Wage Board will hold a public hearing in Toronto on June 1 next, when the proposed orders, regarding minimum wage rates for female factory workers in the textile industry, will be considered, and any criticisms or objections on the part of employers or employes heard. These orders are the same as those already in force for a number of other factory trades, and a study of the suggested rates will lead one to the conclusion that they are not set too high in consideration of the present cost of living. Of course, these are minimum wages, and no doubt the scale will be exceeded in a great many cases. For piece-workers, it is declared sufficient if 80 per cent. receive the minimum, and the wages may be averaged over a period not exceeding three months. At least half the workers in any factory must be experienced adults. The rates do not affect office workers.

For the city of Toronto the minimum weekly wage scale for experienced adults over 18 years of age is set at $12.50; inexperienced adults, over 18, six months at $10 and six months at $11; young girls under 18, six months at $8, six months at $9 and six months at $10. For other cities having a population of 30,000 and over, the scale is $11.50 for experienced workers over 18 years of age; $9.50 for six months and $10.50 for the next six months, for inexperienced adults; and for girls under 18, six months at $8, six months at $9 and six months at $10. For cities and towns between 5,000 and 30,000 population—experienced adults, $11; inexperienced adults, six months at $9, six months at $10; for girls under 18, six months at $7, six months at $8.50 and six months at $10. The rates for all the rest of the Province are fixed at—$10 for experienced adult workers, six months at $8 and six months at $9 for inexperienced adults, and for girls under 18 years of age, six months at $6, six months at $7.50 and six months at $9.

These rates have been determined after conferences held with representative employers and employes, and are said to have the approval of all the better elements of the trade. It is explained that, "as in every trade where women are employed, the wage variations are considerable, and the net result of these orders is not and could not possibly be to cause any general rise in wages. What it does is to cut off unsocially low wages and afford every woman engaged in knitting or spinning or weaving sufficient income to provide for the expenses of her livelihood." Comment or criticism is invited by the board and may be presented at the meeting on June 1 or forwarded through the mails. Mr. H. G. Fester is a member of the Minimum Wage Board. —Hamilton Spectator.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

What the Legislature really needs is not a bonus system, but the installation of talk-meters.

The United States is on the way back to normalcy. The cut in the wages on the railways proves it.

In Peterborough it is proposed to build smaller houses as a step towards reducing rents. In Toronto the rents grow bigger as the houses grow smaller.—Toronto Globe.

LITERARY GEMS

NATURE-FAKING UP-TO-DATE.

"I must have a little money
For my simple pleasure," Sighed the city poet,
In his garret.

He bought for a penny
A book of botany,
And began to write.

He announced, by way of introduction,
That spring was coming,
And then hunted in the index,
Found a long name,
Looked at the picture of it,
And said it was sure to blossom soon.

They called him a Nature Poet;
"Wordsworth," they said,
"With a touch of John Clare;
Or Legwidge, with a hint
Of W. H. Davies."
(Reviewers are so learned.)

He made twenty-three shillings,
Indulged in his simple pleasures,
And died of Russian tea
In a filthy cabaret.

The author of the book of botany
Turned in his grave.
Twice.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

The Message of the Bluebird.
(By Mr. Asa Huycke)

Editor Examine:

Dear Sir:—Having attended several rehearsals of the above light opera, of which both the Libretto and music are the entire work of Mr. Asa Huycke of this city, I would like to say that the whole production possesses great merit, and is worthy the patronage of music lovers and playgoers generally.

Mr. Huycke's work represents the culmination of three years labour of earnest and capable composition, and will, I feel sure, prove to be an unique event in the history of Peterboro's musical career equally with that of its author.

That Mr. Huycke has succeeded in securing the co-operation with him in his production of such well known musical people as Mr. J. H. Renwick, (conductor). Mr. W. F. Leader (orchestra) with Mrs. Dorothy Allen Park, Mrs. Perrin and others is perhaps sufficient guarantee of the musical qualities of this work.

ONE WOMAN TELLS OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Birch Plain, Victoria Co., N.S., May 29th (Special). — "Dodd's Kidney Pills are a wonderful remedy for kidney trouble." These are the words of Mrs. Ewan McQueen, a highly respected resident here. And Mrs. McQueen speaks out of her own experience.

"I have been taking Dodd's Kidney Pills for some time," she says, "and I can't speak too highly of them. They have been of great benefit to me. I always keep some of them on hand."

All over Canada Dodd's Kidney Pills are recognised as suffering women's best friend. They act directly on the kidneys, making them strong and healthy. Diseased kidneys are the cause of nine-tenths of all the ills women are heir to.

Weak, nervous, run-down women should ask their neighbours about Dodd's Kidney Pills.

CHIEF'S REPRIMAND GRATED ON CROWD.

Incident at Fire Was Trifling But Left An Unpleasant Impression.

A small fire in the shingles of the roof of Parker's dye works gave Chief Gimblett a chance to perform before a down town crowd yesterday afternoon. The blaze covered only a square yard or so of the roof and was quickly extinguished by the Chief with a chemical tank. Quite a crowd was attracted to Charlotte street by the central alarm, and while most of the spectators were probably impressed by the swiftness of the brigade in going about its work, some criticism was expressed at the manner in which Chief Gimblett addressed one of his men. It was felt that if there was any occasion for explanation or reproof, especially at a small fire of negligible proportions, that it might be preferrable to withhold the reprimand, whether deserved or not, to the privacy of the fire hall. That was the opinion heard from many quarters, but Chief Gimblett may feel that his own way is best.

PROGRAM OF ROAD REPAIRS

Result of Annual Inspection Tour of the City By the Board of Works.

With their "field notes" before them after the day's inspection tour of the city, the Board of Works last night tabulated a list of repairs and improvements on the streets which they sent on to the Council for approval. The work detailed from the experience of driving around the city covers sections of all the wards and entails a cost which it was stated would make a big hole in the appropriations for the City Engineer's department. The memoranda as adopted was as follows:

Benson Avenue—To be repaired, and plank crossings put in to two new houses.

Bethune Street—South of Dublin street to be graded and repaired.

Stewart Street—South of Edinburgh street to be repaired.

Dublin St. — To be repaired between Stewart and Rubidge streets.

Rubidge Street—Between Dublin and Edinburgh streets to be repaired.

Edinburgh Street—To be repaired west of Stewart street.

Gilchrist Street—Request of Jos. Grey to have it opened from McDonnel street to the creek.

Lansdowne Street—Ditch on the north side to be raised. The city to pay half of the expense of gravelling from George to Park streets, if the Township of North Monaghan will do the work.

Ware Street—To be repaired.

Lock Street — To be repaired south of Romaine street.

Brock Street — To be repaired from Aylmer to Bethune streets.

Aylmer Street—From McDonnell to Dublin streets to be repaired.

Buys Gravel Lots.

Charles W. Matthews' offer of $300 for three gravel lots on Caddy street was approved on motion of Ald. Phelan, seconded by Ald. Crowe, and referred to the Council for ratification.

College street will be oiled in response to a petition signed by the residents but a motion to oil Monaghan Road from Charlotte street to Sherbrooke was laid over for further consideration when the general programme of streets to be oiled is completed.

Other Road Repairs.

The Board also decided to repair McDonnel street between Park and Aylmer streets, and Park street will receive similar attention from Brock street north to McDonnel street.

Mayor Taylor and Ald. Stocker were appointed representatives on a deputation that will request the Provincial Department of Highways to include the link from Dale to Welcome, skirting Port Hope, as a part of the Provincial Highway to Peterboro.

COSTUMES.

Nearly every costume has its cape or coat that makes it present a different apearance on the street than in the home. Sleeveless coats, cut straight and varying in length from very long ones that reach nearly to the hem to boleros, are very fashionable for mid-summer.

The Dread Pyorrhea Begins With Bleeding Gums

Pyorrhea's infecting germs cause many ills. Medical science has proven this.

Diseased conditions, which not long ago doctors were unable to trace to a cause, are now known often to be the result of Pyorrhea germs that breed in pockets about the teeth. Rheumatism, anaemia, nervous disorders and other diseases have been traced in many cases to this Pyorrhea infection.

Don't let Pyorrhea work its wicked will on your body. Visit your dentist frequently for tooth and gum inspection.

And watch your gums yourself. Pyorrhea, which afflicts four out of five people over forty, begins with tender and bleeding gums; then the gums recede, the teeth decay, loosen and fall out, or must be extracted to rid the system of poisons generated at their base.

Forhan's For the Gums will prevent Pyorrhea—or check its progress, if used in time and used consistently. Ordinary dentifrices cannot do this. Forhan's keeps the gums hard and healthy—the teeth white and clean. Start using it today. If gum-shrinkage has already set in, use Forhan's according to directions and consult a dentist immediately for special treatment.

THE DAY'S DOINGS AS RECORDED BY THE EXAMINER'S STAFF OF CORRESPONDENTS

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

A. Y. P. A. of St. Thomas Church Hold Meeting—Death of Mrs. T. Hunter

MILLBROOK, May 29.—The A.Y.P.A. of St. Thomas' church, held their annual meeting on Thursday evening with 24 members in attendance. The rector, Rev. Canon Allen occupied the chair, and made a brief address on the work carried on by the young people during the past year. Reports of the year's activities were also given by the various officers, and proved most encouraging.

On motion it was decided to unite with the Sunday School, and hold the annual picnic at Wallace's Point in July, the exact date to be settled later. After some discussion the proposal to invite the A.Y.P.A. of St. John't church, Peterboro, to bring their "Minstrel Show," (which they have successfully presented on more than one occasion), here probably by the second week in June, was carried unanimously. Miss Lillie Clarke was appointed delegate to the A.Y.P.A. Conference to be held in St. Catharines in October; this item of business was necessarilly attended to at this meeting because it is the final one until fall. The following officers were then elected:

President—Mr Robert Stone. Vice-Pres.—Miss Mary Pitt. Secretary—Mr. Allen Pitt. Treasurer—Miss Florence Clarke.

The concluding item for the evening's program, and one which proved very enjoyable and interesting, was an illustrated talk on "Scotland," given by Rev. C. R. Spencer. The meeting was dismissed in the usual manner.

Mrs. Thomas Hunter

The death of the late Mrs. Thos. Hunter whose funeral took place on Friday, May 26th, to the Presbyterian cemetery, Millbrook, was not unexpected by her relatives and friends as she had had heart trouble for several years; serious complications of the disease compelled her removal to the hospital here about eight weeks ago, and though everything possible was done to relieve her sufferings on Wednesday, May 24th, she passed away. Deceased was born in Smithtown 65 years ago, and was one of a family of thirteen children, only three of whom are now living.

Her marriage to Mr. Thomas Hunter, who though not in very robust health still survives his wife, took place nearly thirty years ago, and practically all her married life was spent in Millbrook, first on a farm at the south-east edge of the village, and afterwards for several years at the west end in the residence now occupied by her only son, Mr. Harold Hunter, with whom his father make his home. One other child, a daughter, died in infancy. Besides the bereaved husband and son, who mourn the loss o a capable and devoted wife and mother the immediate surviving relatives are two sisters (twins,) Mrs. T. Moore, o Lakefield, and Mrs. M. Blewett, living near Peterboro, and one brother, Mr. James Roseberry, residing in the States; there is also one little grandson, Master Harold Denzil Hunter.

The funeral was largely attended, and the services were taken by Rev. Mr. Webb, of Peterboro, and Rev. G. S. Gervan, of Millbrook: Rev. Mr. Tucker was also present. The pall-bearers were: Messrs. S. and A. Hunter, T. H. Bradley, N. Lamb, T. Hunter, and T. Armstrong.

Those from outside points attending the funeral were: two nieces, Mrs. A Bulmer, and Mrs. Middleton, and one sister-in-law, Mrs. Roseberry, of Peterboro, also her two sisters, Mrs. Moore of Lakefield, and Mrs. M. Blewett, o North Monaghan.

Held May meeting

The "Golden Links" Mission Circle of the Methodist Church held their May meeting at the home of Miss Alice Stewart, the newly-elected officers taking up the duties of their positions for the first time in the new church year. The president, Miss Marjorie Skitch, occupied the chair, and the topic, "The Problem of Service," was ably taken by Miss Stewart, and illustrated by a number of appropriate Scripture passages read by several of the girls. A letter from Miss E. C. Hawken, our W.M.S. missionary at Kolokreeka, was read by the president, and the "heralds" present responded to their names with interesting items of news from the various mission fields; Miss Phyllis Richards also gave a most instructive reading from the "Monthly Letter."

During the discussion of business items it was decided to ask that all money paid in for names on the autograph quilt which the Circle is making, should be handed over to the treasurer, Miss Stella Pethick, at the June meeting as that will be the final one until September; some work may be done on the quilt during the holiday season, and it will be necessary to have the complete number of names then paid for in the hands of the committee in charge so that none may be overlooked when the work is being carried on. As neither of the delegates previously appointed were able to attend the Branch Meeting at Belleville in June, the matter of securing some one to represent the Circle was left in the hands of the superintendent, Mrs. J. L. Byam.

Miss Stewart served dainty refreshments at the close, and all enjoyed a social hour together before the meeting was finally dismissed.

In Mission Field

The many friends of Miss E. C. Hawken, who represents the Millbrook Women's Missionary Auxiliary at the Kolokeeka School, Smoky Lake, Alberta, will be glad to learn that she has now recovered from her recent severe illness with laryngitis, sufficiently to be able to resume her scholo duties to a limited degree. There will, however, be a general disappointment felt that Miss Hawken is not accepting her furlough this year though it falls due in June. As the other two experienced workers go on furlough this summer, at the request of the Board of Managers, Miss Hawken has volunteered to reamin for another year, it being inadvisable to have three wholly new missionaries undertake the work of the School and Home at the one time. The pupils are all Ruthenians, and evangelistic calls are made at the homes of the parents as well.

Annual Meeting

The annual congregational meeting of the Methodist Church will be held in the Sunday School auditorium on Tuesday evening, May 30th, at 8 p.m. Reports on the year's work, in all the organizations connected with the church will be given by the secretaries or presidents, and any necessary items of business discussed. The Ladies' Aid has been made responsible for the remainder of the program, and also for the refreshments and social hour at the close. As this will be a most interesting and important meeting, it is hoped that all members and adherents of the church will make a special effort to be present.

GREATER DEMAND FORCES PRICES UP

The increased consumption of tea in 1921, (during which year, by agreement, the tea growers of Ceylon and India had curtailed production) forced the price of tea steadily upwards to the present abnormally high level. The lowering of the duty in England will mean still greater demand, and authorities on tea tell us that still higher prices may be expected.

MINERS' BLINDNESS BECOMES COMMON.

But Can Be Eliminated By Simple Precautions.

STOCKHOLM, May 30.—(Associated Press)—Swedish co-operative societies flourished last year as they have never done within the history of the Co-operative Union of that organization just issued.

In the same period Swedish business, commerce and iudustry suffered heavy losses or at the best showed small profits. Whether the co-operatives succeeded in spite of the world-wide depression or because of it is hard to say but the fact remains that the dismal year of 1921 was for them a banner year.

Sweden at present has about 1,000 co-operative stores, besides many varities of other ventures such as co-operative dwellings and building associations, purchasing societies large number of co-operative dairies, farmers' societies, seventy egg-selling organizations, cattle breeding societies and fruit and vegetable growers' co-operative.

Last years' report shows that a net surplus of about $125,000 has been made by these non-profit making societies, while the cash on hand has increased from $1,250,000 to $1,850,000.

Deposits with different branches of cooperative unions, which conduct limit savings bank activities, icreased to the equivalent of $3,350,-00 representing small savings of co-operative society members.

The central union has started its own producing plants in several places. The report states that members of the co-operative societies are enabled to purchase practically all necessities at the lowest prices obtainable, as well as sell their products on most favorable terms through their own joint organizations.

The greatest number of co-operative enterprises, the report shows are to be found in the big industrial centers where the bulk of the membership is drawn from the ranks of workmen and their families.

Oh, You June! — by Jack Lait

LEANDER LYCURGUS HOBBS stood behind his counter, ready to please. It wasn't a hard counter to stand behind. For within it were trays of diamonds and pearls and all the other precious stones. They tell of the London omnibus driver who never looked up from his platform, explaining "Legs ain't no novelty to me." But Leander Lycurgus Hobbs still looked down, for the thrill of the gems never left him.

Selling jewelry isn't like selling a lot of other things. Folks who come to buy diamonds aren't "normal." They're either so rich that they're calm about it, which isn't natural, or they are ordinary folks like most of us and are agitated. They try to look unconcerned, and they succeed—about like a pair of honeymooners entering the Pullman for their marriage junket.

It was a safe play that anyone who came up to that counter was a principal figure in some adventure. And Leander Lycurgus Hobbs was a nice young fellow who yearned for adventures. So far those that had come his way had trickled over that counter, mostly, and were other people's. But he just knew that some day he must bridge the glass casket and become the hero, rather than the disinterested and innocent third party to one of the episodes which gleamed potentially from every facet of every stone within his keep.

He had read every crook story pertaining to diamond thieves, jewelry store swindlers, paste-stone substituters, sleight-of-hand gem-shoplifters and armed desperadoes. But none seemed to pick him out. He just went hopefully along, selling ladies' rings to men and men's stickpins to ladies, watches to doting parents around graduation time, and signet-rings to collegiates. Every stranger who approached his shimmering case got the optimistic eye of Leander, then double-crossed him with the expected.

He stood thus on a certain morning in June.

June was the heyday of the engagement-ring and wedding-ring high peak. Engagement rings sold by the karat and wedding rings by troy weight. He had the lexicon of the whole business down to a union of the mushy sentimentality divided by the gross money value, and talked the language of Cupid as Cupid said it with stone-set platinums and followed it up with flexible bands. (Since the marriage band has become more flexible, the band that expresses marriage has crinkled up in accord. The old songs about the plain gold ring are as passe as ankle-length skirts or hansom cabs.)

Many a novel did Leander Lycurgus Hobbs extract from his customers. The amount spent as a dividend, the apparent wealth of the buyer as a divisor, equaled the degree of affection, the quotient X, the unknown quantity. There was the old man who thought something just a little bit finer—h'm, a larger stone, perhaps—would be the thing. There was the sturdy young swain who blinked and gulped when he heard the price of the comparatively mean little atom of insolent carbon. There was the posted man of wealth who called for settings by trade names and who criticized designs that would have made the common people dizzy without second scrutiny.

Hobbs knew, or fancied, just what was in the mind and the heart of each of his customers. Most of it was so obvious, the rest of it required only the fluid imagination of this poet-behind-a-counter, this wiseacre in the language of precious baubles, this insider-looking-out. Ha-ha—the poor simpletons thought to deceive him with their translucent staggers at poise. Tried to delude him! They sneaked in to buy diamonds once or twice in their pin-point lives, he sold them all day long—and they thought they could gull him!

He stood thus on a certain morning in June.

June was warm without being sultry; croony and lazy and foolish-like, without being moist and burning.

June was the "season" for brides, the mating time, the honeymoon leaf of the calendar's diverse dozen.

Leander Lycurgus Hobbs, his hair polished back as in a collar advertisement, his collar stiff but nifty, as in a hair-tonic advertisement, his pin set in exactly the hour's particular thread of his knitted cravat, stood waiting for patrons and sighing inwardly for a new sensation in his diamond-studded, boresome routine of existence.

He saw the usher start toward the door, which the uniformed boy was holding open. The usher wore a long-tailed afternoon coat and was the quintessence of pulchritudinous politeness. He addressed all the women as "Miss" and, when he had ascertained somewhat of their wants, led them up the aisle with one hand slightly in air, two fingers and thumb spread, walking on pneumatic fabric. No one ever stopped or strayed when the usher led the way. He guided and they followed.

As he stood thus, on the certain June morning, Leander Lycurgus Hobbs saw, entering through the door from the street, a girl.

Many girls entered through that door. But Hobbs knew before she had cleared the threshold that never had he beheld a girl who so instantaneously yet completely filled his exacting, searching eye. Her features were as of an animated cameo. Her togs were different and chic, rich without being flamboyant. She wasn't a flapper, she wasn't a grand dame, she wasn't a blue-book deb. She was difficult to classify. Hobbs put her down as being in a class of her own.

Hobbs never had much hope when girls entered. They usually wanted repair work, or to have an appraisal made on their engagement rings, or maybe gold hairpins or gewgaws. Girls rarely bought their own jewels. Elderly women—yes; they had sons and nieces and husbands. But pretty girls—why should they buy high-priced trinkets, except just before Christmas?

But the magnificent usher had bowed, had acceded graciously, was wafting up the passage toward Hobbs' domain. Yes—yes—absolutely. The usher had reached the counter; the vision was two feet behind.

"Mr. Hobbs," gurgled the usher, waving airily and significantly yet not so directly that he could have been suspected of violating that orthodox statute against "pointing," then waiting for the girl to come up, "something in engagement rings."

Leander Lycurgus Hobbs started. Engagement rings, did the usher say? What in the name of all the inconsistencies did this bewitching girl want, buying an engagement ring?

Girls did now and then buy solitaires and the other sorts of rings which an age irreverent of immemorial usage was now substituting for the conventional solitaire as a badge of bethrothal. In that event they always grinned self-consciously and observed sheepishly that they just wanted something for the little finger—or specified the right hand with unneedful emphasis. This girl, apparently, had called for engagement rings. The usher would have never dared put such a dangerous, embarrassing choice in her mouth unless her mouth itself had assured him that what she wanted to see was an engagement ring.

Leander Lycurgus Hobbs Reached Down Into the Case and Brought Up a Tray of Variegated Engagement Rings, Sputtering and Sparkling.

Leander Lycurgus Hobbs reached down into the case and brought up a tray of mauve velvet, in the tiny slots of which stood the variegated engagement rings, sputtering and sparkling against the "natural daylight" which the establishment, like every jewelry house of tone, maintained about the diamond departments.

The girl looked them over with a twinkle of sharp interest. She started at the left upper row and methodically swept them until she had reached the right bottom row.

"This one," ventured Hobbs, pointing with hand arched from the wrist and index finger slightly bent downward, "is the very smartest type. The setting is continental, regarded by the conventional purchasers as slightly extreme, but really accepted by the more distingue."

"Uhum," said the girl. "How about that one—no, the one just above?"

"Very new, also; just a bit more toward the popular fashion, yet quite in vogue. You see, engagement rings—" and he dared a look upward toward her eye to catch a possible quiver, a blush, a choke, anything—"seem to want a touch that individualizes them as engagement rings, rather than entirely following the fashions, as in jewels for more general—less indicative gifts. Most brides-to-be desire that their engagement rings be tokens as well as ornaments, if I may offer a suggestion."

"You may offer all the suggestions you like," she laughed. If you don't know about the things you sell, who would?"

"Who—indeed?" echoed Hobbs. "We see the designs by the foremost creators of the last word in such merchandise, even before they are applied. And we have the opportunity of hearing so many opinions, encountering so many tastes, on the other hand, that we soon absorb a sort of instinct as to what the various sorts of folks desire for certain—h'm, purposes."

"Yes? And what do you absorb as to what my sort of folks would want for h'm this certain purpose?"

"I—that is, well—if you would confide more fully the exact purpose"——

"No mystery about that—an engagement ring. Purpose being to be worn on the otherwise useless finger of the less useful hand of a pretty girl, so that she and the world may know that one man on earth thinks her the most beautiful, the most wonderful, wants to possess her, and has indicated same by placing upon said finger of said lily hand one of these gimcracks. I thought that was pretty well established, and you, of ccurse——"

"Of course. Pardon me. But—the individual?"

"Oh—the individual?"

"Yes, Miss. You see, what would be apropos for one might be quite incongruous for another. You see——"

"I see. In other words, a lady must come in person to be measured, fitted and suited for her engagement ring, so that it matches her complexion, her stature, her personality, just as to a costumer's or hair-dresser's, eh?"

"N—no. Not exactly that. As a rule, you see, the gentleman usually comes. Sometimes, though not as a rule, the lady comes with him. But very rarely—I might say never in all my experience, has the lady come herself, alone——"

"Y—you don't think—oh, glory, what a lark! You don't think I've come to buy myself an engagement ring?"

"I—I scarcely would presume to inquire, Miss. You see, the subject, as we learn who handle it day in and day out, is a delicate one."

"This is more than delicate—it's delicious. Little Miss Fiancee coming to shop her own ring, to show the ardent party of the second part that she has engaged herself to him and that now he's on the defensive and must make good or explain. It's a variation of the old wheeze about him taking back the ring; now she takes it back—back to the jewelry store, if it turns out a bust. Right?"

"I—yes, Miss. I judge so. If you would tell me for whom this ring is to be—that is, whether she is a girl in society, or——"

"She's a hoofer."

"A—beg pardon?"

"A hoofer. A hoofer is one who hoofs. They hoof who shift the dogs over the floor, into the air, all over. A hoofer, Mr. Etiquette, is a dancer—a professional dancer. The particular engagement ring which I am desirous of assessing myself for, is designed for a little brunette with blue eyes, a few freckles, one gold tooth, named Myrtle. Do you think you have a ring that will precisely synchronize with that scenario?"

"I see. Myrtle. Brunette. Dancer . . . I should judge, from the gold tooth, as well as the profession, that she would want something more showy—something like that one, perhaps."

"From the profession? My dear Mr. Sunday School—where do you get that stuff? I'll stand for the gold tooth indication, and even for the name, although babies are all alike when they're named, and therefore names have no reliable significance. But I want you to know that hoofers are just as refined as waitresses, usherettes, duchesses or even manicures. Say—I'm one, myself."

"I—oh, no slight intended, I assure you. What I intended to convey was rather that—well, actresses like to wear their rings on the stage, and with the footlights——"

"Oh, quit stalling, Archie. You share the popular superstition that because a girl is on the stage she is vulgar, crass, crude. And I want to disabuse a little and abuse you a lot. I, myself, come from one of the foremost families in the suburbs of Elgin, Illinois. My old man had eleven chickens and a couple of sows, and we occupied one of the most elegant shanties around Hairpin Bend. And here you go and take it for granted that because a lady is a hoofer she can't be an aristocrat, even when she has a solid gold tooth. And you're supposed to know a blue-steel from a weak-coffee. Gerald—I'm miffed—absotively nonplussed."

Hobbs felt his neat and perfectly fitted collar growing tight. He wasn't used to this sort of banter. Most of his customers were scared, reverent, almost stunned. Here was the prettiest girl he had ever faced across the gem-holding glass coffer, one on whom he would have thought he'd make an impression with his manners, his professional superiority, his phychological position, joshing him without respect for the sanctity of the subject matter or the punctilious highlights on his hair. He cleared his throat, which was saying all he could think of in reply.

"In truth, Clarence," she continued, "Myrtle is one of the most recherche soft-shoe steppers that ever busted a fiddle over a vaudeville leader's dome after a Monday matinee flop. She has a vocabulary that I am certain could not be duplicated in the most forbidding mansion on the Drive, and she can dig up good Scotch where nobody in the rest of the troupe can negotiate a pint of undertaker's home brew. Myrtle is an heiress. Her father, who was a famous topmounter with Barnum and Bailey, left her—I don't remember just what he did leave her, but I know he left her.

"Since then she has been moving only with the ultra and the elite. She is one of my own set, in fact, and you know what that means."

"Papriqua is the name."

Leander Lycurgus Hobbs almost shoved his elbow through the top glass. Papriqua! So—this was the famous Oriental danseuse, the headliner, star, beauty?

"Oh, I beg your pardon," he stuttered.

"Righto. I'll forgive you, if you promise to never do it again, Julius. You now understand that Myrtle is no tramp. She is in my company, and she is engaged—or about to become engaged—to my stage carpenter—Bill Hillis, of the Hillises, of Flatbush-on-Subway.

"Now that we understand each other, how many berries will that big, knock-your-eye-out one over there set me back?"

"This one? That will be eight hundred. You see——"

"What is there to see? Eight hundred is eight hundred. I don't care if the freight in South Africa is congested or the overhead is way up underground where they dig up these pebbles. If you have anything to say that will make eight hundred sound less—or feel less—say it. . . . No? . . . Then what's the use of breaking the fall with air?"

"Eight hundred is the price. You see, we have only one price on everything here. It is——"

"Sold. Wrap it up, Felix, and send it over to the theater after the matinee, and I'll give your messenger an order on the box office."

"Yes, ma'am. Anything else?"

"It was 'Miss' before—now it's 'ma'am.' How come? No, there will be nothing else, Cyril. My groceries are all in for the week and I have my earmuffs laid away for next Winter."

"Th—thanks. Will you kindly sign this blank—this order——"

Papriqua took her hands out of the pockets of her silk jacket, held the pad with her left hand, wrote with her right holding the pencil which Hobbs gave her. He glanced down at that left hand. On its tiniest finger blazed a riot of cut rubies surrounding an emerald that was as deep as Lake Louise, and as mysteriously, enchantingly green.

Hobbs' head snapped back with a jar. He had sold that ring—had sold it to a man whose name was as well known as that of the President. He had wondered for whom that fortune had been spent. Papriqua saw the look and traced it to its objective.

She smiled. But it wasn't the same smile she had worn all the way along, while she was joshing him.

"Oh—that!" she laughed, and now it was her throat that seemed dry. "That? You recognize it?"

Hobbs nodded.

"Well, I'll tell you, Casimir. Bill Hillis is so in love with Myrtle that the big ox can't see a stage-brace from a proscenium border. He hasn't got a dime, and he's overdrawn on next week. Myrtle is so crushed on him that it's no wonder she's dancing better than ever in my act—she's off the ground all the time.

"Now, if I didn't buy Bill the ring to give Myrt, she'd never get any. When I give it to Bill he'll cry, and when Bill gives it to Myrt she'll pass out.

"When the cuckoo who gave me that collection of junk slipped it on my finger, I slapped his face. . . . I took it, yes. . . . Just because a girl is on the level is no reason for her being a sap altogether. . . . But I'd trade it for any of those in that tray, any one that some square, decent fellow would ease on the finger next to that Fourth o' July. . . . But, say? Why am I spilling all this hearts and flowers stuff? It's the June thing, I guess, Vladimir."

CHAPTER XLIX

OLD MAN WOOES FLAPPER

At the Main Street station I found George Bradshaw patrolling the causeway for auto traffic. A red-cap, near by, guarded the splendid pieces of baggage.

At first I thought I would go right up to George and tell him frankly I was there because Mr. Tearle had asked me to keep him and Bonny apart.

And when Bonny arrived I'd let her storm, if she wanted to. And George could rage. But if it was in any person's power to dissuade that flapper I ought to make the effort.

And if I couldn't, I'd wire Mr. Tearle to meet them when they stepped from the train in New York.

Either way, Bonny would be saved. So there was no particular sense in talking to G. B. before the child arrived.

I was a dull, commonplace little figure in the big crowd, rather uncomfortable, too, without my breakfast, impatient to have it over.

"And well may he worry," said I to Me. "I suppose G. B. could coax a dozen beauties, of all ages, to run off with him, but not another one with the million he wants."

The last belated traveller jumped from the running board of a taxi and rushed through the gates which clicked sharply behind him.

And Bonny had not come!

The crowd thinned, but G. B. was too preoccupied to notice me. Any one could see that the was mightily disappointed and nervous. Not until the train had pulled out did he hail a taxi and drive away.

When he was out of sight I hurried to a telephone booth and called up the Tearle number.

"Mademoiselle is asleep, Mrs. Madison!" a maid replied to my question.

"Are you sure, Ginette? This is important. Will you please go to Miss Tearle's room, open the door softly, and be quite sure whether or not she is there?"

In five minutes Ginette was back with the information that mademoiselle was sleeping soundly.

I laughed as I hung up the receiver. Doubtless at that very moment her dapper suitor of 50 was raging in his hotel.

"So much for a romance with an irresponsible flapper!" ran my mental comment. "But good for Bonny! She must have a saving remnant of her father's common sense."

But what had made her change her mind? Why had she played this unparalled joke?

BENJAMIN DISRAELI

Dizzy smiled. "Read it yourself."

The girl's hand trembled as she grasped the slip of paper. Then her face fell. Her voice faltered as she read:

"The celery is ripe to cut."

"The celery is ripe to cut!"

"The celery is ripe to cut?" gasped Clarissa. "What does it mean?"

"A great deal more than it says!" Disraeli exclaimed, taking his telegram from Clarissa, and opening the drawer of his desk. He drew forth a slip of green paper—his private code. Scanning its lines, he read slowly:

"'The celery is ripe to cut,' means: 'The Suez Canal purchase is completed, and cheque accepted.'"

"Dizzy!" exclaimed Lady Beaconsfield.

"Then has Charles succeeded?" said Clarissa, hardly above a whisper.

"Gloriously!" exclaimed Disraeli.

"Let her cry," said Disraeli to his wife. "It's worth it!"

"How glad you must be!" said Lady Beaconsfield.

"Glad? For now that other dream of mine will be realized."

"What dream, Dizzy?" Lady Beaconsfield, wonderingly.

"To make my Sovereign Empress of India!"

"Empress of India?"

"It sounds well, eh, Mary?—And you, my dear, you shall be my messenger when the time is ripe. You, Lady Beaconsfield, shall carry the news to our beloved Queen. You shall be proud of me when I announce the new title to Her Majesty's faithful Commons!"

"Yes, Dizzy, I shall be proud. How soon—?"

"Oh— some time must elapse."

As he spoke, he placed the telegram and the code on the writing table and placed a weight on them.

"This must be formally ratified. Popular feeling must be created; the party educated."

"Make haste, Dizzy, make haste!"

"Oh, you impatient woman," he said, chidingly.

Disraeli did not see the appealing look in the eyes of his wife, who was thinking only of the doctor's admonition regarding her health.

Clariss had risen. Her cheeks were tear-stained, but her eyes shone with supreme happiness.

"Will Charles come back soon, now, Mr. Disraeli?"

"Another impatient woman!" he exclaimed. "I must telegraph this good news to Meyers!"

"Meyers made it possible—I want him to know. Another Jew! Mary! There'll be a peerage for him. How furious Probert will be!" He began to write.

"You have not answered my question," said Clarissa. "Please tell me when Charles will come home? Will it be soon?"

"Yes! with trumpets blowing, drums beating, flags flying—"

"Oh, I don't care anything about that!" the girl replied.

"And wedding bells ringing!" Disraeli laughed.

Lady Beaconsfield had crossed the floor and stopped in front of the casement windows. She interrupted her husband and Clarissa when she exclaimed:

"A station cab! Can that be Mrs. Travers?"

"Mrs. Travers?" Disraeli spoke as a man appalled. "We can't have Mrs. Travers here now! She'd worm this out of us in five minutes. She'd see it on all our faces."

"Oh, Dizzy—you made me invite her!"

"Dizzy!" exclaimed Lady Beaconsfield.

"Both of you! Set your wits to work! —Tell her—I'm very ill—very ill indeed!"

As he took the card, Disraeli took the card, and in complete surprise, read the name aloud:

"Its Hugh Meyers!—Show him in at once!"

Bascot hurried out.

"That's splendid," Disraeli said. "Is it possible he has heard the news?"

"Can Charles have cabled to him?" asked Clarissa.

"No— these financiers know everything, by a sort of instinct," said the Prime Minister. "If he's come to tell us, don't spoil his effect; don't tell him that we know."

As he spoke, Disraeli placed the telegram which he had written to Hugh Meyers, on the writing desk at hand, as Bascot entered with the Jewish banker.

"Good morning, Mr. Meyers, delighted to see you," Disraeli said, as he clasped Meyer's hand.

"How do you do, Mr. Meyers?" asked Lady Beaconsfield. "We have Lady Pevensey—Clarissa—with us—"

Meyers bowed to the ladies, and turned to Disraeli with a troubled face, but Disraeli asked:

"What happy wind—"?

"Can I have a few minutes in private with you sir?" asked Meyers.

"Oh, these ladies are—" Disraeli began.

"Forgive me, if I insist," Meyers said, with feeling.

Disraeli was struck with the banker's manner. Wonderingly, he said: "Why of course, Mary?"

The Prime Minister escorted the ladies to the door.

"Will you stay to lunch?" asked Lady Beaconsfield, as she turned in the door.

"I am sorry. That is impossible. Thank you very much," replied the banker.

XXIV.

Disraeli took Meyers by the arm and led him to a chair. But the financier did not sit down. As Disraeli passed back of his writing desk to take his chair, he said:

"Meyers, I was just about to send you a telegram—"

"One moment, sir!" said Meyers. "I want you to hear me first. What I have come to say—"

"Oh," said the Prime Minister. And walking round the desk again, he stood close to the banker and said, "Pray sit down."

"Well—?"

"I—I—don't know how to tell you!— It's so much harder than I expected." Meyers looked at the floor, and leaned forward, placing his elbows on his knees. He sat thus for a moment. Finally he pulled himself together, sat bolt upright and turned to the Prime Minister.

"Well, tell me—"

"Mr. Disraeli—I'm bankrupt!"

"What?—I didn't catch?"

"My house is bankrupt!"

"Bankrupt!—Meyers bankrupt?—Why, are you mad?"

"I wish to God I were!"

"You mean—you are—temporarily pressed: you are in temporary difficulties?"

"I mean—we are bankrupt!"

"But that is impossible?"

"It is the truth!"

"But, how?—A house like yours?—An historical firm?—Why, you might as well say the Bank of England!"

"So I should have thought!"

The Prime Minister rose slowly and stood over Meyers, holding his arms aloft. His manner was threatening, and when he spoke again, his tones echoed anger and rebuke.

"Why?—What have you been doing?—What!"

"Stop—Stop! It's not our fault!"

"Well!—Explain! I am waiting."

"First, the ship with the bullion from the Argentine—"

"Yes— go on."

"Gone down!"

"Wrecked?"

"Scuttled!"

"You mean—?"

"I mean purposely and criminally sunk—and all the crew saved—a conspiracy! It will take weeks—months—to get the insurance! And—that is not all!"

"What else?"

"For a long time, ever since our interview in Downing Street, rumors affecting my credit have been spread abroad. And now, this mysterious wreck. I am being pressed."

"I see—I see!"

What Disraeli saw was the workings of Russian spies—of Mrs. Travers

Meyers went on:

"Some enormous power has been at work in the dark. My liabilities have been brought up—"

"Ah!"

"Be as angry as you like. You are justified. I have been an honest man all my life. And now I stand before you in the light of a common cheat!"

The Prime Minister approached Meyer Meyers slowly, and extended his hand. Meyers clasped it. Tears came to his eyes.

"Mr. Meyers, I know you, sir."

"Tell me—you say some power is behind this—whom and what do you mean? Who caused these rumours to be spread?"

"I don't know. But they acted through an agent."

"Well—who is that?"

"Samuel Lewin."

"The great solicitor?"

"Yes."

"Does anyone else know?'

"Not a living soul."

Disraeli walked back to his writing desk.

"I came to you first," said Meyers, "because, of course, we cannot carry out the canal contract! Thank Heaven I'm in time. Thank Heaven that has not gone through!"

Disraeli took up the telegram he was about to send to Meyers and handed it to the banker. An expression of unutterable horror and despair spread over the latter's face.

"Good God!"

Disraeli sat silent. After a few seconds, he asked:

"When will it be known—our failure? When will it be known?"

"Tonight—tomorrow morning!"

"By the Lord it shall not! Go back to town! Quickly! Get to your office! Stay there! Stay there! I must know that you are there. Don't budge, keep you there all night."

"But——?"

"And don't breathe a word! Don't let anyone else know. Don't give the lightest hint that anything unusual has happened! Treat the wreck lightly. Watch your words; watch your looks. Something may happen Something SHALL happen!"

"What, sir? What?"

"God knows! God knows!"

Meyers started to say good-bye, but Disraeli cut him short.

"Go!"

And Meyers went.

XXV.

"Mary! Mary!"

Disraeli's voice was weak. He walked to the window, leaned there in the breeze for a moment, drawing in a deep breath. Then he turned unsteadily to the door through which Meyers had passed a moment before.

"Mary! Mary!"

"Yes, dear?" Lady Beaconsfield entered the room.

"Shut the door, Mary."

"What is it?"

"Mary, you have stood by me in many horrible predicaments. I am in the worst I was ever in!"

"Dizzy! Meyers?"

"Meyers is bankrupt!"

"Does that mean we are poor?"

"No, no. Oh, if that were all!"

"Then——"

"Meyers was finding the money for the canal."

"Ah!"

"Wait! Deeford has handed in the cheque. Now Meyers has failed. We cannot pay."

"And you?"

"I?"

"Yes, dear. I want to know how this will affect you."

"What does that matter?"

"It's all that matters to me."

"I haven't thought of it. What will happen to me? Disgrace—utter and irretrievable! The kind of disgrace no man can bear—no man can live through!"

Lady Beaconsfield gently placed her hand on his arm.

"Dizzy," she whispered.

"Yes. By Heavens, I'll bear it! I will face the nation I will bear it alone!"

"Not alone, dear!"

Dropping to his knees and burying his face in her arms, the Prime Minister said:

"Thank God—for you, Mary. Thank God, for you!"

"Have you done anything yet?"

She was weeping, but she mastered herself as she spoke. Disraeli stood up and answered:

"So soon? What could I do?"

"Shouldn't we go to town?"

"I can't! I don't dare! I cannot move secretly The Prime Minister cannot stir without setting the whole world agog. The papers have said I am ill. If I were seen in Downing Street now in the recess when I am supposed to be resting, every newspaper in the world would grow hysterical. It's horrible, Mary. I'm tied hand and foot."

He was interrupted by the entrance of Bascot.

"Mrs. Travers, sir," announced Bascot.

"What?" Disraeli's exclamation startled the butler.

Clarissa entered. The girl saw Lady Beaconsfield's tears, Disraeli's worried face. She did not dare ask a question.

"She MUST stay here!" the Prime Minister said. "She must not be allowed out of your sight. If she gets the slightest hint that I am making any movement—"

The Premier stopped speaking and walked quickly across the room to his little closet. He had regained his composure. Taking down his dressing gown, he removed his coat and put on the flowing garment. A bottle of medicine that had been delivered to the house for Lady Beaconsfield stood on the table. This Disraeli placed, with a spoon and glass, on a small stand near the sofa.

"What's this, Dizzy? What is all this play acting?" asked Lady Beaconsfield.

"I am ill. I am ill. The papers say I'm ill. She shall see the sickest man she ever saw in her life."

And walking to the bell pull, he summoned Bascot. Then he crossed to the sofa ans stretched out full length.

"Mr. Disraeli!" exclaimed Clarissa.

"Hush! I'm VERY ill!"

A moment later Mrs. Travers entered.

"Dear Lady Beaconsfield," she began.

Mrs. Disraeli placed a warning finger to her lips.

"Oh, I'm so sorry!" Mrs. Travers exclaimed. "I heard Mr. Disraeli was ill. I did not know whether to come or not. I am quite sure you did not want me."

Disraeli in a very weak voice, asked: "Is that Mrs. Travers, Mary?"

"Yes, dear," Lady Beaconsfield replied.

"I had no idea," Mrs. Travers said, shall stay but a moment!"

Rising slightly on the sofa, the Prime Minister held out a wavering, feeble hand and said:

"Dear Mrs. Travers! So good of you to come. I'm very weak but very happy to have you with us."

Mrs. Travers placed her lace scarf on the table and crossing to the sofa took his hand with a great show of sympathy.

"I'm so sorry?—What is the matter?" she asked.

"Well—I'm very weak. But very glad to see you. So bright! So young! —So—how is your husband?"

"How good of you to ask. He is at Marienbad—"

"And you've come to see the sick man?—Isn't that good of her, Mary? Do sit down!—Sit there, where I can see you."

You do not permit your personal likes or dislikes to be evident when you meet people.

If you are depressed or in an unhappy mood, you keep from imposing this upon others who may be feeling more cheerful.

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

MILLBROOK, May 30. — The Canadian "Go-to-Sunday-School Day" was observed in both the Presbyterian and Methodist Sunday schools here on Sunday, May 28th, with a good attendance in each case. The programme prepared by the Religious Education Council of Canada, was followed throughout.

Rev. G. S. Gervan acted as leader in the Presbyterian church, where the service was a combination of both church and Sunday school, the various responsive readings being taken by the different classes as called for. The special musical number was a song, "We Are Little Sunbeams," by the five girls, Ruth Thorndyke, Margaret Armstrong, Vanita Ingram, Jean and Edna Gervan, who compose the junior choir.

Mr. F. Fallis, Superintendent of the School, acted as leader in the Methodist Sunday School, outlining the chosen Scripture story, Hobab, the Helpful Companian,' in a very interesting manner; others taking part were, Mr. Frank Alcorn, who led in the opening prayer, Mrs. G. W. Sayles and Miss A. Stewart, who sang a duet which was much enjoyed and Miss Stella Pethick, who took the address, 'Come," in a very capable way. Time was given for the usual lesson period, and the entire service was felt to be both interesting and helpful.

The next special occasion will probably be "Children's Day," which comes the last Sunday in June.

IMPROVING YOUR RADIO SET

BY R. L. DUNCAN.
Director, Radio Institute of America

If you want to get the most out of your recieving set, take this tip or two:

Never try to share your aerial with another fellow. It won't work. He will be detuning your set and you will be detuning his. This applies to both outdoor and indoor antenna.

If you have to share the aerial, divide the time of operation. Disconnect one set while the other's in use.

Don't expect too much of your indoor loop or frame aerial. As previously explained, this is only for use in case you have a good radio frequency amplifier or have a set near a broadcasting station.

Don't think, because the aerial is inside the house, that you can shut out reception by closing the doors and windows. Ether, upon which the electromagnetic waves travel, permeats all substances, excepting possibly iron and steel, just as easily as it does air.

If you want to shut out reception, throw your switch and disconnect your set, from the antenna circuit.

Source of Annoyance.

We speak of the detector tube as oscillating when it is so regulated to receive signals at a maxium audibility. In this oscillating it throws off a small amount of energy which leaks through the receiving set into the aerial.

These signals, thrown off by the aerial, will be heard by those nearby who may be tuning in to the same wave length.

Tuning In.

The problem of tuning in to the best advantage is one that each fan will have to work out for himself—by simply varying his dials until he discovers the selective spots.

You may see a set receiving very satisfactorily at a friend's home or in a store and note the position of its dials. But if you try to make exactly the same arrangement on your own set, it may not work.

It all depends on the location of the receiving station, the height and length of the aerial, the length of the lead-in and the size of the cire used.

No rules can be laid down for specific tunings.

It is mostly up to the operator himself.

Tickler.

The plate variometer or "tickler" is the one part of the set that requires the most attention and skill in handling on account of its regenerative principal.

But with a litle practice one can soon learn just where each variation is needed, and the maximum of efficiency in reception is enjoyed.

CORNS

Lift Off with Fingers

Doesn't hurt a bit. Drop a little "Freezone" on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers. Truly!

Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the calluses, without soreness or irritation.

Travelling for pleasure came into vogue in the peaceful years of the Roman empire.

FANCY CUFFS.

By their sleeves you may know the smartest frocks. There is a tendency now to have the sleeve fit more closely about the armhole, but let it have all the latitude it likes about the wrist. Some of the fancy cuffs are very wide and very flowing.

For example, on a box similar to the Eddy Safety and the Eddy Sesqui, each containing approximately 50 matches, the tax is reduced from one cent to half-a-cent, or $7.20 per ten-gross case.

The many smokers and other consumers who find the small boxes of Eddy's so convenient will, therefore, benefit by this reduction in tax on these boxes.

STERLING RATES.

MONTREAL, May 30.— (Canadian Press.) — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday: Demand 4.4891; Cables 4.4923.

CASH GRAIN.

MONTREAL, May 30.— (Canadian Press.)—Prices in oats closed 1-c. per bushel here yesterday. Demand for flour continues steady. There is nothing new in the millfeed situation. The rolled oats market was quiet. There continues to be a good steady demand for baled hay. The egg market was without change. The trade in potatoes was quiet. The tone of the butter market continues easy. There is no change in cheese.

WINNIPEG CATTLE.

WINNIPEG, May 30. — (Canadian Press.)— Arrivals on the live stock market yesterday morning totalled 500 cattle and calves, 490 hogs and 11 sheep and lambs.

With moderate offerings and fairly good demand the cattle market was generally active and brisk. Butcher she stock moved out at slightly firmer prices while the remainder of classes and grades found a ready outlet with buyers bidding fully steady over the week-end close.

The hog market was unsettled and up to noon no definite price was fixed, but selects, fed and watered, likely weigh up at 12.50.

No sales reported on sheep and lamb market.

EGG MARKETS.

OTTAWA, May 30.— (Canadian Press.)— The immediate outlook is for lower prices. Ontario track shippers are being offered 25 to 27 f.o.b., for straight receipts but practically all of them refuse to sell except on a garded basis f.o.b., subject to Government inspection and are reported making sales of graded firsts at 32 f.o.b. Production is falling off and the general quality declining.

Toronto easier. Dealers are quoting 26 to 27 f.o.b., jobbing specials 36 to 37, extras 35, firsts 32 to 33, seconds 29, Farmers' market 35 to 40.

Montreal easier, extras jobbing 35, firsts 32, seconds 29. There were 150 cases Ontario fresh receipts offered on the mercantile exchange at 30 1-2 cases returnable, no sale made.

Winnipeg dealers quoting country shippers 25 for straight receipts, jobbing extras 34 to 36, firsts 30, seconds 25 to 26. Mixed car rolling from Brandon to Winnipeg costing extras 31, firsts 29 delivered.

CHICAGO WHEAT.

CHICAGO, May 30.— (Canadian Press.)—Wheat suddenly became a drug on the market in Chicago yesterday, burdening owners and smashing prices at the last more than ten cents a bushel as compared with earlier, in the Board of Trade session. Nearly 650 carloads had arrived here yesterday, and with prospective further heavy receipts to-day and tomorrow adding to a big accumulation already at hand, seemed to put an overwhelming weight on prices.

The market closed unstable at 2 1-8c. to six cents net decline, with May and July both $1.18 3-4 to $1.18 7-8 and September $1.16 3-4 to $1.16 7-8.

TORONTO, May 30. — (Canadian Press). — Premier Drury's amendments to his Hydro Radial Bill, introduced in the Legislature in committee stage last night, include one ordering the return of $11,360,363 worth of Government guaranteed bonds originally issued for the construction of and equipment of the Toronto-St. Catharines railway.

The most important amendment seemed to be that which raised from ten to fifteen per cent., the proportion of municipal responsibility required to defeat the project in the event of one or more municipalities turning down the radial scheme on the vote.

Kitty Gordon on Clothes

By BUDA STEPHENS BAKER.

The western woman is too careless about her clothes; she doesn't make the most of the charms she possesses. So says Kitty Gordon.

"Of course, clothes alone do not make the woman, but many a lovely woman lives the life of a wall flower because she does not wear becoming clothes," Miss Gordon said.

"There is no excuse for any woman looking dowdy in this age, regardless of how limited her income may be, if she concentrates a little on the art of dress."

* * *

Kitty Gordon believes that first of all the woman who wants to be distinctive should not follow the fads, but should wear things that are becoming to her individual type.

"The reason New York women and French women are noted for their clothes is because they have competition. In New York women always try to look their best; they have to if they want any attention, but out here in the west, what is there that makes so many women careless about their clothes?

"They have housework to do and babies to take care of, yes, but that is no excuse. A woman should always look her best. She should keep her hair combed, her nails manicured, her footwear trim and her nose powdered."

* * *

Kitty Gordon likes bobbed hair, too, but now that it has become so common Miss Gordon has decided to let her hair grow. Even in the matter of bobbed hair Miss Gordon showed individuality, for her hair is really "shingled" instead of bobbed. A "shingle" is very similar to a "bob" except that the hair is curled to the crown of the head instead of bobbing in a straight even line around the neck.

Irene Castle Tremaine was the first to set the bobbed hair fashion in this country and far be it from Kitty Gordon to be a copy-cat—oh dear, no—a professional error.

"Mummie," as Miss Beresford calls her attractive mother, likes color symphonies in clothes. For instance, if she is wearing a grey gown she always has a grey hat and footwear to match.

Kitty Gordon thinks the woman "Mummie" designs all of her own clothes. At night just before she goes to sleep 'Mummie" weaves lovely dreams of chiffon and satins, brocades and lace and the next morning she talks over the idea at the breakfast table," Miss Beresford said.

"I like to sew and I often make over some of mother's gowns for myself. I have copied gowns for which she has paid $200 and they cost me $12 and $15 to make. That shows that any woman who knows how to sew can dress well," the vivacious daughter explained.

* * *

'How many gowns has Miss Gordon?" her personal maid who has been with her for the last 12 years was asked.

"Oh, lawdy, I couldn't count them. There is more than one for every day in the year, I know. And she has as many hats and shoes," the maid said with an exhausted sigh.

GREAT BRITAIN TOOK INITIATIVE

BERLIN, May 30. — (Canadian Press.)—Chancellor Wirth reviewed the Genoa Conference in the Reichstag yesterday. It was Great Britain, he said, who took the initiative in convoking the conference for the purpose of bringing the peoples of Europe together to discuss and remove the differences existing among the peoples of the world. It was a bold, great and sublime idea, perhaps too great to be realized under present conditions.

The absence of the United States and the attitude of France ultimately so restricted the agenda, declared the Chancellor, that the European crisis in its full extent could not be included in the discussions, but though the program was restricted they must be thankful to those who, despite all attempts at sabotage, had sustained the original idea of bringing the nations of the earth together. Dr. Wirth expressed the thanks of the German people and all the afflicted peoples, to Great Britain for her leadership in keeping the conference alive. There had hardly been a conversation among the delegates in which reparations were not discussed, although not a part of the agenda.

The Entente by Article 116 of the peace treaty forced the Germans to make an honorable settlement with Russia.

The main features of the settlement, continued the Chancellor, had been reached long before the Rapallo Treaty, which constituted a bridge between the East and the West, socially and politically. It had been greeted by the workers of the entire world.

"It contains no secret clauses, and therefore no military agreement," he said. "We intend to submit the treaty to the Reichstag for discussion and ratification. The work left unfinished at Genoa will be continued at The Hague. If desired, we are ready, honestly and sincerely to continue our role as mediators. We will gladly promote the truce, but must be able to turn from the unhappy policy of peremptory dates in reparations, which is a continual sword of Damocles over Germany's head.

"The recent contention over reparations may probably be considered as over. We must not mix the European politics with the negotiations going on at Genoa. As the Genoa difficulties were overcome so must the difficulties of the next few weeks be over come, in order that a settlement may finally be reached, which will give the nation the possibility of continued existence."

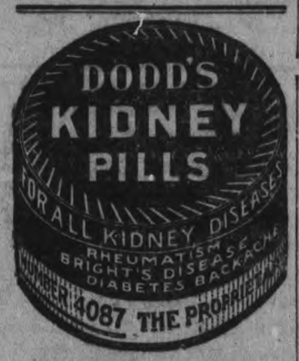
Busines By Mr. Babson

Whenever you think of business conditions you naturally think of Roger Babson. Mr. Babson's views on economics are eagerly looked for by business men all over the continent. As a life-long student of business and finance he has formed certain very definite conclusions regarding the regular ebb and flow of the tide of business. Mr. Babson believes that there are 12 distinct sections of every business movement. He enumerates tham as follows:

1. Every business period begins at the peak of prosperity and is accompanied by large profits in business and high wages to the workers.
2. This is followed by a period of inefficiency, accompanied by a decline on bond prices.
3. Then we have a period of dishonesty and profiteering, accompanied by declining stock prices.
4. Then we have the periodical crime wave with declining commodity prices.
5. Lack of confidence is then everywhere apparent and general unemployment results.
6. This makes it necessary for people to cut down their living expenses, a general trade depression results and land values fall. This is the end of the downward movement and improved conditions usually commence at this point.
7. Thrift becomes more evident and money is more plentiful, interest rates go down; money is available for building and general development purposes. Business begins to get into its stride again.
8. At this stage a by-product of unemployment is plainly noticeable in the form of increased efficiency in the worker. Bond prices begin to increase.
9. People now become more honest in business; fairer prices are asked by both merchants and labor.
10. We can get a dollar in value for every dollar we spend. We are not able to do this in prosperous times.
11. This is followed by great activity in all lines, with labor fully employed.
12. The business period is now at an end. Extravagance and waste now take hold and we are ready to start on a new business period, commencing with Section No. 1 outlined above.

When the situation is set out in such simple language we can readily see how accurate the description is. It is obvious that the change from one step to another in each business period is not so clearly traceable as it is in Mr. Babson's description but the broad trend of business is very plain and can be linked up with Mr. Babson's chart. It is generally agreed that we have reached the sixth phase of this business cycle in Western Canada and the seventh phase is just round the corner.



An Oily Skin

It is difficult to think of anything more disconcerting to a well-gowned, well-groomed woman than the knowledge that her face is shiny. The helplessness such a woman feels despite her beautiful gowning, is a thing pathetic.

And the vanity case, frantically resorted to, is scarcely an aid, for unless a powder is particularly suited to such a skin, it has the trick of caking.

When powder cakes there is just one thing the matter—you haven't found the right one for your skin. You're probably using on your too oily skin a powder highly recommended by your friend who has an exceedingly dry skin.

Use Dry Powder

If your skin is oily you need a dry powder, so before settling to any kind examine it thoroughly. Rub it between your fingers. If it feels dry and light it is the powdder for you. If it feels heavy and has something of the touch of flour avoid it.

Dry skin needs the powder with the soft heavy feeling produced by a generous supply of emollient. This should be put on after cleansing the face with cream, not water. In the case of very dry skin, the astringent used to cut the grease after cream cleansing may be omitted.

A cream rather rich in fats and used after the nightly bath will improve the skin that lacks oil. It acts as a skin food.

Even the oily skin, however, needs a skin food, but it must be selected with great care. It must have a stimulative quality, that is, a quality that gives the skin a freshened feeling when it is applied.

Such a skin food will act on the pores, helping to free them from waste which will eventually result in blackheads or enlarged pores.

STORAGE BATTERY EXPLAINED

BY R. L. DUNCAN

Director, Radio Institute of America

The storage battery, one of the most important parts of the radio receiving set, is usually the most neglected.

There are a few receiving sets on the market that advertise the use of common dry cell batteries for lighting the filament of the vacuum tubes. But they cannot last long. A vacuum tube draws approximately one ampere of current an hour. This pull on a dry battery kills it quickly.

The Bureau of Standards at Washington has announced the development of a radio receiving set that eliminates the storage battery. But, until this is popularized on the market, the radio amateur will have to content himself with the storage battery.

Lead Batteries

There are in general two very good types of storage batteries—the lead plate and the nickel iron-alkali cell.

Lead batteries consist of lead plates immersed in a 20 per cent solution of sulphuric acid. The jar or container for portable batteries used in radio sets is usually of a hard rubber compound.

The plates are usually of the "pasted" variety. They consist of a flat frame or grid which is made of an alloy of lead and antimony, into which the active materials in form of a paste made from the chemicals are pressed. The structure of the grid is such as to hold the materials in place after they have been cemented into a solid mass. Plates which are made in this way are then "formed." This consists of a prolonged charge from a source of direct current which oxidizes the plates intended for the positive until the active material of the plate is transformed into a lead peroxide —the familiar brown material of the positive plate.

The negative plates are reduced from the oxide condition of the paste to a spongy lead which is of a dull gray color.

In making a cell the require number of positive plates are welded to a connecting strap, forming a positive group. Similarly the negative plates are formed into another group which interleave with the plates of the positive.

Operation

During the discharge the peroxide of lead and the active material of the negative plate are converted into lead sulphate which covers the surface of the plates. When they are well covered, the cell is discharged and has to be taken to a station for recharge.

Since it is impracticable to open up the storage battery and look at the plates, one uses a hydrometer to determine the condition of charge or discharge.

It is nothing more than along glass tube with a bulb at one end and a small rod inside loaded with mercury or small shot. There is a graduated numerical scale on the rod leading from 1100 to 1300. This is dropped into the fluid of the storage battery and the bulb is pressed. In case of a lead plate battery the reading on the hydrometer should not be less than 1250.

A Grateful Mother Speaks in Favor of Dr. Henderson's Herb Tablets

Mrs. C. E. Earl, Toronto, says: I am pleased to inform you that our boy, Eddie, has been completely cured of Bladder Trouble through using Dr. Henderson's Herb Tablets. He is now 14 years old and has not been able to retain his urine which caused us a great deal of worry and trouble. We tried different doctors and medicines but never received any help until advised to try your Tablets. After treating with them for a few weeks they have completely cured him. I would advise mothers who have children afflicted in this way to give them a trial. I will consider it a pleasure to explain his case more fully on request.

Should you or any of your children be afflicted in a similar way we are confident they would produce similar results. Don't fail to give them a trial.

Council Session.

The members here sat in Council session, when J. C. Myles asked that a part of Division Street be opened.

The Council adjourned to inspect Division Street, between Wellington and Victoria, as to the advisability of opening same.

The Clerk drew the attention of Council to some of the names that were on the roll. For example, he showed there were three and four people voted and were on the roll as owners. He said this was a case of "moonshine," and not "sunshine."

The ladies of the Grenfell Labrador Medical Mission will hold a grocery shower and exhibit of goods which are ready for shipment to Labrador, on Friday afternoon, June 2nd, in the rooms of the Grafton Company's store on George Street. Donations of cocoa, rice, evaporated milk, raisins, dried fruits, toilet soaps, soups or jellies will be most thankfully received, as they are very much needed for use in the hospitals. Some of the things which we consider common and ordinary here are delicacies on that barren coast. Afternoon tea will be served, and it is hoped that all ladies interested in the work of Dr. Grenfell will attend and view the work which has been so faithfully performed by the ladies who help with the mission work.

He also explained the surgical and convalescent treatment of other acquired deformities resulting from rickets. Curvature of the spine was pointed out to be more common in girls than boys and likely to lead to organic trouble and possibly early death.

In his address Dr. Robertson emphasized that the best results in orthopaedics are obtained in the case of young children. Congenital conditions if not treated before the person has reached the adult age, cannot be as successfully treated as at an earlier time. The injury has in many cases become irreparable.

Carry on Education.

Dr. Robertson said that the young patients in the hospital are educated by a special arrangement with the Board of Education, whereby two teachers carry them on in their studies while they are undergoing treatment that may vary from a few weeks time to months or years. Two trained nurses do massage work. The orthopaedic cases represent about one-tenth of the total number of cases admitted, Dr. Robertson stated.

In moving a vote of thanks, W. R. Breyfogle pointed out that the local club was interesting itself in the crippled children of this city and that a medical board had been appointed, consisting of Dr. W. D. Scott, chairman, Dr. A. W. McPherson, Dr. J. A. Morgan, Dr. F. C. Neal and Dr. G. S. Cameron to take charge of the work. Dr. N. D. Sutton seconded the vote of thanks.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, May 30.—(Canadian Press).—Interest in wheat trade centered to-day at Winnipeg, where of late big operations connected with Chicago dealings have been reported as in progress. It has been general understanding here that huge spread that is simultaneously buying at Winnipeg and selling at Chicago was largely basis of sensational price changes which have characterized Chicago Wheat Market during last few weeks and which have been to great extent responsible for sudden shipment of about ten million bushels of wheat to Chicago. With holiday suspension of business to-day on Chicago Board of Trade, leaders in wheat market watched closely for any unusual developments at Winnipeg.

TO ABOLISH PRIVATE PROPERTY IN BRITAIN

LONDON, May 30 —(Associated Press).—A bill to abolish private property in land and to transfer all lands in Great Britain which is not already the property of the crown or of any public authority to a newly created Ministry of Lands has been introduced into the House of Commons.

In the case of agricultural land, all the buildings (except laborers cottages), and other permanent improvements would be transferred to the new ministry, the measure provides arrangements whereby they can become the property of the tenant and far part mof the tenant right, together with all other improvements made by him.

Compensation to owners is to be paid in the form of five per cent National Land Stock (providing an annual income equal to the present net letting value of the land transferred) redeemable at par after 50 years.

After the redemption of the stock, one-fourth of the net revenue of the land would be applicable to national purposes and three-fourths to local purposes.

THE HOME CIRCLE

MY LITTLE HOUSE

I wish I had a little house
Within a little garden plot.
Within just a tiny square of lawn
To bleach the household linen on.

A sweetbriar bush beside the fdoor
And honeysuckle in the hedge
A shady porch along one side
Where I can sit in all my pride.

From door to hedge a path of brick,
Bordered by box and brilliant bloom;
An apple tree against the wall
Laden with ripe fruit in the fall.

Beyond the hedge a country road,
Beyond wide fields and farmsteads gray;
Oh, I can see it all so plain,
See it in sunshine and in rain!

I can hear too, the robins sing
At sunrise in the apple boughs,
And I can hear the meadow lark
Between the daylight and the dark.

I smell the bush beside the door,
The honeysuckle in the hedge,
And in the fields across the way
The fragrance of the farmers' hay.

Is it a dream? It seems so clear,
With bush and tree, and hedge and walk,
And just that tiny square of lawn
To bleach the household linen on!
—Elisa Van Wyck.

"Good sportsmanship in marriage" is a sure antidote for the divorce evil, according to Thomas F. Graham, Judge of the Supreme Court, of the State of California. He says marriage is to be regarded as a fifty-fifty proposition. Preparadness is essential with follow-up of tact patience, tolerance, honesty, humor and an infinite capacity for forgiveness. The increase in divorce is attributed to sportiness and the lack of sportsmanship.

As a remedy for this growing evil it is suggested that no girl should be permitted to marry until she has a practical knowledge of housekeeping. She should be instructed in both prenatal and postnatal care of children and she should be made to see that marriage is a matter of give and take.

No man should become a husband without a clean bill of health and without the ability to earn a wage sufficient to keep himself and his wife comfortable and with an outlook for children.

Judge Graham thinks if these rules were followed there would be a rapid decrease in the number of divorces and undoubtedly he is correct. However, it is going to take a lot of education to make people realize this and to make them go against the strong urge of human nature. When two young people decide they want to marry, it takes a whole lot to make them stop and consider the education of the wife as far as the care of children are concerned, the ability to cook or the wage earning capacity of the husband. Such consideration comes only with age and wisdom.

Lady Astor, the first woman to gain a seat in the English Parliament and who has been paying a visit to her native country, America, believes that the only way to improve conditions is to instill in the children a desire for better lives. And she is correct, for the little children of today will be the law-makers or the law-breakers tomorrow.

On the mothers and fathers rests the burden of the future welfacre of the country and God grant that they may live up to their responcibility.

Alfred E. Stearns, principal of Phillips Academy at Andover, asks in the Woman's Home Companion that we give youth its chance. He is not in sympathy with the social conditions that force young college boys to resort to police protection to insure ordinary decency at a fraternity dance. He appeals with the mothers to play fair with youths. The most potent influence today in the lives of boys and girls are the movies, popular literature, and the social life which comprises the prevalent extravagance in music, dancing, fashion and the free indulgence of liquor. Youth will respond to its better self when the appeal is clear and compelling

VESTIGA
(From Harper's)

I took a day to search for God,
And found him not. But as I trod
By rocky ledge, through woods untamed,
Just where one scarlet flamed lily
I saw his footprint in the sod.

Then suddenly, all unaware,
Far off in the deep shadows, where
A solitary hermit thrush
Sang through the holy twilight hush
I heard his voice upon the air.

And even as I marvelled how
God gives us Heaven here and now,
In a stir of wind that hardly shook
The poplar leaves beside the brook—
His hand was light upon my brow.

At last with evening as I turned Homeward, and thought what I had learned
And all that there was still to probe—
I caught the glory of his robe
Where the last fires of sunset burned.

Back to the world with quickening start
I looked and longed for any part
In making saving beauty be,
And from that kindling ecstacy
I knew God dwelt within my heart.
—Bliss Carmen

People living near mountains are peculiarly fortunate in having the influence of those calm and unmoved hills to still the tempestuousness of human emotions.

In the morning when you look at the mountain it is almost entirely obscured by mists and clouds and it does not seem possible that a mountain is really there, but as the clouds clear away and the mountain stands forth in all its magnificant grandeur.

This is a good deal the way we find things in our life. Some times the troubles crowd so thick about us that they almost hide the possibility of the Supreme Being who is guiding us ever onward to the complete consciousness of his truth and love. But gradually these mists clear away and we come into the glorious realization of God's omnipotent power.

It is rather a pity that people always connect the moon with such cheap sentimentality for it is really worthy of much better things.

The root of most of our troubles and sorrows lies in our conceit. Our own troubles seem to each of us the most dire trouble in the world and we succeed in feeling very, very sorry for ourselves.

About the time we could profit by thinking of all the trouble the moon has seen and how, unmoved, it glides through it all. It viewed the flood, the destruction of Rome, the Indian massacres and the World War, events that make our own troubles seem petty and insignificant and it continues to do its work calmly without any hint of disturbance.

Difficulties always melt away as you approach them. But the faster you run away from them the greater they become. We only grow by attempting things which seem a little beyond our power and each success is like a rung in a ladder and boosts us on towards the next.

Let the timid man take heart for we are all made of the same stuff. And it is not so much that one man is better luck than another that he succeeds so well. It is far more likely to be because he takes better advantage of each opportunity as it presents itself and does not et a good one slip by because he is afraid he may get a load he cannot carry.

We all make mistakes and the best of us have learned by the mistakes they made on jobs which the worst of us were afraid to tackle.

If the earth turned around in about and hour and a half instead of 24 hours things would have practically no weight at the equator.

If You Have a Bad Camera Face Don't Despair--Try a Kalogram!

By MARIAN HALE.

Some faces respond kindly to photography. Others do not.

But if you are like the majority of us—if your photographs always look pitifully like yourself instead of like the glorious creature you would be if your thoughts could make you so—do not lose heart.

For the fault lies not with you, but with the camera.

You need a more personal medium. Perhaps you will be more truthfully portrayed by a kalogram. A kalogram suggests your personality, but does not teli everything about your face.

With the letters of your name and five minutes' conversation with you, Miss Brown has all the material she needs. But sometimes the composition takes several days.

* * *

Kalograms got their start this way.

One night Miss Brown read that a man attempted suicide.

Evidently soul painting was no easy task, or had been highly unremunerative, for after a few attempts the artist had been ready to end it all.

Miss Brown felt no urge to follow in his footsteps, but she did share his ideal—to paint something besides features. She had always believed personalities were more interesting than the conventional assortment of eyes and chins.

"The details of a face always escape me, but the personality makes a deep impression," she explains.

"I remember people's likes and dislikes and their fads and forget how they looked.

"So I began to experiment with the drawing of a personality, and finally conceived the idea of drawing it with the letters of the name.

"Up to this time my particular branch of art had been the making of silhouettes. I had made one for practically every actor and actress in New York and I made thousands in France for soldiers.

* * *

"I tried out the kalogram idea on the theatrical people, and they liked it. They used kalograms on their stationery and for book plates and pictures.

"Then, quite, unexpectedly, the idea became very popular, and now everyone wants a kalogram. For stationery some people like a conventional arrangement like the one I made for Anne Morgan.

"Wen Molla Bjursted, the tennis champion, married and became Molla Mallory, she changed her kalogram as well as her name. Now she has one for professional and one for home use.

"Marion Campbell isn't a professional woman, but she is an enthusiastic motorist. So her kalogram indicates that."

"Now there's a real problem," she admitted, "trying to make a picture out of seven letters—but give me time, I'll get it."

SOME OF MISS BROWN'S BEST KALOGRAMS. EACH IS MADE FROM THE LETTERS O F THE NAME OF THE PERSON IT REPRESENTS.

TRUE DETECTIVE STORIES

ONLY A TRIFLE

(Copyright, 1920, By The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

The death of Leon Olbert, the old antique dealer on the Rue Royale, was not even entered in the annals of the Parisian police force at the time it occurred. There was nothing in the least suspicious about it. The old man had been ailing for some time, but had refused to call in a doctor, because as he said, there was no one available to look after his valuable collection of paintings and precious jewels. He was the only one who knew about his stock, and he feared that if he secured an assistant, he might lose a valuable sale through the fellow's ignorance or stupidity.

Thus it was that when a gendarme noted that the light was still burning in the store at six o'clock one morning, he sensed immediately what had happened. Entering, his suspicions were verified. Propped up in a chair with a newspaper still clucthed in his cold, rigid hands, was Olbert. He had died in the night, and the physician called in to examine the body stated that his death had been due to heart failure, a trouble from which the old man had suffered for some time past.

Merely as a matter of routine, several minor police officials were summoned to examine the premises and see if anything had been stolen during the night. But the stock was in such disorder that it was impossible to tell if anything were missing. The dealer had made no inventory of his possessions, and there was therefore no indication that a passing thief had taken advantage of the old man's death.

"But they could have made off with goods valued at thousands of francs, and we would have been none the wiser," declared M. Robert, one of the detectives assigned to the case. "From a thief's standpoint the shop is ideal. Plenty of jewels and silverware scattered all over the place. If it hadn't been for the physician's testimony about heart failure, I would be inclined to the belief that the old man had been murdered. I wonder——" and his voice trailed off into silence.

"Rot!" exclaimed one of his associates. "You're always trying to stir up trouble where none exists. Come on, there's nothing more for us here."

"Possibly not for you," was Robert's reply, "but I'm going to look into matters a little more thoroughly. Something has just occurred to me."

And that night the Prefect of Police was astonished when Robert appeared with the startling statement that Olbert had been murdered, presumably on account of the value of his possessions, some of which he believed to have been stolen.

"Have you proof that anything is missing?" demanded the Prefect.

"None," admitted Robert. "But I have positive proof that the antique dealer was killed. I don't care what the physicians say—there's one point you all overlooked, one damning bit of evidence which was so plain as to be obscure. No, I don't care to say what it is at this time. All I want is permission to track the men responsible for this crime. I'll guarantee to find them and to provide the necessary proof of their guilt."

The days stretched into weeks and the weeks into months before Robert was able to report any material success The Olbert case became one of the classic jokes of the Parisian police force. But Robert remained true to his conviction that a murder had been committed. To support this theory, he had something that the rest of the force did not know about—the signed statement of an eminent Parisian surgeon who had examined the body and who declared that Olbert had met his death through pressure on the jugular veim and not from the heart. But this was not the foundation of Robert's theory. He based his deductions on something far more trifling, a mere detail n the stage setting for the crime which lifted it out of the ordinary run of murders and placed it in the category of the unusual and the bizarre.

After weeks of patient investigation, the detective succeeded in tracing a valuable bit of jewelry which Olbert had bought a few days before his death, but which had not been in the store when it was searched by the police. A search of the pawn shops on the far side of the Seine brought the jewel to light, and with it the information that it had been pledged by one Edouard Veillard, well known to the police as a daring and skilful burglar.

Working backward from this clue, Robert located two of Veillard's associates and arrested them, taking care that they were lodged in separate cells. By working on each one separately and by making clever use of the information which they let fall in the course of their protestations of innocence, Robert was finally able to pierce together the story of the crime. The three of them, it developed, had passed Olbert's shop on the night before the body was found, had noted that the old man was still up and that the door was unlocked, and had entered with the intention of tying up the dealer and rifling the store. Veillard had grasped him from behind by the neck, and had evidently pressed too hard on his jugular vein, for the old man went limp in their arms and died a moment or two later. It was at Veillard's suggestion that they had propped him up in his chair and left him, but fear that his body would be seen from the street prevented them looting the store as they had intended. Each of the men swore that they had stolen nothing and placed the blame of the whole affair on Veillard's shoulders.

That afternoon Robert arrested the burglar, charging him with the murder of Leon Olbert.

"You mean the old antique dealer on the Rue Royale?" exclaimed Veillard. "He wasn't killed. He died in his chair of heart failure."

"I have two witnesses that testify otherwise," Robert retorted, "in addition to the evidence of one of the best surgeons in Paris. But the best proof of all is that Olbert couldn't read—and you made the fatal mistake of propping him up with in his chair a newspaper in his hands!"

Childish fears and childish sorrows are more real and more difficult to bear than the fears and sorrows of later life. Measured by adult reasoning, the latter may seem greater that at time. Most of us have learned in the hard school of experience not to expect that life will bring us only good things.

With a child it is different. They have had no experience to help them over the hard places. They came upon them unprepared. Let us remember this in dealing with children. Through their fears may seem to us mere fancies they are terrifying to a child; though their sorrows may seem trivial a little heart is easily broken.

Soap Granules absolutely different

RINSO is the most wonderful cleanser for the family wash that you ever took into your home. It will wash clothes perfectly clean week after week just by soaking overnight and rinsing in the morning—but Rinso is absolutely different from all other soaps or washing powders, therefore it is necessary to use it according to directions. Do not put the Rinso right from the package into the tub, but make the famous Rinso solution first. It's very easy and the results are simply wonderful.

IF YOU USE A WASHING MACHINE

Soak your clothes in the Rinso suds as usual; in the morning add more Rinso solution and work the machine. Then rinse and dry—you will have a clean sweet snow white wash.

Simplicity Marks Graduation Clothes

TWO OF THE SEASON'S FAVORITE STYLES IN HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATION GOWNS.

BY MARIAN HALE.

You may side with the medical profession and declare the flapper to be the hit of this generation—

Or you may cast your vote with the faction who sees in her a menace to our social structure.

But you may be sure she will go right ahead defying traditions and leaving her mark on everything she touches.

You feel her influence nowhere more strongly than in our annual institution, soon to be solemnized the high school commencement.

There was a time not so long ago, when a girl's graduation frock was long, and her hair was done high on her head to indicate her playtime was over.

These days, however, the flapper now finishes school in the same casual, detached way she does everything else.

Gone are the frills, the white satin ribbons, the yards of lace and the low-cut gowns. The 1922 graduation frock is so simple it is almost a uniform.

"For a long time teachers and parents tried to regulate the extravagance of girl graduates", a saleswoman in one of New York's largest apartment stores told me.

"In many schools teachers insisted upon a uniform of a middy blouse and skirt, so that all the girls might have an equal chance.

"Often they found it advisable to limit the number of flowers a girl might carry, and sometimes they abolished them altogether.

"Now such measures are not necessary. Flappers adopt uniforms of their own accord, and most of them wouldn't be bothered with carrying flowers. Instinctively, they select the plainest clothes in the store.

"Time and time again a mother calls for something lacey and fluffy only to be firmly declined by the flapper daughter."

The materials, I learned, that seemed to find most favor are georgette crepe and canton crepe with crepe de chines, organdies, and voiles following closely.

Some girls are making a concession and wearing a white ribbon in their bobbed tresses, but most of them prefer to let the joy in its comfort keep it uncontined.

Except for her beloved carriage, and possibly a string of beads, the flapper will be graduated without jewels.

MUST REDUCE RAILWAY PAY

Best Way to Accomplish This is to Cut Rates

OTTAWA, May 30. — Speaking before the committee on railway transportation rates this morning, Hon. George Langley of Saskatchewan, said that railway wages must come down, as the wages of farm laborers had, and that the best way to do this was to reduce the rates. He said that there was little prospect of reducng railway wages as long as the rates were kept up, for the employees would then think that there was no necessity of accepting less.

Speaking from experience in Saskatchewan, he said that farm wages had gone down very much during the last ten years. The deflation had started with the farmer first, but in so far as wages generally were concerned, should not stop there.

He also expressed the opinion that the question of rates should be viewed from the probability of lower wages and not from the standpoint that wages would continue to remain as they are.

Mr. Langley based his argument for the return of the Crow's Nest Pass agreement on the ground that as the West had kept its agreement on the matter of the C.P.R. tax exemption, the company should keep it's, with respect to the Crow's Nest Pass. The prosperity of all Canada was also bound up with the continued development of the West.

Norman Lambert also testified for the Canadian Council of Agriculture, contending that the Crow's Nest Pass agreement should come into full effect because the existing rates were too high.

RADIO OUTFIT ON THE MONROE RACER.

INDIANAPOLIS May 30.—Radio is going to help automobile racers, at the annual 500-mile classic May 30, keep in close touch with their pits. It will transplant the conventional blackboard signals.

Two Ford racers and a Monroe team have already fixed up their machines to carry radio receiving sets. On the Monroe, the set is attached to the right side, so that the mechanic can operate it easily.

All parts of this set are suspended on springs so as not to be damaged by vibration. The antenna stretches alongside the chasis from one end to the other. The car itself acts as ground.

The requirements of this set are similar to those of airplanes, except that the aerial is much smaller. A special airplane helmet, designed to muffle engine noises, will be used and the ignition cables will be run in metallic shielding to prevent noises from the ignition system.

ECZEMA ON FACE AND HEAD FOR FIVE YEARS

Eczema or salt rheum, as it is so often called, manifests itself in little round pimples which contain an extremely irritating fluid. These break and subsequently a crust or scale is formed and the intense burning, itching and smarting, especially at night or when the part is exposed to a strong heat, is almost unbearable and relief is gladly welcomed.

There is only one way to get relief and no remedy like

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

Take it internally and it gets at the seat of the disease in the blood and drives it out of the system.

Apply it externally and it takes out the itching, stinging and burning and promotes healthly healing.

Mrs. J. Sage, 215 Princess Ave., Vancouver, B. C., writes: "Having suffered with eczema on the face and head, for the last five years, I consulted several doctors, and tried various kinds of salves and lotions, but I derived no benefit from any of them. I did not know what to do until a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters, and after I had used two bottles I began to get better and now after taking eight bottles I have not even a blotch on me. I feel that I cannot praise B. B. B. too highly. I hope you will make full use of this recommendation for the benefit of those who are suffering from this terrible complaint, eczema."

that, according to medical opinion, bleeding does not occur after death.

The police were notified this afternoon from the Cherrett home that a baseball contract had been found among Roy's effects, suggesting that he might have left Peterborough to play with some other team. It is apparently signed by a fictitious name, but is said to be none the less his.

From another source it was learned that several weeks ago a commotion had been noticed at the Cherrett place that might indicate strained internal relations. A neighbor who had got out of bed about 6 a.m. looked out of his window to scan the sky for weather signs, and saw a woman apparently caught in the balcony of the Cherrett house. An elderly woman was seen crossing the street carrying a ladder, and a moment later a young man went up the ladder and carried the younger woman from the balcony railing into the house.

The informant of this occurrence did not know the family at the time as they had moved in only a few days before, but from his statement it is believed that it was the young wife who was seen as if caught in the balcony and that she was rescued by her husband, Roy Cherrett.

The police have been deterred from pressing their investigations at the Cherrett home. Mrs. Roy Cherrett nervously clasped and unloosed her hands while she was interviewed by Detective Meagher, and nearly collapsed when the finding of her mother-in-law's body was announced to her. Dr. Carmichael said that it was necessary that he be present while the police were seeking information at the house, and because of the distraught condition of Mrs. Cherrett, the police have not pursued several lines of conjecture which might offer an explanation of the absence of the young husband.

Roy Cherrett's many friends confidently believe that he is out of town and unaware of his mother's death. Several of the ball players who were intimate with him recall that he appeared erratic of late, and on second thought some of his actions appear somewhat irrational. He played the shortstop position on last year's Peterborough team in the Central Ontario League, and was one of the cleverest infielders in the League. He has many friends and more admirers in Peterborough and in the towns of the Central Ontario circuit, who are grieved beyond expression at the tragic death of the mother, whose thoughts and life were wrapped up in her son.

Here are the proper figures for an up-to-the minute portrait of the latest wrangle between Capital and Labor——

A slender little beauty, all silk and chiffon, kicking her pretty pins over the footlights, winking at the bald heads and wafting kisses to the lads in the gallery—that's Labor! And a languid gentleman who dresses more like a matinee idol than a magnate and answers to the nick-name of "Ziggie"—that's Cap'tal! Put a few powder puffs in place of the picks; substitute lobster and smuggled champagne for the dinner pail, and the picture begins to take form.

For Broadway, instead of the coal fields of West Virginia, is the newest union battleground; the chorines in "Ziegfeld's Follies" are the warring wage earners in the beauty union; Florenz Ziegfeld, Jr., is the head of the beauty trust they are fighting; and the scrap has reached the stage where the toiler-broilers threatened to strike, and Ziegfeld "fired" all sixty of them.

The world's most famous beauties sporting union cards just like miners or brick-masons; walking delegates superseding Johnnies at the stage door; dainty dancers crying for "time and a half for overtime"; bosses charging cuties with maaing anarchistic speeches; even the possibility of the public facing a famine in girly-girly shows—these are all part of the "props" in theaterdom's labor drama now being enacted with all the intensity of a nation-wide railroad strike.

Flo Ziegfeld and the Chorus Equity Association, which is the company name of the chorus girls' union, have never been chummy. Any chorus girl can belong to the Equity who keeps the rules and pays $1 a month dues. She becomes a regular "union girl," for the Chorus Equity is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor just like the Bricklayers' Union, the Gasfitters' Local or any other.

Flo Ziegfeld has fought the Equity from the first. He wants to make his own laws for his own shows. The former husband of Anna Held and the present spouse of Billie Burke is primarily a beauty-picker, and he says he won't have any walking delegates walking back of his stage and whispering union talk into the shell-pink ears of the beauties he's picked.

That was the first issue on which Ziegfeld and the Equity split. It reached a deadlock when Ziegfeld declared he'd close his theatre before he'd let a delegate pass the stage door. Another clash came last Fall, when the "Follies" began the annual tour.

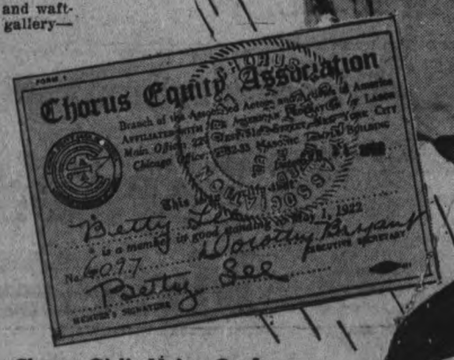
Eleven of the sixty members who packed their trunks for departure packed union cards along with their pretties. But first they had a pow-wow with "Ziggie." He told them he'd pay them the minimum wage prescribed by the Equity, $35 a week, and an additional $10 a week because they were going on the road. He says they accepted. They admit they accepted—but with reservations.

Pittsburgh welcomed the "Follies" so joyfully that an extra matinee was given. By Equity rules, an extra matinee calls for an additional one-eighth of her salary for every little union coryphee.

One of the eleven union girls in the "Follies" was Bessie Poole, also known as Elizabeth Chatterton. When she got her pay envelope at the end of the Pittsburgh week, she pulled out $35, her salary, and $10, the extra bonus promised for the road tour. But—that was all.

Bessie cheeped loudly. She wanted her one-eighth, her $4 plus, for the extra matinee. "Where do you get that stuff?" asked Ziegfeld's manager. Wasn't Mr. Ziegfeld paying her a ten-plunk bonus? Wasn't the extra one-eighth included in that? "You bet!" said the manager. "You bet—not!" cheeped Bessie.

The cheeping led to an arbitration conference in New York between the Equity and the Producing Managers' Association. Bessie won the decision in the first round. Mr. Ziegfeld, in addition to paying Bessie her $4 plus, put out an extra one-eighth of their weekly salary to the entire company, union girls or not.



A Chorus Girl's Union Card —Issued to Betty Lee by the Chorus Equity Association, to Indicate That She Was in Good Standing, Entitled to Union Wages and Affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

The "Follies" flitted into Detroit. Mr. Ziegfeld's business manager, Sam Kingston, flitted in at the same time. He brought sixty new contracts which he said the Equity had approved. Everybody signed but Bessie. She said she'd hear from the Equity before she'd sign. While Bessie waited to hear, she got her honorable discharge.

"You can't fire me!" declared Bessie. "You fired yourself when you refused to sign!" she was told. Bessie said she'd have justice or know why. Another rebel joined her. This was Ruth Andrews, who had been discharged when she failed to show up at the theater one night: Her doctor, she declared, had telephoned she was sick. Bessie and Ruth announced they would stick with the company till they got their rights.

They stuck. By the time the "Follies" hit Chicago for a dizzy Christmas week, everything and everybody was red hot, including the telegraph wires to Ziegfeld in New York. Ziegfeld was branding Bessie Poole as a trouble-maker. She was getting up a petition declaring she wasn't any such thing, and demanding reinstatement. Among those who signed it were Raymond Hitchcock, Florence O'Denishawn, Fannie Brice, Ray Dooley, Van and Schenck and other notables.

The "Follies" arrived in Chicago Sunday morning. They were to open Sunday night. At five minutes after 8 o'clock, just ten minutes before the curtain was to rise, Edward Rosenbaum, company manager, rubbing his hands gleefully over the S. R. O. house, looked up and beheld a formidable delegation approaching him in the wings.

A group of chorus girls headed the party. They were accompanied by a lawyer, the traveling representative of the Equity, and representatives of the Stage Hands' and Musicians' Unions. The lawyer poked into Mr. Rosenbaum's paralyzed fingers a contract which he was to sign. It called for immediate reinstatement of Miss Poole and Miss Andrews. It called for permission for walking delegates of the Equity to come behind the scenes. It called for other things—all of them pet abominations of Flo Ziegfeld.

"Sign or there'll be no show to-night!" was the ultimatum served on Mr. Rosenbaum. The manager protested. The manager pleaded. The striking chorines were just as hard-boiled as so many pick-heavers. They were backed up, they informed Mr. Rosenbaum, by the Musicians' Union and the Stage Hands' Union, their "brothers" in unionism.

Out in front Mr. Rosenbaum could hear restless cheering and whistling. Figures danced before Mr. Rosenbaum's eyes——$4,500 in the house that night; $60,000 advance sale already. And it would all take wings if he didn't sign on the dotted line! Mr. Rosenbaum signed.

When the news reached New York, it had the effect of dynamite on the temperamental Mr. Ziegfeld. Reinstate a girl who had fired herself! Allow walking delegates to have the run of his stage! Why, that was a privilege he had accorded nobody—ever! Mr. Ziegfeld jabbed one finger on a button, and yelled for his stenographer.

The Chicago strike was, in his own language, the last straw.

"This is the blow-off!" he cried.

He wrote a letter, demanding a meeting of the Equity and the Producing Managers' Association. He issued orders closing the "Follies" four weeks ahead of schedule—because, he declared, it would cost the actors $64,000 in salaries and teach them a lesson. And, by refusing to make a new contract with any of the sixty chorus girls, in effect he fired them all

"Mr. Ziegfeld is in the wrong and knows it," declared Paul Dullzell, for the Equity. "The whole trouble was caused because this man, who boasts of his million-dollar productions, begrudged a little chorus girl a few cents extra to which she was entitled by extra work."

"I have been very unjustly treated," asserts Ziegfeld. "Conditions in the theatre to-day are deplorable. No self-respecting manager would tolerate them. There'll be brand-new faces in my next show. The girls will be young and they will be amateurs. And, if the Equity makes the chorus a closed shop by 1924, as it threatens to do, that's when I'll quit the show business in America!"

Unless all the schools represented have equipment for practice they should be omitted. Eight pound shot is to be preferred to the twelve-pound shot, as it is conductive to better form.

HOLDERNESS THE NEW GOLF CHAMP

PRESTWICK, Scotland, May 30. (Canadian Press.)—Eddie H. Durnnew amateur golf champion is Ernest W. Holderness, an Englishman. His runner-up, John Caven, a young Scotchman, stuck to him like a burr throghout the final round of the tournament Saturday afternoon, the match providing one of the most sensationally interesting tilts in golfing historyy.

Holderness, who was born in India, in 1890, entered the tournament from Walton Heath. He played for the Oxford-Varsity team three years, beginning in 1910, and against America in last year's tournament. He won the Oxford and Cambridge Society's tournament three times and this year he established a new record for the Walton Heath Club. This is the third successive year that an Oxfordian has fought through the amateur finals.

Caven, 27 years old, is a member of thfe Cochran Castle Club. He is an engineer employed by the Paisley firm. Although he won the Eden tournament at St. Andrew's, he was comparatively inexperienced in big championship matches. For that reason his coolness and unshaken courage in yesterday's nerve-racking struggle was regarded as remarkable.

To Regulate Amateur Radio

The latest proposal for government regulation of amateur radio may mean the scrapping of practically half the number of radio receiving sets now in use.

The final report of the radio conference of the U. S. Department of Commerce includes a recommendation for federal action which would cause all single-tuner circuits to be discarded as illegal. Part of the report reads:

"It is recommended that the secretary of commerce, at his discretion, prohibit at any time the use of existing radio receiving apparatus which may cause the radiation of energy."

This applies to the single-tuner circuit receiving set. Another familiar name for this set is the oscillating circuit set.

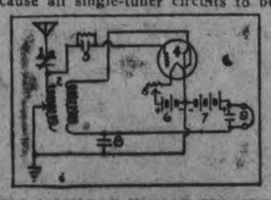

FIG. 1. SINGLE-TUNER CIRCUIT

Single Tuner.

Such a set is constructed so that feeble radiation of continuous waves are emitted through the aerial while in the process of receiving. Such radiations may cause considerable local interference in the transmission of messages.

An example of a single-tuner circuit is shown in Figure 1. It may be noted that the detector tube, which oscillates while receiving, is directly connected with the aerial. Energy is transferred from the B. battery through the secondory of the variocoupler, to the plate, then back through the grid into the aerial.

The hook-up of this form of set is:

1. Variable condenser; 2. Variocoupler; 3. Grid leak and condenser; 4. Detector tube; 5. Filament rheostat; 6. A-Batery; 7. B-Battery; 8. Fixed condenser; 9. Phones shunted with fixed condenser.

Triple Tuner.

In the three-tuner circuit, back radiation is practically eliminated. This is because best receiving results are obtained by keeping the detector tube below the oscillating point by action of the grid and plate variometers.

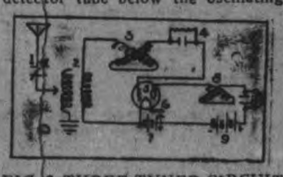

FIG. 2. THREE-TUNER CIRCUIT

1. Varaible condenser; 2. Variocoupler; 3. Grid Variometer; 4. Grid leak and condenser; 5. Detector tube; 6. Filament rheostat; 7. A-Battery; 8. Plate variometer; 9. B-Battery; 10. Phones shunted with fixed condenser.

RIVERSIDES WON FROM ATHLETICS

Riversides nosed out a win from the Athletics by the score of 2 goals to 1 in the second game of the city lacrosse schedule at Nicholls Oval last night. Good goal tending accounted largely for the small score and also for its closeness. Another factor was the number of shots that went wide of both nets from both inside and outside the respective defenses. Loose playing was a conspicuous defect in the play, but this was counter-balanced by neat and snappy work especially in the centre field. All the goals came in the second quarter, Bert Todd slipping one past Meyette, and Jimmy Graham equalizing for Riversides after Jack Lebarr has stopped two or three hot ones. McDonald put the Ashburnham squad ahead just before the half time bell, and in the third and fourth sessions neither team could score although the Athletics maintained a persistent rally in the last ten minutes, Todd, Grover Halpin and Keith Mein buzzing around the Riverside nets in the descending dusk but failing to get the counter they needed.

The game was keenly contested and was an interesting exhibition of lacrosse, indictaing the possibilities of the city league developing the younger players who on the whole showed well. "Bill" Harcourt handled it in fine style, and his cautions and corrections were just the experience and guidance some of boys require at the present stage of their development.

The teams lined up as follows:

Riversides—Goal Meyette, points, Dillon and Debey, defense Hormel and Leonard, centre J. Graham, home Miller and J. McCoy, outside home McDonald, inside home Dunk.

Athletics— Goal Jack Lebarr, points George Mein and C. Lowes, defense Taylor and Fuller, centre F. Wolff home G. Halpin and Simms, outside home Bert Todd inside home K. Mein; spares M. Kenneally, Sturgeon, Curtin and Foy.

Referee—W. A. Harcourt.

In the first half Lebarr who bids fair to equal or even excel his older brother Lou as a net guardian was called upon to make half a dozen saves, and in the second half Meyette for Riversides held out the Athletics when they were trying to tie the score. Lebarr made a fine stop of a fast one from McDonald's stick in the final session, and Meyette blocked a hot one with his chest pad from Todd. One of the greatest plays of the game occurred just before the final whistle when after Halpin's drive was turned aside, he and Todd and Keith Mein worked close inside. Todd flipped it to Mein who tried to toss the ball in from just outside the crease, but Meyette blocked in fine style.

Dillon and Hormel broke up many of the Athletic rushes, Dillon being particularly effective in his own work and in the coaching of his recruits. Jimmy Graham at centre worked hard all evening and had nothing left in the last ten minutes Jim McCoy, and Dunk comprised a shifty home division for the Sutherland clan from over the river.

For the Athletics George Mein surprised the crowd by his good work in front of Lebarr. Taylor helped him materially but Athletics defense was upset early in the game and never readily recovered. Fuller and Wolff are a likely looking pair of youngsters around centre, and Todd on the home was as tricky and clever as of old. Their entire home section shaped up wel in action but they failed to get goals. Some of them held the ball too long and failed trying to dodge through the Riverside defense where a freer passing game might have been more productive. Apparently they were depending on Todd to do the shooting, and while he got their only goal his other tries were either blocked or wet aside. Mart Kenneally fited in well while he was on and the team as a whole will soon break into the column of wins.

The Local Bowlers Open On Thursday

The official opening of the lawn bowling green will take place on Thursday evening. The annual match between rinks representing the President and Vice-President will be played.

The lawns are in first-class condition, and this season promises to be one of the best on record for the local bowlers. Prospective members are invited to get in touch with the Secretary.

THE RAZZING OF RUTH

For Mr. George Herman Ruth's insubordinate behaviour in throwing dust on the umpire who called him out there is no extenuation. His invasion of the grand stand in pursuit of a man who was saying things about and to him was improper and deplorable, but there was provocation. He has been back in the game less than a week after a long suspension. Yet a large part of the baseball populace expect him to produce a home run every time he comes up; and if he fails he gets, in the colloquial, "the raspberry". The fact that he batted his team into a championship las year is forgotten; if he hit fifty-nine home runs in 1921, that proves nothing to a good many Polo Ground judges, except that he ought to hit at least sixty this season. If he doesn't, he will be lucky to escape pop bottles, tossed by spectators who never took any exercise beyond lighting cigars.

Baseball is a noble game, but the crowds that watch it average about as low in sportsmanship as any mass of human beings that can be found anywhere. Umpires are safer than they used to be, but the wrath once visited on them is now largely directed towrds the home team if it happens to have an off day. And the greater the hero the more prompt and vicious is the jeering when he falls into the slump that even the greatest heroes must have now and then. A pitcher wavering on the verge of collapse, but still able to pull himself together if he can set his mind to it, is apt to be pushed over the edge by premature demands of "Take him out!" A manager who wins the championship in a hard fight, after barely missing it in two or three previous hard fights, is the target of constant attack from critics who could hardly be more vicious if the team had finished in the second division.

One is inclined to doubt if our national sport is baseball, or even the watching of baseball. About the only form of exercise in which the average citizen seems to take any real pleasure is swinging the metaphoric "hammer."

Capitol Entertainment

Something distinctly out of the ordinary, a bizarre spectacle that presents with fidelity the barbaric splendor of another age, is the "Queen of Sheba" at the Capitol Theatre. A filled theatre last night watched with spellbound attention the unfolding of the tale which the producer has built up in an idealized version of the love of King Solomon, the wisest of men, for the Queen who came from a far country to learn wisdom from his lips. The rigid atmosphere of later Biblical times is lacking, and the effect realized by the makers of the picture is one of voluptuous splendor, with the grandeur of the King's court reproduced against backgrounds of massive gorgeousness, mighty pillars of stone surrounding marble-tiled courts, huge amphitheatres with balconies guarded by crouching bronze lions, interminable golden stairways leading to the central figure, the regal king on his throne. Elaborate settings characterize every scene; velvet hangings and weird architectural effects, courts with splashing fountains and ebony slaves waving huge palm-leaf fans; the wonderful dance of the peacocks, the pomp and panoply of a forgotten, gorgeous age, the glittering costumes and pearl head-dresses of the women.

The action is swift and vivid, the passions of love, hate, jealousy and ambition striving for mastery in a series of thrilling scenes. Sheba, the beautiful, having killed Amrud, who has caused her sister's death, journeys to a far country to visit the wise Solomon. Both he and his brother, Adonijah, love her, but Solomon's wife, Amath, is a daughter of Pharaoh, the Egyptian king, and the king cannot wed his heart's desire. The Princess Vashti plots with Adonijah for the throne. Magnificent acting is presented in the scenes between Solomon and the beautiful Queen, who finally parts from him and returns to her own country, the long camel train with its turbaned slaves bearing her back over palm-strewn desert plains. Later, she sends her little son, David, back to visit Solomon, whose brother abducts the child, and brings on a furious fighting scene between his own men and the King's retainers. The arrival of Sheba with her warriors, the re-union of the two after many years, provides a stirring interval, with the fierce hand-to-hand fighting of those days, the battering rams and fire-arrows, the spectacular affray on the drawbridge between blood-thirsty warriors to rivet the attention of the audience with their fierce passion.

An extraordinary scene is the chariot race around the huge circular arena, four steeds to each chariot, eight of which strive for mastery, the galloping horses flashing by in a struggle which ends in fatality for several. Vashti challenges the Queen to a race, and the women charioteers compete, the white Arabian steeds of Sheba winning by a length after a fierce, grueling, headlong race.

And there is the moving pathos of the scene between the two mothers in the Judgment of Solomon and the reel that depicts the final conversion of the pagan queen to the God of Israel over the body of her child, returning to life beneath the touch of the Lord's grace, in answer to the prayer of the mighty King.

With this week's programme is included an excellent comedy and the tenth episode of the serial, "White Eagle."

AT THE ROYAL.

Constance Talmadge, in the clever feature called "Good References," establishes her title, so generally accorded of being leading comedienne of the movies to-day. "Good References" is one of those bright dramas in which clean, sparkling, high-class comedy dominates every situation. A girl, well born and well educated, is left penniless in New York. She applies for a situation as private secretary to a rich society woman, but fails because she has no "references" from former employers, as this is her first trial for work. Fate leads her to the assistance of a girl who is a stranger to her but ill. The sick girl, to enable them both to live, hands her references to the heroine, who has shown her kindness. The good references obtains the position of secretary for our heroine, who, of course, poses as the sick girl. After obtaining the position of secretary it developes that the references are forgeries done by the sick girl. A sequence of very funny situations follows the girl who has got her secretaryship by the references she had used in good faith, not knowing they were forged. Then there is the First National feature called "Tol'able David," with Richard Barthelmess, who last week took the big Toronto houses by storm, as star. This play, enacted among the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia, is the one that made Barthelmess a star of first magnitude. It is a virile plot with its characters drawn from the sturdy mountaineers whose code of honor insists on fair play among men and due respect for good women. The scenes in this picture are as beautiful as the plot is gripping. Bill Bevan in the Mack Sennett comedy called "The Duck Hunter," keeps an audience convulsed in laughter from the first title to the inevitable final clinch. You may think you know all about shooting wild ducks, but this comedy will show you there is much yet to learn.

AT THE REGENT.

SMASHING SCENES IN NEW WILLIAM S. HART FILM, "THE WHISTLE."

A drawbridge tender asleep at his post; an open bridge and a motor crashing into the inky waters below; a child's scream and a man's brave plunge to the rescue!

This is one of the smashing scenes in "The Whistle"—a picture produced by William S. Hart and written by Lambert Hillyer, who also directed it. The original story is by May Wilmoth and Olin Lyman.

In this new Paramount offering, which will be shown at the Regent Theatre to-day, Mr. Hart has a new role—that of a factory worker, a man accustomed to "jump to the sound of the whistle."

His attempt to mete out justice to a man whose selfishness has resulted in the death of the worker's beloved child, develops a series of situations that come as a completely satisfying train of events which round out to a conclusion that is distinctly compelling.

In every way this is a powerful drama and one that should satisfy the most exacting. Three famous juvenile players anpear in the cast. Frank Brownlee has the "heavy" role.

JUVENILES PLAY AT KING EDWARD PARK.

In order to meet the request of the Football Association for the use of Riverside Park on Wednesday evening, to play a Peck Cup game, the marke committee have found it necessary to ask the Lakeviews and Maple Leafs to play their juvenile league game elsewhere, this game having been scheduled for Riverside Park.

The juveniles have arranged to put on this game at King Edward Park to-morrow evening, at six o'clock, and the players of the two teams will govern themselves accordingly.

An important meeting of the City Baseball League will be held at the Chamber of Commerce next Friday evening at 7.30 oclock.

The Lakefield-Keene game at Keene billed for Wednesday eveiing has been postponed.

Raybestos had a lively workout last evening in preparation for the game this evening with C.G.E.

LOCAL INTEREST IN "BLUEBIRD"

A Treat for Music Lovers This Evening and Tomorrow.

A good deal of local interest has been manifested during the last two weeks in the production of "The Message of the Bluebird." Mr. Asa Huycke's composition. This is the first ambitious attempt of Peterborough's composer, who has already gained considerable attention with his musical numbers and vocal abilities, and music-lovers of the city are guaranteed a treat to-night and to-morrow night in the lively action, the sustained interest, and the lovely lyrical measures of "The Message of the Bluebird." Home-town vocalists of outstanding ability have been gathered together in a principal cast and a chorus that are excellent from all standpoints. A colorful background is provided by the bright choristers; there are solos, duets, and a really splendid septette of singers to make attractive intervals, with a pretty love-story running through the production, and several distinct novelties introduced during the action of the piece. As an example of what can be done right in our own city with local talent, gathered together by a local composer, whose operetta and its music have all a local beginning, "The Message of the Bluebird" will provide humor, sentiment and romance for its audiences on the two nights.

GOVERNMENT FINES PAID TO MUNICIPALITY

Mr. G. N. Gordon, M.P., told the Examiner representative to-day that the deputation from the municipalities had succeeded in convincing the Minister of Justice that fines should go to municipalities instead of to the Ontario Government in cases where the information is laid within the municiaplity where the offence has been committed.

Mr. Gordon says that this will amount to $1,000 a year at least, which the City of Peterborough will benefit by this amendment to the Criminal Code.

It will be remembered that last spring, after a deputation from the municipalities from Ontario waited on the Minister of Justice, Mr. Gordon was present in the interests of the City of Peterborough, and several times since then has interviewed the Minister of Justice urging this change in the law. This will be a permanent change which should be of much value to the city, as fines frequently run considerably in excess of $1,000 which the city was required to hand over to the Treasurer of the Province of Ontario, and which will now belong to the Treasury of the City of Peterborough.

Irish Rebel M.P. McGuinns is Dead

DUBLIN, May 31.—(Canadian Press). — Joseph McGuinns, M.P., for South Longford, died this morning.

His election to Parliament in 1917, while serving a three-year sentence for his part in the 1916 rebellion, helped to pave the way for a Sinn Fein sweep of the country.

He was a strong supporter of the Irish Treaty.

RILEY'S HIKERS FEAST ON PIES AND PINK ICES

Unemployed Veterans Enjoy Generous Hospitality on Spacious Lawn of Colonial Residence

AT ASCOT, ONT.

ASCOT, Ont., May 31.—(Special to The Examiner).—On the spacious lawn of one of the imposing old colonial residences here, the unemployed veteran hikers tarried long last evening over lemon pies and pink ices. Had it not been for the long rough road into Brockville the supper would have resolved itself into a garden party and a lawn dance. As it was, there was time for a few choruses to the accompaniment of the ever ready banjo.

McDonald's Retirement.

Since the retirement of General McDonald from the movement, it has transpired that his indisposition was but the expedition of an impending change in the army. His was a military regime of the old school, and not in keeping with the democratic spirit that soon developed in the movement.

On Sunday before he left, a conspiracy was on foot to elect another leader in the person of Comrade Riley. The momentous news of the sort that proves the truth of the thanklessness of democracy was on the point of being broken to the invalid veteran when the doctor ordered him into the hospital. The father of the movement was to have been replaced by the ungrateful progeny of his own organizing genius. The following were appointed to the executive to fill vacancies: J. J. Kennedy, Geo. Osborne, T. G. Page and A. T. Randall, of Hamilton.

Date of Arrival.

It is still a question of whether they will arrive at Ottawa on Friday or Saturday. However, it is the opinion of the men that members of the Cabinet will stay in town for the week-end in order to witness the unique spectacle of their arrival. Riley says that the physical condition and appearance of the army will be their strongest argument.

A KIDDERMINSTER THANK-OFFERING.

Half a century ago Mr. Matthew J. Whittall, a Kidderminster carpetmaker, left his native town for Worcester, Massachusetts, where he played a leading part in building up the carpet industry in the United States. Two years ago he sent the Vicar of Kidderminster, Canon Sladen, £2,059 for a chapel to be added to the old parish church of St. Mary and All Saints.

"God has been good to me all my life," wrote Mr. Whittall. "He has blessed me with good health, a loving family, many friends, and much prosperity. I have given this chapel as a thankoffering for all His loving kindness to me and mine. My earliets thoughts centre around St. Mary's Church. When a boy there I attended the Sunday School."

The work of building was begun last spring. On the afternoon of Easter Day, a large congregation filled the church, which was bright with spring flowers, to share in the dedication of the chapel by the Bishop of the Diocese. Mr. Whittall was present.

The offerings at the service are to provide a funeral-pall for St. Matthew's, South Worcester, Massachusetts, of which church Mr. Whittall has been churchwarden for fifty-one years.

The foregoing is taken from The Guardian, London, England, and will find interest with a number of the readers connected with the Brinton Carpet Factory, Peterborough.

IRISH DEBATE DRAWS CROWD TO THE HOUSE

Government Will Not Deviate from the Irish Treaty — Statement by Churchill.

ELECTION RUMOURED

LONDON, May 31. — (Canadian Press). — The Provisional Government did not, as charged, issue leaflets urging Irish voters to support the treaty in the elections on the ground that they could secure a republic "through safe, thorough road of the treaty," Winston Churchill stated to-day that he had received this assurance.

In his statement to the Commons, Winston Churchill declared that the pact between De Valera and Michael Collins struck directly at the provisions of the treaty. The consequences were serious, and it was probable that the Irish people would not be able to give free expression to their views. If De Valera or others refuse to sign the declaration prescribed in the treaty, the agreement would be broken. The Government would not in any circumstances agree to deviate from the treaty.

Mr. Churchill added that he did not believe members of the Provisional Government were acting in bad faith, and he was convinced their earnest desire was to carry out the treaty, even though they might not have taken the wisest course. He concluded his statement with an appeal that Britain continue to do her part and not be led by "impatience, prejudice, vexation and anxiety into a course which would lay us open to charges of fickleness or levity in dealing with these issues as long-lasting as relations between the two races."

A FULL HOUSE.

LONDON, May 31. — (Canadian Press).— Among the rumors afloat to-day, is one that the Government intends to hold a general election on the Irish question, but it could not be traced to any solid source.

In anticipation of the Irish debate in the Commons, Lord Fitzalan, Irish Viceroy, and Lord Chancellor Birkenhead were seen in the Peers' gallery. Michael Collins, Arthur Griffith and Eamon Duggan occupied seats in the distinguished strangers' gallery.

CONFER WITH CABINET.

She Touched the Hearts and Then The Pocketbooks of Her Victims

DETROIT, May 31.—Charged with bilking suitors by fraudulent use of the mails, Anna Molnar was arraigned here before U. S. Commissioner J. Stanley Hurd and sent to the County Jail to await trial. By inserting an advertisement in a New York Hungarian paper, describing herself as a pretty and childless widow desirous of marrying again, she had swindled dozens of working men, according to E. E. Fraser, post office inspector.

The inspector charges that Mrs. Molnar would reply to matrimonial officers with a hard luck story. She would say, he alleges, that she needed $29 to repay passage money to America furnished her by a brother, and railroad fare to New York. When she got the money, it is charged, she forgot all about the prospective husband.

One suitor was so touched by her story of having scalded her hand while at work that he sent her $5 to have her picture taken and came immediately to Detroit to meet her, according to Mr. Fraser. The man wrote to general delivery, where she received her mail, announcing that he was coming.

When the suitor arrived in Detroit he received a letter from a man supposed to be Mrs. Molnar's brother, stating that she had married and left town two days before. Postal authorities investigated, and the next time Mrs. Molnar called for her mail she was arrested.

The inspector stated that he had taken $100 from Mrs. Molnar's mail since her arrest. An investigation revealed, he adds, that she lived on Winder Street with two sons. Mrs. Molnar pleaded not guilty. She was remanded to jail in default of $1,000 bail.

POLICE BAFFLED BY CHERRETT MYSTERY

No Developments in Case That Has Saddened the City—Telegrams Fail to Turn Up Clue to Son's Whereabouts.

NO CHANGE HERE

In their search for Roy Cherrett, who has been missing since Sunday night and whose mother was found drowned in the river above the Peterboro lock on Monday morning, the police faced a wall of silence today. Acting upon information obtained at his home suggesting that he might have left the city to play baseball in some other town, Detective Meagher sent out a number of telegrams last night to cities in which it is understood he had spoken of finding a berth with certain teams.

From North Bay, came a prompt reply that he had not been seen there and Three Rivers, Que., sent the information that he had not reported there. Several other answers failed equally to offer a clue as to his whereabouts or even to any of his movements since Sunday night.

In its local aspects the mystery that has shocked and saddened the whole community was as baffling as ever. According to the police they hadn't a single clue or lead to an explanation of the absence of Mr. Cherrett. A veil that has so far defied penetration except the finding the mother's body descended upon the mother and son after they left their home on Sunday night at nine o'clock ostensibly to visit a friend in the north end of the city.

In the finding of the body of Mrs. Agnes Cherrett on Monday morning, Mr. W. D. Edwards, lockmaster explains that the fifteen minute delay was not occasioned by the telephone service or in getting the Police department. It took Mr. Edwards fifteen minutes to get in touch with his son. The latter held the body up with a pike pole while his father summoned the police.

Local Officers Make An Arrest

LINDSAY, May 31.—(Special) Inland Revenue Officer William Buller and Provincial Constable Stratton, Peterborough, arrested Thomas Mounty, of Somerville Township, Tuesday, charged with an infraction of the O. T. A. He was remanded for a week this morning. On May 15th the seizure of the alleged plant was made by Officer Buller and License Inspector Thornbury, Lindsay, at Mounty's house. His solicitor notified Inspector Glass that action would be taken for wrongful seizure and arrest in the Mounty-Sherman cases, a seizure having been made in the later case earlier in May.

FOUR ARE HELD AS ROBBERY SUSPECTS

May Have Looted Toronto Bank in Wyoming

LONDON, Ont., May 31.—(Special to Examiner).—Fingerprints, photographed on the door of the looted vault of the Bank of Toronto branch at Wyoming, placed for comparison close beside the fingerprints of Edward McMullen, George Anderson, William Ayers and Frank Yohn, who are suspected of the crime, may be introduced as evidence when the four are arraigned in Wyoming court for preliminary hearing at 2.30 this afternoon. At any rate, a number of witnesses will swear that they saw the men either in the bank or close to Wyoming on the day of the robbery. The prisoners are represented by William R. Meredith, John M. McEvoy and Albert M. Judd.

Bank employes who faced guns in the hands of the bandits when the bank was robbed of about $10,000 in cash, and who are said to have identified the four Londoners as the men who held them up, will testify at the preliminary hearing.

A small lad named Elliott, who is said to have found four men sleeping in a country school near Wyoming on the morning of the robbery, will also probably be called to give evidence.

HAVE PURCHASED PARK PROPERTY

Important Real Estate Deal at Chemong Park --Local Men the Purchasers.

A real estate deal that will have an important bearing on the development of Chemong Park has been consummated whereby Douros and Gettas secure by purchase a valuable piece of property at the south-east corner and will convert it into a park playground. A pavilion, a special playground for children, and other facilities will be provided. Mr. N. Douros and Mr. Peter Gettas are well known in Peterboro, and their present plans to develop their Chemong property will be watched with interest. No expense will be spared to meet the requirements of the resident and visiting public. Parking space for automobiles, flower beds to beautify the property and many other improvements to numerous to mention, are included in the scheme, which will take two or three years to complete.

The site which Douros and Gettas have chosen for theis enterprise is located on a triangular strip of ground almost opostie the present pavilion. It is well covered with pine trees and will make an ideal spot for a business of this kind.

Edits the Family Newspaper

EDNA LEVINE

The family newspaper is something new in literary circles.

It is designed to take the place of the letter you are always going to write to-morrow.

This method of keeping in touch with all the branches of the family tree is employed by an aggregation of cousins 200 strong.

They call their sheet "The Mishpocha". It is issued monthly.

Instead of writing letters to each other member of the family send all the news about themselves to Edna Levine of Chicago, one of the editors.

"The family paper is a splendid medium for handling all the family gossip," she says. "It keeps the correspondence down and the family spirit up."

The paper was started two years ago.

MILK SUPPLY IN SOME PARTS OF PROVINCE POOR

Provincial M. O. H. Dr. McCullough Urges Importance of Proper Standardization.

CHEAPEST FOOD

TORONTO, May 31 (Special to The Examiner). — Dr. J. W. S. McCullough, Medical Health Officer for Ontario, is in agreement with statements made before the Health Officers' Association to the effect that the milk supply in parts of the Province is of very poor quality.

"Of course it is," he admitted. "That is because all municipalities have not proper by-laws regulating the standard."

The Provincial Department of Health, he pointed out, has no authority to set a Province-wide standard for milk. Its powers are limited to approving the by-laws passed by municipalities.

"And there are still many municipalities which have no such by-laws," Dr. McCullough pointed out. "Of course, they are becoming fewer every year, and so the standard is gradually improving. But once the public are seized of the importance of proper standards, they will insist upon them. There will not be much difficulty, once they understand the situation.

"Fear is sometimes expressed that better and purer milk might involve an increase in price. But little attention need be paid to that, for even with the added expense of purification and pasteurisation, milk still remains our cheapest food."

SAY CAN DISPENSE WITH DISTILLERIES

Bill to Place Them on the Same Basis as Other Mfrs. Rejected.

TORONTO, May 31.—(Special to The Examiner).—The R. L. Bracken bill to base the business tax on distilled beverages on 60 per cent. of the assessment valuation of the distiller's properties as in the case of ordinary manufacturing concerns, instead of on 150 per cent. of that valuation, was thrown out by a large majority by the Municipal Committee of the Legislature this morning.

J. H. Cobourn, K.C., of Walkerville, told the committee that both the Canadian and American markets of the distillers had been eliminated and that they should thus far not be discriminated against.

R. Reese Hall, of Parry Sound, protested against any special consideration for the distillers. "There will be more classes and casts in Canada than there are in India if this goes on," he declared, and inquired rheotorically: "Has the price of whiskey been reduced?"

Major Tolmie placed himself in favor of the bill on the ground that conditions in the industry in question had changed from what they were some time ago, and that it ought to be put on the same basis as any other manufacturing exporting basis.

J. W. Curry declared that distilleries were making immense profits, not only from alcohol distilled for beverage purposes, but also from alcohol distilled for manufacturing purposes.

H. K. Denyes objected to placing distilleries on the same basis as other manufacturers. "It is a business we can dispense with."

MONEY PAID OVER TO THE G.W.V.A.

Mr. G. N. Curtiss, maker of the cushion which was won by Mrs. McIlvride, 299 Rubidge Street, has handed over the handsome sum of $105.00 to the G.W.V.A. as his contribution, after all expenses in connection with the selling of the tickets, etc., were paid.

Mr. Curtiss, in his acknowledgment to those who helped with the work, omitted to note the kindness of the Police and Fire Departments of the city, both of whom helped materially with the sale of the tickets.

DECLINES ACCEPTANCE OF FINAL WAGER DEPOSIT

TORONTO, May 31.—(Canadian Press.)—The accountant of the Supreme Court of Ontario to-day informed A. W. Ballantyne, counsel for the Ontario Jockey Club, that the Provincial Treasurer had given instructions not to accept a final deposit of $35,219.65, representing five per cent. on the last two days' wagering at the Woodbine spring meeting. Mr. Ballantyne had tendered a cheque for this amount, but it was refused.

THE EDWARDS CASE BEING HEARD TODAY

POLICE GROOM GETS A HAPPY SURPRISE

The Police Department last night, at a pleasant affair in the station, illustrated the comradeship and happy relations between the officers and men.

Police Constable Gordon Puffer must have wondered why the policemen off and on duty were appearing at the Station at about 8.30.

One by one they came in, until practically the whole staff was assembled, when Mrs. Wallace Bunton, Police Matron, uncorked the surprise, presenting P. C. Puffer, who is shortly to become a groom, with a 97-piece dinner set, suitably inscribed, the gift of the Police Department.

Mrs. Bunton, in a dainty speech, expressed the hope that his married life might be long and happy.

Chief S. Newhall followed these happy remarks with others in a similar vein, and Inspector James Reid was not to be denied his felicitations.

The officers overwhelmed the popular young constable with good wishes, and P. C. Puffer was given a reminder of the active part the police will play in connection with the wedding, which takes place to-morrow.

WILL TOLERATE NO REPUBLIC, IRELAND

LONDON, May 31. — (Canadian Press).—Great Britain will tolerate no Republic in Ireland, and if the terms of the Anglo-Irish treaty are not carried out by the Irish, the British Government will resume her liberty to act in taking back the power conferred on the Provisional Government, and in re-occupying the territory evacuated, it was declared in the House of Commons today by Winston Churchill, Colonial Secretary.

GIRL REFUSED HIM SHOT HER IN HEAD

TORONTO, May 31. — (Canadian Press).—Resenting the refusal of Annie Wiengarten, aged 23, to become his bride, Sam. Burger, aged 29, stepped up behind the young woman in a shoe store in which she was working, to-day, and shot her in the back of the head. He then erashed a bullet through his own brain. The girl may recover.

THE WEATHER

The last day of May. The finest month of all the year, and a particularly fine sample of its class. As a gentleman said at noon, Did you ever see a spring with no frost, or even sign of frost. With the exception of the first day of the month we have had no frost whatever. On the morning of the first we had it down to 30. Since that date it has not been near it. But now we hear the pessimist say, "Wait, we may have our 'June frosts' yet." Don't expect them or look for them and we will not be so apt to get them. Moreover, they are becoming less and less common. Forty and fifty years ago they were a factor to be reckoned with, and hardly a June came around without some damage being done to the growing crops. Sometimes the effects were disastrous. The rainfall this month was only about one-third that of April, but to-day there are signs visible all around that thunderstorms are not far away.—W. P.

Several Witnesses Gave Evidence as to the Finding of the Body of Ernest Edwards.

STORY OF SEARCH

Today, after several adjournments the preliminary hearing of the charge of murder against Emma Jane Edwards and Noe Filion in connection with the death of the former's son, Ernest Edwards, 19 years of age, the second week in April in Dummer Township, got under way before Magistrate O. A. Langley at the Court House. The extra seating accommodation provided in the large court room was appreciated by a large number of spectators who, however, found the evidence offered at the morning sitting rather drab. The personal appearance of the prisoners was much improved. C. K. Widdifield represented Mrs. Edwards. In opening the case at 11 a.m. J. F. Strickland acting for the Crown pointed out that as the prisoners were charged jointly he intended producing evidence in the woman's case before that of Filion.

John Williamson of Norwood, first called stated that he rented the house on the farm in Dummer town ship on which he found the body to Mrs. Edwards. He told of the finding of the body at 2 p.m. in the yard at the south-east corner near the stone work of the barn. He rehashed the description of the way the body was lying "just as one would lay resting on the ground on a warm summer's day with the head a little to one side" he said.

Looked for Tracks

The clothing indicated that the body had been in the rain he said. He was struck by the fact that there was no one around the house as he had always found some one around before, witness said. Although he looked about for marks in the soft ground he was unable to see any tracks of anyone having been in the yard. Witness testified to notifying Constable Isaac Puffer at Norwood and to returning to the house in the evening with Constable Puffer, R. B. Peacock, the undertaker and Webb, the garageman.

He corroborated evidence that has been previously given in regard to Mrs. Edwards statements when informed of the son's death, by the officers that night when she drove up the lane. "She said he had taken a mad fit over two dollars he wanted on Saturday", witness said. He described a search of the house by Constable Puffer and pointed out that there were four rooms downstairs. The search was primarily for a note or message that the officers thought deceased might have left but nothing was found.

C. K. Widdifield asked witness what he was doing on the farm that day and the reply was that he was emptying the sap buckets that had not been touched since Saturday forenoon. "You were present when Mr. Puffer was in the house and you heard all the conversation?"

"Well I tank I did".

Constable Puffer

Constable Isaac Puffer gave an account of the entire case from the time he was first notified at Finlay's shop at Norwood. Much of this was not new. He also said he could see no marks on the ground around where the body was found. It was 7 or 7.20 p.m. when he first saw the body. He told of the meeting with Mrs. Edwards. She was driving a buggy up the lane and ahead of her was walking her brother. The undertaker was driving the wagon with the rough box on it and the two men walking alongside. Mrs. Edwards pulled into the side of the road.

"What in the world has happened. What's happened the boy" Constable Puffer said.

"I don't know. He had one of those bad spells", the mother replied. Testifying today Constable Puffer said she said she received her mother's allowance cheque on Saturday. The son asked for $2. She said she couldn't afford to give it to him and he got mad then".

She told me she had dinner with Ernest on Monday. She went away on Sunday morning and came back Sunday night with Filion. He stayed there till Monday morning. She said Ernest did not speak to her at the noon hour Monday.

In reporting the search, Constable Puffer pointed out that he noticed a small piece of bread on the table in the living room when they first entered the house with Mrs. Edwards. "I wonder at the bread lying there since Monday as there were two cats ran out of the door as we went in." In Ernest's room a writihg tablet was found on an upturned box, but there was no writing on the pad.

Identified Sheets

Referring to the layout of the house, the constable said there were two parts to the house, the old and the new, the old house was used as a woodshed, but the door from the living room into the shed was locked. Asked if they found anything whatever in the search. Constable Puffer said they found on top of the writing table two sheets of paper with the impressions of a pencil on them. He identified these sheets submitted by Mr. Strickland as Exhibit A.

"When you met Mrs. Edwards at the gate what was her demeanour" asked Mr. Strickland.

"She didn't seem up, or to take it serious".

"Am I correct in saying her attitude was unchanged?"

"I didn't see any change. The

The list was completed and approved and has been sent on to be printed. The Board issues a last reminder to farmers that the field crop competition for oats closes on June 1st and for corn on June 16. It is hoped that the number of competitors this season will be large. 30,000 ISLANDS, GEORGIAN BAY

It is impossible to describe this wonderful waterway with any degree of satisfaction, Nature having been so generous in beautifying and adorning it having dowered it with so many gorgeous scenic effects, including rugged promonitories, intricate channels and narrows, and vast amphitheatres of open water. This entire district is so full of interest and altogether so charming that to go there once is to want to return and take your friends. The air is dry and bracing, and a sure cure for hay fever. There is no end of good fishing—deep fishing for big fish and fly fishing for black bass. And for those who do not care for fishing, there is motor boating, a row or sail, bathing and dancing, lawn tennis and other pastimes; and always there is the wildwood that welcomes, rejuvenates and sends the visitor home with happy memories. The principal gateway is Midland, 101 miles north of Toronto, and reached by the Grand Trunk. Free copy of interesting publication with map and list of hotels sent for the asking. CANDIDATE FOR PARLIAMENT IS TOLD TO LEAVE

ON THE RAILROAD.

WINNIPEG, May 31.—(Canadian Press.)—George H. Palmer, member for Dauphin, in the Provincial legislature and Labor-Farmer candidate for the same constituency in the forthcoming election, who is an employee of the Canadian National Railway, has received an "intimation" from railway headqaurters, "that his services are no longer required," according to a despatch from Dauphin yesterday to the Winnipeg Free Press. In the absence in Toronto of A. E. Warren, General Manager of Western lines, and Department heads, confirmation of the report could not be secured.

There was a lnegthy controversy some months ago following an order from the Canadian National management that officials and employees of the company would not be permitted to take an active part in politics. The order affected A. E. Moore, member of the legfislature for Springfield, as well as Mr. Palmer, but as the result of an undertaking reached it has not been enforced in their case.

EARL OF BALFOUR TAKES HIS SEAT

LONDON, May 31.— (Canadian Press.)—There was a brilliant scene in the House of Lords this afternoon when the Earl of Balfour recently created a peer by King George, was formally seated amid all the ancient ceremonials incident to such an occasion. The Chamber and Peeresses' gallery were crowded and the House of Commons adjourned temporarily while old friends and political associates rushed in for a view of the oath-taking. A bright sunshine fell on the gorgeous scarlet robes of the new peer and his sponsors, the Earl of Derby and the Earl of Selbourne, as the procession passed through the House in accordance with ritual. After the reading of lengthy documents and the writ of summons, the Earl of Balfour took his seat.

COMMISSION GOES OUT OF EXISTENCE.

WINNIPEG, May 31.—(Canadian Press.)—The Manitoba public utilities commission will cease to function Wednesday night, Hon. Thomas Johnston, Attorney, announced yesterday. The Minister stated that the public utilities act would remain in full effect but as the legislature at its last session, failed to vote the necessary money for the carrying on of the commission, its members would be paid nothing for their services beyond May 31.

MUCH HOT AIR EXPENDED ON THE NATURAL GAS BILL

Many Amendments Are Offered When House Discusses the Gas Bill in Committee.

BOARD OF THREE.

TORONTO, May 31. — Canadian Press. — The Ontario Legislature yesterday afternoon and long into the evening discussed in committee the government's bill to provide a board of arbitrators to take the place of a referee in the control of the production and [illegible] of natural gas in the western portions of the province. The clauses were passed by the house after several amendments had been adopted but the final report on it by the House in committee was left over until to-day. One of these amendments protects townships who received special concessions from gas producing companies in return for permission to lay pipe lines through the municipalities for the purpose of supplying larger centres. Another makes decisions given by Gas Referee Henderson subject to review by the new board. A third protects companies who own their own wells and use the gas for their own industrial purposes.

During the afternoon Hon. Dr. Carmichael introduced a bill extending the government bonus of 50 per cent. on rural primary transmission lines previous enjoyed only by Hydro enterprises, to municipally owned electrical undertakings outside the Hydro commission. Orillia is said to be the only district which is at present in that situation.

The Provincial government has reached an agreement with the Federal government regarding the loan and trust corporation act passed by the Legislature last year and which the Dominion administration took exception to. The Federal authorities agreed to let the bill pass if the Legislature eliminated the clause which provided for cancellation of registration of companies which did not provide with certain provisions of the act. Hon. Mr. Raney introduced a bill last night to put this change into effect.

Natural Gas Bill.

The government's natural gas bill is the result of long negotiations in an effort to please all parties interested in natural gas. Under it the control of conservation, price, etc., of natural gas passes from Gas Referee G. F. Henderson to a board of arbitrators of three members. One will be selected by the producing or distributing companies. The second is to be selected by members of the Legislature whose constituencies are affected. These include the ridings in Essex, Elgin, Kent, Lambton, Middlesex, London, Oxford, Norfolk, Brant, Waterloo, Wentworth, Haldimand, Welland, Lincoln, Windsor, Hamilton, St. Catharines, and Niagara Falls. These two arbitrators will select a third member. If they cannot agree Minister of Mines Mills will select the third.

Powers of the Board.

The Act provides that whereas the board may fix prices, etc., in contravention of existing agreements and franchises, the agreements between the farmers on whose farms the wells have been sunk and the producing companies shall not be disturbed.

R. Brackin said that while he was prepared to allow the board to have the say in fixing gas prices to consumers in the large centres there was one class affected which should be given the advantage of the agreements they have with the companies. It was where a township gave permission to a gas company to lay mains through the municipality in order to reach a large centre of population. In return for such a franchise the companies agreed to give the farmers in the townships gas at a very low rate if they laid their own branch pipe lines. They also often gave them free gas to town halls, churches, etc. He accordingly introduced the amendment that such agreements should not be disturbed. It was only by the townships allowing these pipe lines to go through their lands that the cities were able to get natural gas at all.

This precipitated a long debate in which J. C. Brown (Middlesex), J. C. Cameron (Elgin W.) and W. Stringer (Haldimand), supported the amendment. The government finally agreed to the amendment.

Tribunal vs. Referee.

The whole question of whether the tribunal of three was preferable to a gas referee was discussed, but while Hon. Howard Ferguson thought perhaps Mr. Henderson was as likely to give as fair dealings as any tribunals most of the members of the government as well as Major Tolmie (Windsor), favored the tribunal.

Existing Contracts.

C. F. Swayze, Niagara Falls, made a strong effort to have a clause put in that would not allow the tribunal to disturb existing contracts between urban municipalities and gas companies. He showed that Niagara Falls had its rates jumped to 75c per thousand feet by the gas referee although ti had a contract that fixed the prices from 25c to 50c. He wanted to give Niagara Falls the right to test the validity of this agreement in the courts.

Minister of Mines Mills read legal advice to show that many of the contracts held my muncipalities with companies would not stand. He thought Mr. Swayze's amendment would kill the whole effect of the bill for many towns would hold to their old agreements. Hon. Manning Doherty also opposed the amendment. He believed that many towns that thought they had binding agreements would find that they had not.

Mr. Swayze affirmed that Niagara Falls believed their agreement was sound and was ready to test it.

Division Called.

On a division being called, the Swayze amendment was defeated. He then introduced a second amendment which will give the municipalities the right to have their case reviewed by the new tribunal where they think they did not get fair treatment from the referee. This carried after considerable discussion.

"This bill is no bluff; this bill is going through or we will know the reason why," declared Premier Drury in a brief reference to the Lake of the Woods Control Bill — which has yet to come up for discussion. Hon. Mr. Ferguson had just remarked that he understood the bill was only a bluff.

Although the Premier called the second reading of the measure tonight the order was held over because of the protests of the Conservative leader that he had only just received a copy of the bill.

Premier Drury said as the measure was identically the same as that introduced last year he thought the House would have been prepared at short notice to have dealt with it.

FRATERNIZING BY ARABS AND JEWS.

Advocated By the Moslem Masonic Lodge, Egypt.

LONDON, May 31.—(Associated Press)—Friendly relations between Arabs and Jews are advocated in "An appeal to population of Palestine" which has been distributed all over Palestine by the Moslem Masonic Lodge of Egypt on the occasion of the Nebi Nusa Festival.

It is addressed in the same name of Liberty, Equality and Fraternity by the Grand National Lodge of Egyptian Arabs to Imans and the depositaries of the Holy Law, to spiritual heads of all other religions, Christians, Jews, ets., without any distinction of rite faith to the whole people of Palestine, great and small and to men and women without distinction of nationality or religion. It calls to all in the name of Freemasonary and Humanity—to remember that the Jews are "our brothers and cousins who have been obliged to sojourn among strangers where they have obtained success and prosperity."

The appeal refers to Canada and Switzerland as examples of countries occupied by people of diverse races who live together in unity to their mutual advantage.

NAVAL COLLEGE WILL BE CLOSED

VICTORIA, B. C., May 31.—(Canadian Press.)—The naval college at Esquimalt, will be permanently closed June 16, according to advices received here from Hon. G. P. Graham, Minister of Militia and Naval Service. The naval college has been maintained at Esquimalt since the Halifax disaster. Forty-three cadets are now being instructed there.

STATEMENT ON CHURCH UNITY BY ARCHBISHOP

Lambeth Conference and Special Committee Paves the Way For Greater Religious Unity.

ESSENTIALS OF FAITH.

LONDON, May 31. —(Canadian Press.3)—The Archbishops of Canterbury and York have issued a statement with regard to the appeal for church unity made by the Lambeth Conference of Bishops in 1920. The statement says the committee of Anglicans and Non-Conformists which was appointed in November, 1921, held prolonged meetings and unanimously agreed on certain propositions, which were approved by the conference at Lambeth on May 24 last.

These propositions declare that the existence of rival denominations are not in accordance with the purpose of Christ; that both Episcopate and Council Presbyters should be maintained as permanent elements of a united church; that assent to creeds should not be understood to imply acceptance thereof as a complete expression of faith, or as excluding reasonable liberty of interpretation, but as affirming the essential elements in the Christian faith, and preserving that faith in the form in which it has been handed down in history.

The hope is expressed in the Archbishops' statement that the large measure of agreement reached may prove a basis for further agreement, leading to practical action.

HEAVY JUDGMENT RENDERED AGAINST TIMBER COMPANY

Canada Timber and Lands Company Lose Case Involving Over $1,000,000.

BROKE CONTRACT.

VANCOUVER, B.C., May 31.—(Canadian Press.)—A judgment in which liability is expected to exceed $1,000,000 was rendered here yesterday by Mr. Justice Murphy against the Canada Timber and Lands Limited, whose head office is in Toronto. The successful plaintiffs are seven loggers who entered into a contract with the company to purchase two hundred million feet of timber at Toba River, B.C. A portion of this had been logged when the company repudiated the contract.

According to the plaintiffs the damages are the profits which they would have made from the contract and these are calculated at $1,250,000.

The decision is to be appealed and in any event it is said the case will be carried to the privy council in London. The plaintiffs are Juluis Carlos, Clusen, and his associates.

NO MORE ECONOMY COURTS IN ENGLAND.

The Ban on Fashionable Extravagance Lifted.

LONDON, May 31—(Associated Press)—Economy is no longer to be the keynote of court functions at Buckingham Palace. No more "economy courts', as they were called, are to be held. These were established by their majesties after the war to set fashionable society a much needed example in curbing extravagance. The seal of royal approval has now again been bestowed on court trains. Indeed no women can be presented at Court who does not wear them. Of course as a man the Lord Chamberlain cannot presume to be an expert on fashionable feminine dress, but it is one of his many duties to lay down the rules and regulations to which women must conform at the most exalted of court functions.

That is one of the things for which he is paid $15,000 a year. He has to be a peer besides to qualify for the exalted office which is accounted among the political plums that the Prime Minister has to give away. "The present Lord Chamberlain is in the top class of the peerage. He is the Duke of Athell.

By restoring the court train he has earned the blessings of the fashionable dressmakers. But they would have lengthened their blessings if he had lengthened the trains Before the war three yards was their regulation length, while Queen Victoria didn't consider four yards too long. By the new regulations need to be only two yards in length and should not extend more than 19 inches from the heel of the wearer when standing.

To walk backwards before royalty in a train three yards long without getting tangled up in it, imposes a severe tax on the agility and skill of not a few socially ambitious women. Queen Mary is a very kind woman and she would naturally wish to spare her sex making exhibitions of themselves. Hence she was in favor of the shorter length for trains.

BOSCAWEN WILL NOT BE DICTATED TO BY THE PRESS

Hopes He Will Not Find Any Canadian Cattle in the After World.

INHERITED QUESTION.

LONDON, May 31. — (Canadian Press.) — In an address delivered yesterday before the Constitutional club, the British minister of agriculture, Sir A. Griffith-Boscawen, endeavored to make clear his position in regard to the embargo against Canadian cattle. He declared he was held up as an obstinate person who refused to listen to reason but he was not going to be dictated to by any newspaper whatever on this subject.

Continuing the minister said: "As a matter of fact I inherited this question and it has not been a pleasant heritage. I can never get away from Canadian cattle and I only hope that when I go to another world there will be no Canadian cattle there."

One of the first duties of a British minister of agriculture, he said, was to protect this great industry. The government was not putting a slur or stigma on Canadian cattle. Exclusion of store cattle applied to the whole world. He sympathized with the view of the Canadian government and acknowledged that Canada kept her flocks and herds remarkably free from disease but the interest of "our own people" must come first. This was a national question. They had sacrificed British agriculture too much in the past but there was a point beyond which no nation could safely go in neglecting agriculture.

A PEOPLE'S CAMPAIGN TO SAVE ANOTHER PEOPLE

The fact that business conditions are getting back to normal in Canada is one strong reason why Canadians should contribute liberally to the fund to feed the starving Russian children. Those whose opinion is worth while say confidently that Canada's troubles are largely behind her. Not so Russia. There the problem of caring for the famine victims continues to be one of the greatest.

There is still much need of contributions for this most worthy fund. Thousands have given, but many more thousands, who are well able to do so, have not. To such, a strong appeal is made. All should have a share in this work of saving a large part of the human race.

It is worthy of note that the contributions made so far to the Save the Children Fund in Canada have been made, not by the rich, but by those of very moderate means and often by the poor. The rich have not responded, either in proportion to their means, or to the extent that had been expected.

SPIRITUALISM NOT NEEDED BY CHRISTIAN BELIEVERS

Bishop Bidwell Points to Holy Writ As Foundation For Belief in the Future Life.

KINGSTON, May 31.—(Canadian Press.)—In his charge last night to the Anglican Synod of the Diocese of Ontario, Bishop Bidwell made a reference to spiritualism or spiritism. "Without pronouncing upon the authenticity of the claims made that communications have been received from the spirits of the departed or the means taken to secure those alleged communications," said His Lordship, "I say plainly that the Christian believer has no need at all of any such reinforcement, if reinforcement it be, of his belief in immortality. That belief is based upon his unswerving conviction of the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, and through Him of the future life and resurrection of all who believe in Him." "Further, so far as we can judge from the teaching of our blessed Lord, we are not intended to endeavour to go beyond what has been revealed in this or any other matter. In His well known parable of Dives and Lazarus, our Lord distinctly sets His face against communications from the unseen world. He affirms that the light of revealed truth is sufficient guidance for men."

His Lordship declared that a firm and settled policy was essential to secure the welfare of the country and urged that prayer be regularly offered in the church services for those entrusted with the political guidance of the nation.

Touching on Canada's status of complete manhood, attained by her efforts in the late war, the speaker said: "As an independent part of a great empire, we are bound in honor to assufe our full share of the burdens of that empire, not only in times of crisis, but at all times, so long as we claim and are accorded a voice in the imperial councils and tan influence on the imperial policy."

HEAVY LOSSES IN THE COAL STRIKE

CALGARY, May 31.—(Canadian Press.) — It is computed at a low estimate that numbers of the United Mine Workers of America in district 18 have during the two months they have been on strike lost somewhere near $1,000,000 in wages, according to the Calgary Herald. This based on only one week amonth, which would probably be about average for this time of the year if the mines had been working. As practically no strike pay is being received by the men this amount represents a dead loss to them.

It is somewhat difficult to say what the losses of the operators are, but it is known that in the strike in 1911 it cost one of the mines in District 18 from $22,000 to $25,000 a month while it was idle for upkeep expenses and necessary repair work.

GENERAL WU WILL CONVENE CHINESE PARLIAMENT NOW

Chinese Leader Will Withdraw As Soon As Parliament Assumes the Reins of Government.

WILL USE ARMY.

PEKING, May 31. — (Canadian Press.)—A delegation of members of the old Parliament yesterday conferred with General Wu, who is at Pao-Ting-Fu. He advised the delegates to convene the Parliament at Peking immediately, and said if it represented the Chinese people he would support it, remain aloof himself and devote all his energies to the removal of obstacles. He thought a formal call for the Parliament was unnecessary. All that was required was an announcement that the Parliament had assumed charge of the nation's affairs, he said, and it would elect a provisional president. He said:

"My duty is to remove the obstacles to the establishment of a free republic. I will use the army of the North and South if the factions insist on obstructing this move. As soon as the Parliament is in control I will retire."

General Wu expressed the opinion that Chang-Tso-Lin eventually would be forced to take refuge on foreign soil. He said he hoped Sun Yat Sen would see fit to sacrifice himself for the benefit of the country.

The parliamentary delegates assert that as soon as they assemble President Hsu-Shih-Chang must resign. They claim that his election during the five years recess of Parliament was not sanctioned.

CANDIDATE FOR PARLIAMENT IS TOLD TO LEAVE

ON THE RAILROAD.

WINNIPEG, May 31.—(Canadian Press.)—George H. Palmer, member for Dauphin, in the Provincial legislature and Labor-Farmer candidate for the same constituency in the forthcoming election, who is an employee of the Canadian National Railway, has received an "intimation" from railway headqaurters, "that his services are no longer required," according to a despatch from Dauphin yesterday to the Winnipeg Free Press. In the absence in Toronto of A. E. Warren, General Manager of Western lines, and Department heads, confirmation of the report could not be secured.

There was a inegthy controversy some months ago following an order from the Canadian National management that officials and employees of the company would not be permitted to take an active part in politics. The order affected A. E. Moore, member of the legfislature for Springfield, as well as Mr. Palmer, but as the result of an undertaking reached it has not been enforced in their case.

EARL OF BALFOUR TAKES HIS SEAT

LONDON, May 31.— (Canadian Press.)—There was a brilliant scene in the House of Lords this afternoon when the Earl of Balfour recently created a peer by King George, was formally seated amid all the ancient ceremonials incident to such an occasion. The Chamber and Peeresses' gallery were crowded and the House of Commons adjourned temporarily while old friends and political associates rushed in for a view of the oath-taking. A bright sunshine fell on the gorgeous scarlet robes of the new peer and his sponsors, the Earl of Derby and the Earl of Selbourne, as the procession passed through the House in accordance with ritual. After the reading of lengthy documents and the writ of summons, the Earl of Balfour took his seat.

MUCH HOT AIR EXPENDED ON THE NATURAL GAS BILL

Many Amendments Are Offered When House Discusses the Gas Bill in Committee.

BOARD OF THREE.

TORONTO, May 31. — Canadian Press. — The Ontario Legislature yesterday afternoon and long into the evening discussed in committee the government's bill to provide a board of arbitrators to take the place of a referee in the control of the production and [illegible] of natural gas in the western portions of the province. The clauses were passed by the house after several amendments had been adopted but the final report on it by the House in committee was left over until to-day. One of these amendments protects townships who received special concessions from gas producing companies in return for permission to lay pipe lines through the municipalities for the purpose of supplying larger centres. Another makes decisions given by Gas Referee Henderson subject to review by the new board. A third protects companies who own their own wells and use the gas for their own industrial purposes.

During the afternoon Hon. Dr. Carmichael introduced a bill extending the government bonus of 50 per cent. on rural primary transmission lines previous enjoyed only by Hydro enterprises, to municipally owned electrical undertakings outside the Hydro commission. Orillia is said to be the only district which is at present in that situation.

The Provincial government has reached an agreement with the Federal government regarding the loan and trust corporation act passed by the Legislature last year and which the Dominion administration took exception to. The Federal authorities agreed to let the bill pass if the Legislature eliminated the clause which provided for cancellation of registration of companies which did not provide with certain provisions of the act. Hon. Mr. Raney introduced a bill last night to put this change into effect.

Natural Gas Bill.

The government's natural gas bill is the result of long negotiations in an effort to please all parties interested in natural gas. Under it the control of conservation, price, etc., of natural gas passes from Gas Referee G. F. Henderson to a board of arbitrators of three members. One will be selected by the producing or distributing companies. The second is to be selected by members of the Legislature whose constituencies are affected. These include the ridings in Essex, Elgin, Kent, Lambton, Middlesex, London, Oxford, Norfolk, Brant, Waterloo, Wentworth, Haldimand, Welland, Lincoln, Windsor, Hamilton, St. Catharines, and Niagara Falls. These two arbitrators will select a third member. If they cannot agree Minister of Mines Mills will select the third.

Powers of the Board.

The Act provides that whereas the board may fix prices, etc., in contravention of existing agreements and franchises, the agreements between the farmers on whose farms the wells have been sunk and the producing companies shall not be disturbed.

R. Brackin said that while he was prepared to allow the board to have the say in fixing gas prices to consumers in the large centres there was one class affected which should be given the advantage of the agreements they have with the companies. It was where a township gave permission to a gas company to lay mains through the municipality in order to reach a large centre of population. In return for such a franchise the companies agreed to give the farmers in the townships gas at a very low rate if they laid their own branch pipe lines. They also often gave them free gas to town halls, churches, etc. He accordingly introduced the amendment that such agreements should not be disturbed. It was only by the townships allowing these pipe lines to go through their lands that the cities were able to get natural gas at all.

This precipitated a long debate in which J. C. Brown (Middlesex), J. C. Cameron (Elgin W.) and W. Stringer (Haldimand), supported the amendment. The government finally agreed to the amendment.

Tribunal vs. Referee.

The whole question of whether the tribunal of three was preferable to a gas referee was discussed, but while Hon. Howard Ferguson thought perhaps Mr. Henderson was as likely to give as fair dealings as any tribunals most of the members of the government as well as Major Tolmie (Windsor), favored the tribunal.

Existing Contracts.

C. F. Swayze, Niagara Falls, made a strong effort to have a clause put in that would not allow the tribunal to disturb existing contracts between urban municipalities and gas companies. He showed that Niagara Falls had its rates jumped to 75c per thousand feet by the gas referee although ti had a contract that fixed the prices from 25c to 50c. He wanted to give Niagara Falls the right to test the validity of this agreement in the courts.

Minister of Mines Mills read legal advice to show that many of the contracts held my muncipalities with companies would not stand. He thought Mr. Swayze's amendment would kill the whole effect of the bill for many towns would hold to their old agreements. Hon. Manning Doherty also opposed the amendment. He believed that many towns that thought they had binding agreements would find that they had not.

Mr. Swayze affirmed that Niagara Falls believed their agreement was sound and was ready to test it.

Division Called.

On a division being called, the Swayze amendment was defeated. He then introduced a second amendment which will give the municipalities the right to have their case reviewed by the new tribunal where they think they did not get fair treatment from the referee. This carried after considerable discussion.

"This bill is no bluff; this bill is going through or we will know the reason why," declared Premier Drury in a brief reference to the Lake of the Woods Control Bill — which has yet to come up for discussion. Hon. Mr. Ferguson had just remarked that he understood the bill was only a bluff.

Although the Premier called the second reading of the measure tonight the order was held over because of the protests of the Conservative leader that he had only just received a copy of the bill.

Premier Drury said as the measure was identically the same as that introduced last year he thought the House would have been prepared at short notice to have dealt with it.

FRATERNIZING BY ARABS AND JEWS.

Advocated By the Moslem Masonic Lodge, Egypt.

LONDON, May 31.—(Associated Press)—Friendly relations between Arabs and Jews are advocated in "An appeal to population of Palestine" which has been distributed all over Palestine by the Moslem Masonic Lodge of Egypt on the occasion of the Nebi Nusa Festival.

It is addressed in the same name of Liberty, Equality and Fraternity by the Grand National Lodge of Egyptian Arabs to Imans and the depositaries of the Holy Law, to spiritual heads of all other religions, Christians, Jews, ets., without any distinction of rite faith to the whole people of Palestine, great and small and to men and women without distinction of nationality or religion. It calls to all in the name of Freemasonary and Humanity to remember that the Jews are "our brothers and cousins who have been obliged to sojourn among strangers where they have obtained success and prosperity."

The appeal refers to Canada and Switzerland as examples of countries occupied by people of diverse races who live together in unity to their mutual advantage.

STATEMENT ON CHURCH UNITY BY ARCHBISHOP

ESSENTIALS OF FAITH.

LONDON, May 31. —(Canadian Press.3)—The Archbishops of Canterbury and York have issued a statement with regard to the appeal for church unity made by the Lambeth Conference of Bishops in 1920. The statement says the committee of Anglicans and Non-Conformists which was appointed in November, 1921, held prolonged meetings and unanimously agreed on certain propositions, which were approved by the conference at Lambeth on May 24 last.

These propositions declare that the existence of rival denominations are not in accordance with the purpose of Christ; that both Episcopate and Council Presbyters should be maintained as permanent elements of a united church; that assent to creeds should not be understood to imply acceptance thereof as a complete expression of faith, or as excluding reasonable liberty of interpretation, but as affirming the essential elements in the Christian faith, and preserving that faith in the form in which it has been handed down in history.

The hope is expressed in the Archbishops' statement that the large measure of agreement reached may prove a basis for further agreement, leading to practical action.

HEAVY JUDGMENT RENDERED AGAINST TIMBER COMPANY

Canada Timber and Lands Company Lose Case Involving Over $1,000,000.

BROKE CONTRACT.

VANCOUVER, B.C., May 31.—(Canadian Press.)—A judgment in which liability is expected to exceed $1,000,000 was rendered here yesterday by Mr. Justice Murphy against the Canada Timber and Lands Limited, whose head office is in Toronto. The successful plaintiffs are seven loggers who entered into a contract with the company to purchase two hundred million feet of timber at Toba River, B.C. A portion of this had been logged when the company repudiated the contract.

According to the plaintiffs the damages are the profits which they would have made from the contract and these are calculated at $1,250,000.

The decision is to be appealed and in any event it is said the case will be carried to the privy council in London. The plaintiffs are Juluis Carlos, Clusen, and his associates.

NO MORE ECONOMY COURTS IN ENGLAND.

The Ban on Fashionable Extravagance Lifted.

LONDON, May 31—(Associated Press)—Economy is no longer to be the keynote of court functions at Buckingham Palace. No more "economy courts', as they were called, are to be held. These were established by their majesties after the war to set fashionable society a much needed example in curbing extravagance. The seal of royal approval has now again been bestowed on court trains. Indeed no women can be presented at Court who does not wear them. Of course as a man the Lord Chamberlain cannot presume to be an expert on fashionable feminine dress, but it is one of his many duties to lay down the rules and regulations to which women must conform at the most exalted of court functions.

That is one of the things for which he is paid $15,000 a year. He has to be a peer besides to qualify for the exalted office which is accounted among the political plums that the Prime Minister has to give away. The present Lord Chamberlain is in the top class of the peerage. He is the Duke of Athell.

By restoring the court train he has earned the blessings of the fashionable dressmakers. But they would have lengthened their blessings if he had lengthened the trains Before the war three yards was their regulation length, while Queen Victoria didn't consider four yards too long. By the new regulations need to be only two yards in length and should not extend more than 19 inches from the heel of the wearer when standing.

To walk backwards before royalty in a train three yards long without getting tangled up in it, imposes a severe tax on the agility and skill of not a few socially ambitious women. Queen Mary is a very kind woman and she would naturally wish to spare her sex making exhibitions of themselves. Hence she was in favor of the shorter length for trains.

BOSCAWEN WILL NOT BE DICTATED TO BY THE PRESS

Hopes He Will Not Find Any Canadian Cattle in the After World.

INHERITED QUESTION.

LONDON, May 31. — (Canadian Press.) — In an address delivered yesterday before the Constitutional club, the British minister of agriculture, Sir A. Griffith-Boscawen, endeavored to make clear his position in regard to the embargo against Canadian cattle. He declared he was held up as an obstinate person who refused to listen to reason but he was not going to be dictated to by any newspaper whatever on this subject.

Continuing the minister said: "As a matter of fact I inherited this question and it has not been a pleasant heritage. I can never get away from Canadian cattle and I only hope that when I go to another world there will be no Canadian cattle there."

One of the first duties of a British minister of agriculture, he said, was to protect this great industry. The government was not putting a slur or stigma on Canadian cattle. Exclusion of store cattle applied to the whole world. He sympathized with the view of the Canadian government and acknowledged that Canada kept her flocks and herds remarkably free from disease but the interest of "our own people" must come first. This was a national question. They had sacrificed British agriculture too much in the past but there was a point beyond which no nation could safely go in neglecting agriculture.

A PEOPLE'S CAMPAIGN TO SAVE ANOTHER PEOPLE

The fact that business conditions are getting back to normal in Canada is one strong reason why Canadians should contribute liberally to the fund to feed the starving Russian children. Those whose opinion is worth while say confidently that Canada's troubles are largely behind her. Not so Russia. There the problem of caring for the famine victims continues to be one of the greatest.

There is still much need of contributions for this most worthy fund. Thousands have given, but many more thousands, who are well able to do so, have not. To such, a strong appeal is made. All should have a share in this work of saving a large part of the human race.

A PURCHASING AGENT.

A special committee appointed by the Hamilton Council to consider the advisability of appointing a civic purchasing agent for the city of Hamilton has decided, after investigating the experience of other centres, to recommend that such an official shall be appointed. Thirteen cities in Canada and the United States have all reported large savings as the result of the purchasing department system, and their recommendations are sufficient to justify Hamilton embarking upon the scheme. Undoubtedly there is much waste in civic buying when each department is allowed to purchase its own supplies, and that a systematic method of buying will eliminate a large amount of duplication and needless purchasing. It is said that in the cities where a buying agent has been added to the civic roster the official has saved several times the amount of his salary. The difficulty in the scheme, and one that has prevented other communities from undertaking it, is that the qualifications that should be possessed by a purchasing agent are not easy to find. It is easy to imagine that an official without the proper training would not be much of an improvement over the present haphazard system used by the majority of Canadian municipalities. A man of experience in business and trained in buying if given a free hand should be able to effect an appreciable reduction in expenditure, but unless it is certain that such a purchasing agent could be secured the local Council would be well advised not to be too hasty in following the example set by Hamilton.

THE COOPER BILL.

The invasion of municipal rights by the Cooper bill, by which the fares charged by electric railways are to be fixed by the Provincial Railway Board, which is given the power to over-ride any agreements entered into between the railway companies and the municipalities should be vigorously fought by the towns and cities of Ontario. The bill has been put through with the help of the members from rural districts whose constituencies are not affected by the legislation and who, it is feared, have not given the question the consideration its importance merits. Much of the legislation affecting urban communities has been carried by the same votes. The Farmer members, of course, are not necessarily hostile to the cities, but they do not delve very deeply into the purport of bills which do not concern their own constituents, and the result has been a series of blows at the rights of the municipalities. The Cooper bill is one of the most serious of these attacks upon municipal privileges, and it is not surprising that there is a movements on foot among the municipalities affected to fight for the disallowance of the Act. It is high time that concerted action were taken by the towns and cities of the Province to protect themselves from interference of this type on the part of the Province. There is no reason to believe that the Provincial Government is more competent to decide upon matters directly affecting municipalities than are these municipalities themselves, and the Cooper bill and other legislation of the same kind should be unitedly opposed. Joint action on the part of the municipalities might do much to protect municipal interests.

RAILWAY RATES AND WAGES.

Hon. George Langley, of Saskatchewan, before the Committee on Railway Transportation Rates, declared that the railway wages must be scaled down and that the best way to accomplish that was to reduce the rates. Mr. Langley has got to the root of the problem. So long as the railways have sufficient revenue they are not worrying about the wages they have to pay, nor are the employees likely to be immersed with the necessity of a cut. The committee should consider something more than the present position of the railways, and should look ahead far enough to see that public opinion will support a reduction in wages if it is preceded by a reduction in rates. The railways of course declare that they cannot operate on reduced rates so long as the operating costs remain as they are. But it seems self-evident that if the roads are deprived of a portion of their revenue they will surely find it possible to cut down the operating expenses, and that the public will support them in a scaling down of wages, especially as it is felt that the wages of railway employees are above those of nearly every other class of labor. But the public will not stand for one thing without the other. They want lower rates, and are willing to endorse lower wages to get them. They do not want to see the railway workers receive a wage cut, however, without a corresponding drop in transportation rates.

THE RECOVERY OF POLAND.

One of the bright spots in European affiars at the present critical juncture is the signing of the peace pact among the nations represented at Genoa. Another almost as encouraging is the recovery of Poland after the terrible exhaustion of the war. It has been predicted by those who are in a positon to know that Poland will come very close toward the balancing of her financial budget this year. Apparently the Finance Minister has taken the advice of the world's financial experts, who declare emphatically that the only road to economic recovery is the balancing of national budgets. The total expenditure, calculating the Polish mark roughly at its current value, about 4,000 to the dollar, is about $148,000,000, of which $28,000,000 is for reconstruction purposes. To provide for this with a loan as Poland proposes to do, is sound enough; the future must pay the war costs in one form or another. What is utterly ruinous is the practice from which all the continent is slowly getting away—that of drawing on the future to pay current running expenses.

Poland's estimated ordinary expenditure for the year is $120,000,000, with $115,000,000 in sight to cover it. M. Michalski observes that the indicated deficit of $5,000,000 "must absolutely be covered by an increase in the normal revenues of the State." In other words, the banknote printing press, already working at a much slower rate than in the past, must presently stop. The Ministry proposes to cover the investment expenditures, pending the conclusion of a foreign loan, by treasury notes; "obviously not the best method," says Michalski, "but in any case very much better than the printing of money." Encouraging, also, and furnishing an excellent example for any Government, is the Finance Minister's declaration that "without mercy or consideration I shall continue to introduce economies, in spite of cries of indignation and dissatisfaction on the part of those interested and of their sponsors."

The new Polish policy of accord with the neighboring States, which under Skirmunt has led to the promising agreement with Russia and Germany, with the Little Entente and the Baltic republics, has been recognized as a great step toward the stabilization of Eastern Europe. The economic recovery of Poland is quite as important; for Poland, the great distributing point for railroads, existing and projected, running into Russia, is likely to play an important part in European transportation in future years.

Poland is to be commended also for reducing expenditures on miltary affairs. Only about one-fifth of the national budget is expended in that way. When it is remembered that Russia has been in a mood to attack Poland, with a large standing army in her possession, the moderation of the young republic is highly praiseworthy. Poland has had to meet in a most aggravated form, the assault of the Russian Bolshevists, and has been in a very precarious situation. The action of Poland is along the right line and when the other nations adopt the same policy Europe will be on the road to recovery.—Brantford Expositor.

LIBERTY OF THE SUBJECT.

No one needs to care what happens to taxes on bets at racing-meets; most people would approve of taxing gambling if it can legally be done; but the law now put forward in the Ontario Legislature is a very serious invasion of the rights of a British subject in this Province, and if we have a Legislature foolish enough to throw away the rights established in centuries of contest with tyranny, we ought at least to recognize what it is doing, says The Ottawa Journal.

We think any lawyer would say that in spite of what the Attorney-General may in his ignorance say, British law for centuries has given any subject the right without a fiat to bring an action against the Attorney-General for a declaration that any enactment is illegal. If the Attorney-General still doubts this, let him pay a visit to a law library and read a case of Dyson vs. Attorney-General (England) in 1911, K.B., and some Privy Council decisions subsequently rendered.

One of the right incidental to this is the right to obtain an order restraining officials from carrying out an illegal enactment, and if the Attorney-General does not know that this has been the law it is a reflection on his fitness for his position.

The Legislature of Ontario may, of course, change this law for Ontario; it may refuse us the right to appear in court; it may abolish courts; it may abolish the right of trial by jury; it may abolish the right to proceed by way of habeas corpus; it may enact that in all matters, as in the case of the Ontario Temperance Act, the accused is to be presumed guilty till he proves his innocence; it may give the Attorney-General power to arrest and keep in jail for an unlimited time anyone who speaks disrespectfully of him and his legislation; it may provide that no newspaper shall be sold or distributed which publishes articles hostile to the existing Government, and that only farmers are eligible to sit in the Legislature.

Such laws may be crazy and some of them may be ultra vires of the Province, but if the present law is allowed to stand, and we cannot seek redress from the courts, what recourse is any citizen going to have against the despotism of any set of tyrants who may happen to be in power, except the recourse taken by the Bolsheviks?

Instead of curtailing our liberties in this way we should rather proceed to abolish the requirement of a fiat to bring an action against the Crown as one of the relics of absolute monarchy which is inappropriate to modern civilization. It would have been abolished long ago if the right to refuse a fiat had not been exercised with great discretion in most of our Legislatures. A fiat is practically never refused by the Governor-General on the recommendation of the Dominion Attorney-General where a subject has a bona fide cause of action, but why should any temporary tyrant occupying the Attorney-General's position have control in such a matter? It is pressing the theory of divine right to an extreme when it is conceded to an Attorney-General.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The month of roses—and weddings.

As The London Advertiser remarks, when the wind blows hard even the straw hat has its off days.

The debate on the cattle embargo has again been delayed. The embargo, however, remains on, Hon. Manning Doherty is asked to note.

The average smoker doesn't seem sure whether he is helping to pay for the cost of government or fattening somebody's profit. A lot of cigarettes bought before the new tax was inflicted are being sold at increased prices, showing that the consumer is always the goat.

Another question that bothers the public is that if the tax on soft drinks is only 10 cents a gallon, why it should be necessary to add 5 cents to the price of a glassful.

Bombardier Welis has been knocked out again. The big fellow goes down more often than a diver.

"The public has still to listen to needless auto horns, train and boat whistles, roosters, pianos and phonographs. There are too many needless noises yet, and perhaps one of these days the public may adopt the suggestion made recently by the Peterborough Examiner that special officers should be appointed to suppress them. But that is a long way off, and until then we must bear the ills we have." — Kingston Standard.

TRYING TO LET GO

Kansas City Star: The Soviet Government is now trying to let go of the bear's tail. After a slow but steady retreat away from communism, conducted at first with extreme caution, it is now in open negotiation with those capitalistic powers it was once going to have nothing to do with except at the point of the bayonet. The internal policy of Sovietism has been along the same line as its foreign reversal. It is abandoning the communistic principle, or trying to. But its experience with the earnest soul who don't yet know of the change shows it is having troubles. Probably it will continue to have them. It is harder to stop revolution than to start it, and sometimes those who have tried to stop it, and who happened to be the same ones who started it, have fallen under its crushing wheels.

RHEUMATISM

Health is the Most Valuable Asset You Have. You cannot Afford to Neglect It

Crofton, B. C.—"I was troubled for years with inflammatory rheumatism and rheumatic fever. I tried several cures for rheumatism, but did not receive any benefit from any of them. I had been in the hospital for months, being unable to walk. A friend advised me to try Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets. After taking the first bottle I began to improve, and after taking six bottles I had no more rheumatism. I think Dr. Pierce's Anuric is the most wonderful medicine that any one can take for rheumatism. I have recommended these tablets to several of my friends and they, too, have all been benefited by them."—Melville Collinson.

People are realizing that the kidneys, just as do the bowels, need to be flushed occasionally. The kidneys are an eliminative organ and are constantly working, separating the poisons from the blood. Uric acid backs up into the system, causing rheumatism, neuralgia, dropsy and many other serious disturbances.

This can be avoided by stimulating the kidneys to increased action, and because of its tonic effect on these organs any one would do well to get Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets which are to be had nowadays at almost any drug store or send 10c to Dr. Pierce's Laboratory in Bridgeburg, Ont., for trial package and write for free, confidential medical advice

BURNBRAE HAD A CONVENTION

Ontario Religious Education Council Meeting — Officers Elected.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 31. — The Seymour and Campbellford convention of the Ontario Religious Education Council was held in St. Andrew's church, Burnbrae, and the various Sunday schools in town and township were well represented. Mr. G. A. Kingston led in the opening exercises at the afternoon session, and the various Sunday schools in town and township were well represented. Mr. G. A. Kingston led in the opening exercises at the afternoon session, and the pastor, Rev. J. J. Black, in a brief address, extended hearty greetings to all present. Most encouraging reports from the various departments were given as follows: Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. F. A. Kingston; Children's Department, Miss K. Gould; Young People's Dept., Girls, Mrs. J. P. Archer, Young People's Dept. Boys, Rev. J. J. Black; Home Dept., Mrs. Carter; Missionary, Mrs. W. Hume. This was followed by an address from the Pres., Mr. Malcolm Totten. A duet by Mrs. (Rev.) Glover and Miss Emma Meiklejohn was much enjoyed, as was also Miss Meiklejohn's solo which was sweetly rendered. Miss Jackson gave an excellent address on the young people's work. A very profitable and interesting discussion on S. S. work was conducted. At the evening session Mr. J. A. Anderson coducted the devotional exercises following which Rev. J. E. Glover gave the report of the nominating committee, which was as follows:

Pres., R. J. Bullen; vice-pres., W. W. Redden; sec.-treas., Mrs. G. A. Kingston; Supt. children's dept., Miss K. Gould; supt. young people's department (girls), Mrs. J. P. Archer; supt. young people's department (boys), Rev. J. J. Black; adult dept., Mr. F. Weston; home dept., Mrs. Carter; teacher training, Mrs. A. Winters; Missionary training, Mrs. W. Hume; temperace training, Mrs. George T. Dickson.

Rev. H. B. Kenny gave a very practical and helpful address on the "Teen Age Boy" which was in brief: God's work depends on human aid. It is no small task to undertake to direct 500,000 boys of the adolescent age. We must make sure that the evangelistic work we do is constructive. The speaker emphasized the responsibility of the home in bringing the children to Christ. Children are influenced more by example than precept. The first foundation of prosperity is absolute integrity. There must also be vision and faith. Service must be ever kept in mind. Mr. Kenny urged his hearers to have faith in the cause and in their scholars. Every boy can not be famous but he can be successful. Helping the boys to lay hold of God is a great task. 'Teen age boys and girls are responsive to truth.

Miss Verna Shore rendered the solo, "Teach me to Pray," very sweetly. Mrs. (Rev.) J. E. Glover and Miss Meiklejohn delighted the audience again with their well rendered duet and the two selections by St. Andrew's choir were also much enjoyed.

Miss Jackson gave an excellent address on "The Canadian Girls in training and their four fold aim Spiritual, Physical, Intellectual and Social Development." The speaker deplored the cry of lack of leaders, and stated we must be willing to sacrifice our time and have a personal joy in our work of directing the young for it is worth while. The greatest challenge of history is "Thy Kingdom Come," and what are we doing to help it. The needs of the 'teen age girls can be met through the programme of the C.G.I.T.

(1) Foundation in her spiritual life built and developed by daily prayer and Bible study, public worship, group Bible study work, personal dedication every day.

After foundation, physical side must be developed by exercise.

Then intellectual side — read books worth while; encourage hobbies and an appreciation of music, and art, and develop public speaking. Begin serving otners, first in our own home.

Before the conclusion of this most helpful convention a hearty vote of thanks to the people of Burnbrae who so royally entertained the delegates, to the speakers for their most helpful addresses, to those who assisted so charmingly with the musical side of the programme was moved by Mr. G. A. Kingston, and seconded by Rev. H. S. Bennett.

APSLEY BOARD HEARD APPEAL

The Telephone Company Appealed Against Their Assessment. Apsley News of Interest.

APSLEY, May 31.—The Chandos Municipal Council met as a Court of Revision in the schoolhouse at Clydesdale on Saturday afternoon to hear assessment appeal. The only appeal of public interest was that of Apsley Telephone Co. against their assessment of $3,645. Messers. Herbert Tucker and Charles Hawkes, president and vice-president respectively, appeared for the company. The former in supporting his appeal, said that the telehone company had never been assessed before, and that the assessment was excessive. The system was assessed at $135 a mile. The assessor pointed out he had no choice in the matter— the government law says that telephone systems shall be assessed at $135 a mile. In his opinion the Apsley Telephone Co. was of no benefit to the township of Chandos anyway. Mr. Tucker in reply said that if the owners of 'phones paid up their rentals the service would be better, and that the amount of the taxes on this assessment which would come to over $90 was nearly as much as the company collected in Chandos, a statement that was refuted in decidedly unparliamentary language by the assessor. A warm discussion ensued, which was eventually brought to a close by the assessor stating that if a reasonable amount of business had been done by the company the assessment would never have been put on—the idea was for the people to get something back for money lost. The court decided to leave the question of the assessment to the judge's decision.

A Lawn Social.

The Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church gave a lawn social on the Methodist parsonage lawn on the evening of the 24th of May, which was quite a success, the sum of about $20 being realized. Refreshments and ice cream were dispensed to the large crowd present, who thoroughly enjoyed the musical programme that was provided for their entertainment. Mrs. W. Staples made a very efficient 'chairman.' The programme consisted of violin solos by Mrs. C. Smith and Mr. John Coones and musical selections by Mr. and Mrs. Carr and Miss Grace Carr, mouth organ and accordeon by Herb Earnshaw and Tom Lane, recitations by Alma Jones and Mrs. Staples, besides other numbers, and also games.

Gave an Address.

In the unavoidable absence of Rev. W. Hall, the lecture to the Ambulance class on Friday evening was given by Rev. C. Spence. The latter also gave an address on Shakespeare at the A.Y.P.A. meeting on Saturday evening, after which the trial scene from the Merchant of Venice was read by Shylock and Portia, being portrayed by Mr. and Miss M. Spence, and the Duke of Bassanio by Roy Brown.

To Hold Picnic.

The committees having the picnic on June 21st in hand are working hard to make it a success. The sports committee have arranged a good programme of events. Donations of prizes from outside friends will be gratefully acknowledged.

A very welcome supply of magazines for the use of the mission was received at the parsonage on Thursday from Mr. W. Buller, Peterborough, whose kindness is much appreciated by the participants.

CAPT. G. S. LAING TELLS INTERESTING TALE OF THE SEA

Addresses Two Audiences in Lakefield on a Subject Which Has Made Britain Great.

OLD AND THE NEW.

LAKEFIELD, May 31.—Capt. G. S. Laing of the Merchant Marine addressed the boys at "The Grove" on Saturday evening and a largely attended public meeting on Sunday evening in the Town Hall on the subject of "The Merchant Marine, the Story of the Sea." Capt. Laing, who is a native of Dundee, Scotland, is a practical sailor and a splendid speaker. He delighted both audiences with his lecture, which was illustrated by lantern slides.

J. M. Simpson, principal of the school, introduced Capt. Laing to the audience on Sunday evening.

Capt. Laing showed pictures of all classes of ships, including even the craft that was in use by the ancients. Industry is the making of things, agriculture is the growing of things and the sea commerce is the worldwide distribution of these things, he pointed out.

The sea is the greatest manifestation of the Creator. The coasting schooner, which is still in use in some of the coast fisheries, and the full-rigged ship, used in the tea trade from China, the coffee trade from Brazil, the jute trade from India and the timber trade from Canada and as an emigrant ship in the past, are two types of sailing craft, and from these all other sailing craft were devised. It used to be a six weeks' voyage from the Old Land to Canada. These old sailing vessels gave the poetry and romance to the sea.

Birds of the ocean, like the albatross found in the south sea, which never are on land, and some of the petrel family, were shown on the screen.

The charts, which are the seaman's map, are important factors in seamanship, the speaker said. The launching of a ship is an engineering feat in itself, and after the attending ceremonies the ship slides into the water and is towed to the assembling dock to be completed before her maiden voyage. There are various varieties of engines put into these ships, and the modern vessel has many improvements undreamed of in the old days.

The Naval Service.

There are various branches in the naval service, Capt. Laing explained. The Royal Navy, or protective branch of the service, is very important, from the great super-dreadnought to the humble monitor and submarine. Between the Royal Navy and the Merchant Marine is the Royal Naval Reserve ships, which in peace time are the passenger and mail boats and in war time are troop ships. They run in war time in conjunction with the Royal Navy and the troop ships sail under convoy of war ships, as the Canadian contingents did.

The Sea Tramp.

The backbone of the Merchant service is the tramp ship, which is so named because it does not run between any stated ports, but wherever it can find a charter. One of the Captain's own voyages in a "tramp" was interesting and illustrates the work of the "tramp." Sailing from Sunderland, England, to New York, they loaded coal-oil for Singapore. After fifty-five days at sea, they called at Hong Kong. After unloading at Singapore, they coasted to Rangoon, Burmah, and shipped a cargo of rice for fifteen South American ports, calling at Sydney, Australia, on the way. After discharging the rice cargo, they loaded saltpetre for France, and arrived home after a voyage of nine months and having covered forty-one thousand miles.

Fog is the great peril of the sea, especially on our east coast. Icebergs are another peril when in northern latitudes.

Other types of ships, he said, are the timber boats and the oil tankers, which are specially built and equipped for their type of work.

The strongest commercial craft afloat is the old-fashioned whaler, built of solid oak. These ships were used by Arctic explorers. The romance of the old-time whaler has disappeared before modern inventions, and now the harpoon is fired from a gun on the bows of the new steel whalers, and the whale is brought alongside by the steam winch and towed to the boiling-down station.

Shipping Harbors.

There are three kinds of harbors—the natural harbor, such as Rio de Janierio, Vancouver, St. John and Halifax, with a narrow entrance and a large area of protected waters inside; the open roadstead and the river ports, such as London, Liverpool, Montreal, Quebec and New York. The latter depends largely on dredges to keep their channels open.

The drydock is the ships' hospital, and it is an important factor in the Merchant Marine.

The lighthouses and lightships are guides to the sailor of shoals and dangerous coasts. The oldest lightship is the Upre in the estuary of the Thames. The oldest lighthouse in the world is at Alexandria in Egypt.

Life-saving.

The life-saving branch of the service is of great importance, and there are always hundreds ready to give help and succor to those in distress.

The fishing schooner dates back to our Lord's time, and on our own coasts are some of the greatest fisheries in the world. Modern methods have introduced the steam trawler, which drags a net along the bottom and secures larger catches than the old-timers got with their hook and line.

The St. Lawrence is our greatest waterway, with its chain of great lakes. Eighty per cent. of our grain must go on board ship. The further inland we live the more we are dependent on the sea. Port Arthur is the first point of contact with western grain, 420 miles east of Winnipeg. Some of the larger grain boats in the Great Lakes carry half a million bushels of grain.

The old "wooden walls" of old England—obsolete battle ships—are used as training ships and are anchored in the Trent, Mersey, Clyde and Severn Rivers.

The compass, chronometer and sextant all play an important part in the life of the ship, and the signalling system has been revolutionized by the wireless, which has displaced the old flag and whistle signals.

The cable ships are another branch of service, and a very important branch.

Our islands form a very important link in the chain of the Empire, the Captain continued. St. Helena, Bermuda, Ascension, Malta, Penang, the Falklands, Hong Kong and Mauritius are valueable coaling stations and cable fortholds.

Canadian Ships.

Canada must, for her own interests, keep up her own end of sea commerce, and the ideal of the Navy League of Canada is Canadian ships officered and manned by Canadians. Capt. Fryatt, who was executed

Our explorers have played an important part in our national life—Cook, who discovered Australia, and Shackleton, whose work is going on although he is dead.

Sea Heroes Shown.

The pictures of sea heroes, such as Nelson, Jellicoe and Beatty and without a trial on the Belgian coast for firing on a German sub., and whose mortal remains now lie in Westminster Abbey, were shown.

Types of Ensigns.

There are several ensigns, the speaker concluded; the white ensign of the Royal Navy, the blue ensign of the Royal Naval Reserve and the red ensign, or red duster, of the Merchant service, and the grand old Union Jack that flies on all seas, from Hong Kong to Table Bay and at Victoria, Halifax, and at hundreds of ports, as the emblem of freedom and fair play.

W. M. Graham moved a vote of thanks to Capt. Laing, which was seconded by E. J. Galvin, and heartily endorsed by the audience.

NURSE THINKS NOTHING BETTER

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Advised for all Women in Poor Health

Toronto, Ontario—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for years and it is the only patent medicine I ever recommend. I am a nurse and if I find a woman is in poor health I always tell her to take it. Although you know that doctors and nurses do not use patent medicines I must say that I think there is nothing better than your Vegetable Compound. When I first took it I was so tired when I got up in the morning that I could not eat, and when I went to bed I was too tired to sleep. My mother-in-law told me that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was just what I wanted so I tried it and only took two bottles when I felt better. Since then I have found that there is nothing that makes me feel so well, for it seems to build my system right up. I don't know any other medicine that has done so much for women."—Mrs. W. H. Parker, 19 Wellesley Ave., Toronto, Ontario.

Women testify again and again that they have been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound "after other medicines have failed." It has been tried for nearly fifty years and not found wanting.

If you are suffering from any of the various ailments which accompany female weakness try it.

50,000 More Starving Russian Children have been alloted to the Save the Children Fund workers in the famine area about Saratov, by the All-British Committee.

At present, the generosity of the Canadian people has enabled the Canadian Committee of the Save the Children Fund to provide sufficient food for 75,000 children in Russia, who would otherwise have died from starvation.

Now that the Russian Relief Fund (including the British Red Cross), the Friend's Relief Mission and the British and Canadian Save the Children Funds have been united under the direction of Sir Benjamin Robertson, more work is being undertaken and there is a corresponding increase in the demand for funds.

There is absolutely no hope that Russian children can be helped by Russia itself, until the harvest which comes at the end of August. So it is imperative that money and food continue to be sent through the Canadian and British Organizations right through the summer.

Will you give something?

25c. will feed a child for a week. $1. will ensure sufficient food for one child for a month. $500. will establish a kitchen in the famine district and feed 100 children until the next harvest.

Cheques and money orders may be forwarded through the local committee, your bank or sent direct to Sir George Burn, Treasurer, Save the Children Fund, Elgin Building, Ottawa.

All subscriptions are expended in Canada on Canadian Foodstuffs.

MRS. FRANK WILKIE, of Syracuse, N.Y., formerly matron at the State Reformatory at Industry, N.Y., who says she is delighted with Tanlac since it restored her health after she suffered eight years.

"This is the first time in eight years that I have been free from stomach trouble, and it is all because of the wonderful good Tanlac has done me," said Mrs. Frank Wilkie, 229 Cedar Street, Syracuse. Mrs. Wilkie formerly resided in Buffalo, and for two years was matron of the State Reformatory at Industry, N.Y.

"I was eating scarcely enough to keep alive," she declared, "for I would rather not touch a bite than suffer the misery I knew would follow. Even sweet milk disagreed with me. I was sick in bed for two and three days at a time, and gas on my stomach made made such awful pressure on my heart it almost cut off my breath. I had horrible dreams at night, and in the morning was all tired out.

"Well, the longest day I live I will praise Tanlac, for my improvement has been simply remarkable. I have no more heartburn, my appetite is wonderful, I can eat most anything I want, and my sleep is sound and restful. I am thoroughly delighted with Tanlac. It is wonderful."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

CHAPTER L

FLAPPER FOOLISHNESS

Jack had left for the office before I reached home, therefore I remained in doubt as to what effect my morning adventure had made upon him.

Jeanne called me up early, to tease me a little:

"Some hectic lover was your Viking, last night! What did Jack say?"

"Nothing! Not a word!"

"Why, the man isn't human! Peg, dear, I've got to get an awful worry off my mind. You were framed, rather Jack was. I told Bart to make Jack furious."

"All waste on your part! I don't think Jack knows what jealousy means."

After Jeanne had rung off I reminded myself:

"I guess if Jack cared so awfully much, he would at least insist upon knowing what you're up to, Peg Madison! How did he know you were not running away from him this morning?"

Doubtless I would have worked myself into a nice rebellion had not Bonny dropped in about noon.

"I'm wild about that motor trip," she said, "now Bart has agreed to go. I've had so many motor tours with daddy and mother. They get to a spiffy hotel, mother is tired to death, father dead asleep, they never let me go near a ball room," she rattled on. "But with you people, it will be wonderful! But Peg, of all wonders—" Then she fell to laughing.

"What's so funny?"

"Oh, Peggy dear! I've just got to tell someone! A joke on G. B."

Whereupon she told me what I already knew, how she had failed to elope with G. B.

"Well, everybody has been talking. So why didn't you?" I asked.

"It rained so! At least that's what I told ol' George about an hour ago, over the phone! I explained that I couldn't go to the train in one of our cars—the chauffeur would report to daddy. I couldn't have a taxi stop at the house. I couldn't get away to a street car. I didn't have any rubbers! George can't take a joke! Really, he seemed quite furious!" She grew suddenly serious.

"I'm so relieved because I didn't marry him! Besides, you see—I say, Peg, aren't you simply thrilled when Bart makes love to you?"

"No! Not one bit!"

"Why—I'd wait centuries—to hear him—I mean to hear a man make love as he does!"

"While there's life there's hope!" was my trite rejoinder. "George does look awfully old beside Bart, I admit!" I smiled wisely.

"That's just it, Peg! How did you know? George is too old. I had to play cutie for him all the time. You bet I was glad it rained this morning!"

(To Be Continued)

Clarissa moved a chair forward, and Mrs. Travers sat down, taking Clarissa's hand as she did so.

"Sweet Clarissa! More beautiful every day!—I saw the dear Duchess, your mother, yesterday. She is very anxious about Lord Deeford. He is abroad, isn't he? Egypt, or somewhere?"

"Yes, he is abroad," Clarissa hesitated "Yes, he is in Egypt," whispered Disraeli.

"I do hope he is not too venturesome," Mrs. Travers cautioned. "Cairo is such a dreadful place. Those Orientals, you know. One can never trust them."

"No," agreed Disraeli.

"So sly—" Mrs. Travers went on.

"Terribly," came from Disraeli.

"So deceitful—" she added.

"Don't be uneasy," said Dizzy. "We have just heard from him."

Disraeli fell back on the sofa, apparently in utter exhaustion.

Mrs. Travers suppressed her curiosity with the utmost effort, but commented:

"Indeed?"

Disraeli in the voice of a dying man, said:

"Mary, isn't it time for my beef tea?"

"You say you have heard?" asked Mrs. Travers.

"Oh, from Deeford?—Yes, we had a telegram. Where is that telegram?—Help me up, Mary."

Mrs. Disraeli assisted him to sit up.

"Ah, there—on the table. Read it for yourself, Mrs. Travers.

Mrs. Travers picked up the telegram and read it.

Disraeli rose with apparent difficulty and half tottered to the fireplace. His gaze rested on the mirror that topped the shelf.

"Heavens—how pale I am."

Clarissa walked over to him, watching Mrs. Travers.

"The celery is ripe to cut!" Mrs. Travers read. "Why, how odd!"

"Why odd?" asked Didraeli faintly.

Mrs. Travers laid down the telegram with a smile, and answered:

"To think that anyone would telegraph from Cairo about celery."

Mrs. Travers' eyes suddenly fell upon the little book—the code. Disraeli shuffled back to the sofa. He seated himself with an effort and holding his monocle at a peculiar angle, he watched her in the reflection of the glass.

With a swift movement Mrs. Travers placed her hand on the code. Suddenly she crumpled it in her hand, and placed it in the palm of her glove.

Disraeli went on casually:

"Oh, you know he's engaged in a very interesting agricultural experiment. You rememebr the discussion we had at Glastonbury Towers, or this very subject."

"Oh, yes. Glastonbury Towers," Mrs. Travers said. "Such a delightful party. And all dispersed. Lord Deeford in Egypt—and poor Mr. Disraeli very ill. Sir Michael Probert out of town—"

"Probert!" exclaimed Disraeli, with a slight start.

"I beg your pardon—" Mrs. Travers began. She was beginning to look for an excuse to go. She was dying to read the code.

"It is nothing, Mrs. Travers," Disraeli reassured her. "I was trying to remember his name all morning, but my head throbbed and I couldn't. Of course—Probert!"

Mrs. Travers rose and moved toward the window. "Is that one of the famous peacocks?"

"Dizzy is very proud of them, and of the swans," said Lady Beaconsfield, following her.

"I've heard so much about them, may I go out and look at them?"

"By all means, I want you to see them, said Disraeli.

And as Mrs. Travers walked out on the lawn with Lady Beaconsfield, Disraeli called to Clarissa, left alone in the study with him, and said:

"Clarissa, she has the code. Stay with her. Don't let her read it. Run, my dear!"

And Clarissa rushed out, taking Mrs. Travers' arm, and urging Lady Beaconsfield to return to the sick man.

XXVI.

Lady Beaconsfield returned from the garden.

"Mary, I want you to fetch Probert at once!"

"Indeed, Dizzy!" replied Lady Beaconsfield, as she walked to the bellpull "I'll order the carriage."

"Wait. Is Mrs. Travers' cab still there?"

"I'll see—." She looked through the window, and turned: "Yes, dear, it is still waiting."

"Well, take that."

"Oh—but if he refuses to come!"

Disraeli was back at his desk, writing. He looked up.

"Say it's a matter of life and death!"

"But Mrs. Travers—"

"I'll look after her. Mary, take Clarissa with you. I want that woman alone!"

Disraeli had finished the missive. Reading it over, he said:

"That must be signed!—That must be signed!"

"They are returning, Dizzy," warned Lady Beaconsfield.

The Prime Minister laid the sheet of paper quickly aside, and going over to the sofa, he sat down. Clarissa and Mrs. Travers entered, the former nodding to Disraeli, slyly, to indicate that Mrs Travers had not read the code. Mrs. Travers, somewhat irritated, disengaged herself from Clarissa as they approached Disraeli.

"They are beautiful!" Mrs. Travers remarked to Disraeli.

"So glad you liked them!" said Disraeli. "But they are ill. I shall tell you about them. Come, Mrs. Travers, sit here where I can talk with you!". He motioned to the sofa.

"I ought really to be going," Mrs. Travers said.

"No, no: sit down. Lady Beaconsfield and Clarissa have to go and meet the specialist—"

Clarissa was about to speak, but Lady Beaconsfield interrupted her.

"Come, Clarissa," said Lady Beaconsfield. And turning to Mrs. Travers, "We shall be gone only a few minutes."

Mrs. Disraeli and Clarissa walked towards the drive.

"A specialist?" echoed Mrs. Travers, "Are you so ill?"

"Yes," Disraeli replied. "But he'll cure me. He'll cure me. Now you must stay and nurse the poor sick man!"

"I'm so dreadfully sorry, but I must be going——"

Disraeli took her hand, and drew her to him.

"No, no. You must stay till they come back," he said.

"But my cab is waiting—"

"No. I sent it away."

"Really—" She seemed a trifle indignant.

"Ah, don't be angry," he begged, as he took her hand. "This dainty hand shall soothe me."

Mrs. Travers, smiling, but now quite sure of herself, said:

"Please——"

"Those supple fingers—so long and thin—so exquisitely shaped——"

"Mr. Disraeli——" protested Mrs. Travers, coquettishly.

"So quick to grasp things—unconsidered trifles—scraps of paper!"

Mrs. Travers became alarmed. She had approached the point of fright:

"Let me go!"

"In such a hurry to get away from the poor sick man—to get away—and read poor sick man—to get away—and read——"

HEARTBURN
A SEVERE CASE

Many people are troubled with heartburn who really do not realize just what it is.

In cases of this trouble there is a gnawing and burning pain in the stomach attended by disturbed appetite. It is generally caused by great acidity of the stomach, and whenever too much food is taken, it is liable to ferment and becomes extremely sour, causing heartburn. In such cases vomiting often occurs, and what is thrown up is sour and sometimes bitter.

The way to get rid of heartburn is to keep your liver active by using

MILBURN'S

and you will have no heartburn or other liver troubles such as constipation, jaundice, water brash, floating specks before the eyes, coated tongue, foul breath, etc.

Miss Agnes Cutting, Shallow Lake, Ont., writes:—"I have had heartburn for a long time. There were gnawing and burning pains in my stomach, and then when I vomited there was a sour and bitter taste. I used two vials of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, and they have cleared me of my heartburn. I don't think they can be beaten by any other medicine."

DR. GEORGE CLINTON INSTITUTES A SUIT.

Dr. George Clinton, Medical Health Officer for this district, who is well known locally, and is a frequent visitor to Peterborough, has instituted a suit against the County of Hastings in the sum of $120,000, for alle ged damages to himself, Mrs. Clinton, and his daughter, Miss Jean Clinton, pianist, through a motor accident on the road near Fairfield bridge. The suit is being tried in the Supreme Court before the Hon. Mr. Justice Mowat.

In the accident in question Dr. Clinton suffered a fracture of the wrist, Mrs. Clinton was the victim of shock and Miss Clinton sustained injury to her shoulder, which it is claimed makes playing at the keyboard very painful after ten or fifteen minutes of exercise. Miss Clinton told the court that there had been expended on her musical education so far about $12,500, and explained the injuries to her arm, which resulted when the motor her father, Dr. Clinton, was driving, went over a culvert on the side road between Corbyville and Canniiton on September 18th, 1921.

The use of concrete houses is becoming common in various sections of the country.

ARE NOW STRIPPING RELIGIOUS IKONS.

Taking Silver and Gold Overlays to Relieve the Famine.

MOSCOW, May 31.—(Associated Press)—Hammers and chisels, wielded in a matter of fact manner by employees of the goverment committees for Requisition of Church Treasures have stripped in a few moments the silver and gold overlays from ikons that took years to construct. Today these sheets of valuable metall are being weighed on scales and melted down to be sold to help feed Russia's famine sufferers.

Here and there throughout Russia there have been disturbances in connection with the requisitions, but the outstanding feature of the campaign to transform these valuables into bread has been the calm manner in which parishioners have watched the requisitions.

The Associated Press correspondent spent a morning with the Moscow Requisition Committee watching the work at an ancient church and a big convent in Moscow. At the latter a few nuns, solemn faced but unresisting watched the methodical work of the requisitioners and even assisted them by pointing out the treasures containing genuine diamonds.

Fifteen minutes work stripped from an ikon, all of silver and gold, before which Ivan the Terrible once knelt, and lit it a cracked oil painting. A few snips of the shears and a collar of tiny seed pearls, weighing perhaps six pounds and which must have taken months of patient needlework to construct was cut from another ikon and tossed into a box with silver cups, diamond studded crosses and communion cups of gold. Scores of hanging lamps of silver and hand-wrought enamel, which had been carefully tended and filled with oil and lighted for centuries, came down just as quickly and were thrown in heaps on a woden bench to be listed and then weighed on the scales.

Most of the wealth of the church has been placed in the overlays of ikons. The Greek Catholic Church abhors statues, but permits pictures of the saints. Originally mere oil paintings, these ikons have been framed in gold or silver and then overlays of precious metal fitted over the canvas. Sometimes only the faces of the paintings can be seen under the gold and silver. It the paintings is that of the Virgin, for example, pearl necklaces are hung about the overlay that covers the neck. In some cases, garments heavy with jewels are added. When all these decorations are torn away, there remains only an old oil painting.

The work of the requisitioners was extremely careful and methodical Though probably Communist themselves and therefore scorning the customs of the orthodox, they doffed their hats upon entering the church. They did not enter the Sanctuary or other holy rooms but permitted the priest or some other person designated by the faith ful to hand out to them the valuable articles from these places.

Experts from the government museums accompanied the requisitioners and if they discovered objects of great historical alue these were pronounced "musuem articles" and not sold but removed to the museums or permitted to remain in the churches.

At Nikitski convent one ikon which the nuns particularly valued was not taken, as the parishioners agreed to pay over to the famine fund its value in silver coin.

ASK GOVERNMENT TO REFOREST LAND AT SPRINGVILLE HILL

North Monaghan Council Again Take Action on the Provincial Highway Project at This Point.

REVISION COURT.

BROWNTOWN, May 31.—The Council of the Township of North Monaghan met as a Court of Revision at the Town Hall Monday, with the following members present: Reeve Rye, Deputy Reeve Lillico and Councillor Robert A. Dobbin. Reeve Rye was elected chairman of the Court of Revision.

The appeal of E. J. Whiteside to have his dog tax removed from the assessment roll was granted, he having taken a sworn declaration that the two dogs for which he was assessed are dead. Appeals of W. G. Howden and W. C. Simmons in the same regard were also granted, on condition that both take sworn declarations in the same manner.

Joseph Le[illegible]r appealed to the Court of Revision to have Lots 9 and 10, Plan 51, North Monaghan, changed from the name of W. H. Rew to that of himself, also to have school taxes on the said lots diverted to the separate schools. This appeal was granted. Change was also made of name on lots 69, 70 and 71, Plan 30, from that of F. H. Rowan to R. H. Knox. The Court then adjourned and the council proceeded with regular business.

Springvill' Hill.

Whereas, the Provincial Government decided to build a provincial highway around Springville hill, and have also decided to take additional land from the farm of F. E. Wilson for widening the said highway, and whereas the strip of land between the two roads is practicaly useless for agricultural purposes, and whereas the said F. E. Wilson has had to maintain fences on both roads, which seems useless, now that the Provincial highway is widened, therefore the Council of the Township of North Monaghan requests the Provincial Government to purchase the said strip of land from F. E. Wilson, and have the same re-forested, including the old road allowance.

Approaches to Property.

Messrs. Robt. Curtin and Oliver Guerin of New Romaine street came before the Council and asked for approaches to their property. On account of the height of the sidewalk in front of their property, where the creek cuts through the said sidewalk, they said that the sidewalk at this point was four feet above the roadway along the sidewalk. A committee of the Council was appointed to inspect the road in front of Lots 13 and 14 Plan 50, in regard to the difficulty encountered by these men by way or having no access to their property for delivery of coal, etc.

By-law No 817 was introduced, read and finally passed, authorizing the municipality to borrow $10,000 from the Bank of Nova Scotia, to meet the cost of constructing sidewalks on McGill and other streets in the Township of North Monaghan, as local improvements.

Appointment of A. R. Moore.

By-Law No. 818, as also introduced, read and finally passed, appointing A. R. Moore, High County Constable, as sanitary inspector and school attendance officer, at a salary of $80 per annum.

By-Law No. 819 was also introduced, read and finally passed, providing for expenditure on township roads, under the approval of the provincial department of Public Highways, for the year 1922. Expenditure for maintenance, machinery, bridges, etc, was estimated Communications.

Communications were received from the Hospital for Sick Children Toronto, which was received and fyled, as was also a letter from Mr. H. L. Beal, of the Hydro Electric Power Commission, re laying gas mains across Lansdowne street to Mr. Crouter's residence, which was granted by resolution.

An application was received from George Allan to supply an engine to run the stone-crusher. A resolution was passed to have B. McManus supply the engine for crusher at $8 per day.

A resolution was also passed: that all parties operating refreshment booths in the township of North Monaghan must pay their license fee to the Township treasurer before opening said booths. If payment is not made prior to opening, the township treasurer is authorized to send A. R. Moore, High County Constable, to take the collection. A resolution was passed to the effect that no refreshment booths be allowed on the public highways of the Township.

The meeting then adjourned until the next regular session, on Monday, Jue 12th, in the Peterboro Court House, commencing at 2p.m.

"The Message of the Bluebird"

Mr. Asa Huycke blossomed forth as a producer of light opera of his own composition with the initial presentation at the Grand Opera House last night, a delightful musical fantasy entitled "The Message of the Bluebird." And as a further demonstration of his versatile talents he sang the leading role himself, and generally stamped the performance unmistakably with his operatic conceptions and his personality, which for the first time found their fullest and freest expression.

It was difficult to interpret the judgment of the large and encouraging audience, for Mr. J. H. Renwick partly disarmed the usual criticism by announcing before the first curtain that owing to the length of the programme encores could not be given. However, it was a palpably friendly audience and if they hadn't the sophistication of those hardened first-nighters who indicate their approval by demands of "author! author!" that was perhaps due to the important fact that Peterborough's operatic or theatrical premieres are extremely rare.

A memory that reaches back to those halcyon days when "The Ginger Bread Man" and "The Yankee Consul" were providing charming relaxation for the tired business men and likewise the mechanics and clerks of Peterborough, fails to recall any other such occasion as the production of any work for the theatre, light opera, comedy or drama, written by a citizen and also a native of Peterborough. The chief feature of last night's success was not so much the success itself, which was genuine and highly deserved, but the very fact that a young man from amongst us achieved the distinction of offering to the public for their enjoyment such an exacting invention as a light opera. In the retrospect this point perhaps need not be stressed, except to emphasize that "The Message of the Bluebird" marks a new attainment and accomplishment for Mr. Huycke. The people of Peterborough and especially those who know him best, and who understand the struggle he has made from the publication of his first essay in music, a march that had quite a wide popularity for a time, these friends will particularly congratulate Mr. Huycke upon the new height he has reached in his musical development, and will extend to him the sincere hope that the Bluebird's Message is but a forerunner of many other compositions that will finally realize that the aspirations which have so far guided him faithfully and well.

"The Message of the Bluebird" hasn't much of a plot, nor is it specially coherent or connected. But then operas seldom are and in that respect Mr. Huycke followed notable precedent. There is a tenuous story involving the triangle of an ambitious young shepherd, his country sweetheart and a pretty heiress whose flitting and restless fancy finds passing attraction in the shepherd, as they always do when an author gives free rein to his license. In due time the piece reaches that stage from which you see the lovers living happy after, and the curtain descends upon a medley of the snappiest song numbers, that has a distinct professional flavour except for the quaint little epilogue or finale of appreciation which gives a parting touch of intimacy and sympathy ordinarily possible only in local theatricals.

To this gossamer of sentiment Mr. Huycke has added youth and colour and freshness, and strung it with jewels of song and music which in the main sparkle with original melody and rich harmonies. The cast is a thoroughly capable one, the principal roles being well placed and intelligently acted. The chorus was equal to the best that has been heard in amateur work here, possessing rich, robust tone that was smooth and finely balanced. One was inclined to regret that Mr. Huycke did not call upon this chorus more frequently.

To particularize the work of the principals requires too much detail for the reason that their co-operation was uniformly excellent, and besides on this occasion the main honours are due to Mr. Huycke. His previous experience in various forms of minstrelsy and standard light operas prepared and equipped him for his venture in composition of both music, libretto and also the lyrics of "The Message of the Bluebird,' and its repetition to-night is heartily recommended to those who missed its first presentation.

Twenty-five Songs.

The opera in its three acts comprised twenty-five numbers, including choruses, solos, duets, a septette and other combinations that were in all worthy of note. "The Legend of the Bluebird," sung as a duet by Mrs. Perrin and Mr. Huycke, was the hit of the evening. It has a charming, haunting melody that catches and enhances the theme, and is one of the most striking compositions the author has ever written. His flair for resonant and flowing harmonies finds expression in the septette, "Lo See the Stars in Their Array" by Mrs. Perrin, Mr. Picard, Mr. Legendre, Miss Lillian Eastwood, Mr. Huycke and Mrs. Park.

A few years ago Mr. Huycke wrote for the choir of the Murray street Baptist church at their annual concert an anthem, "There is a Land of Pure Delight." It was stamped all over with exceptional merit, and was quite evidently a special inspiration. Mr. Huycke used the principal theme of that number for the septette of his opera and its opulent harmony is one of high lights of the whole production. Among the lighter numbers was a trio, "The Evolution of the Fox Trot," by Mrs. Park, Miss Sanderson and Mrs. Perrin, that deserves special mention for its original dance conception. Another novelty was "Life's Fashion Show," illustrated in minutely correct and charming period costumes by the following ladies—Oriental, date 300 B.C., Miss Ethel Rae; Roman, 400 A.D., Mrs. L. H. Ingram; Gainsborough, 1750, Mrs. (Dr.) Morgan; Marie Antoinette, 1775, Miss I. Taylor; Dolly Vardon, 1800, Miss L. Freeman; Jenny Lind, Miss K. McCarthy; Bustle Belle, 1875, Miss D. Anderson; Maid of Today, Mrs. G. E. Curvin.

Mrs. Park as the American heiress, won new laurels in a sphere to which she has been too long a stranger. This was her first appearance in light opera and it was a pronounced success. She was charming in the Blind Man's Buff song, and in the Little Brown Thrush number she was equally effective in bringing out its appeal to sentiment. Mrs. Park's beautiful soprano was a decided acquisition to the vocal resources of the caste, both in solo and choral work. Mrs. Perrin was handicapped somewhat in her singing by a temporary throat affection, but she invested her acting with the naturalness and proficiency of experience and a special aptitude for operatic roles. In "The Legend of the Bluebird" she shared with Mr. Huycke the song hit of the evening, and deserves particular commendation upon the spirit that carried her through an exacting role under conditions that would probably have incapacitated most ladies.

Miss Lillian Eastwood won special laurels in her solo, which demanded high technical attainments, and Miss Sanderson in a light comedy role with Mr. "Kit" Picard as her foil, injected most of the humour and sang her part with characteristic competence and satisfaction.

Miss Greta Lebarr was a dainty soubrette, and the other members, Mr. Legendre, Mr. Cottingham, Mr. Perry, Mr. Taplin, rounded out one of the most capable casts that has ever been selected from local talent. Mr. Picard as the French count carried off the character honours.

The musical director was Mr. J. H. Renwick, and Mr. W. F. Leader was orchestral director, and the staging was another invaluable contribution by Mrs. Perrin to "The Message of the Blubebird."

The predominance of the musical element in this opera indicates the importance of the task that fell to Mr. Renwick and Mr. Leader, and if the blue bird's message was sometimes obscured in the showers of music it eventually emerged to be reaccentuated. The orchestra and the chorus provided a tonal background of glowing and even colour, and had it been brought upstage more often the audience would probably have approved. Altogether it was a delightful first night, a triumph for Mr. Huycke even if there were some places that might profitably have been pruned somewhat or altered to enhance the comedy element.

COLONIAL HIDE COMPANY
PETERBOROUGH

DOMINION'S INVITE TO PAN-AMERICAN.

Difficulties in the Way of Canadian Participation.

WASHINGTON, May 31.—(By Canadian Press.) — While a great deal is being said unofficially with respect to an invitation to Canada to participate in the forthcoming conference of the Pan-American Union at Santiago, there are difficulties in the way of such an invitation, according to high authority here, which may preclude it. So far as the United Sttaes is concerned, there is no question it would be glad to see Canada represented at the conference, in fact, in the Pan American Union itself.

The constitution of the organization, however, limits the membership to the republic of the New World. This has been true since the beginning of the organization. Under this constitution, the officials doubt their authority to extend invitations to countries other than republics.

Moreover, if Canada is included, there will arise the delicate question of what to do about some other countries, such as British Guiana, French Guiana and Dutch Guiana. Exactly where to stop if the policy of including republics only in the invitation is abandoned is difficult to say.

Another phase of the matter is that there is some delicacy felt by the Pan-American Union about inviting Canada unless it is done through Great Britain. And here comes up the question as to how the British government would view the association of one of its great Dominions with an organization of republics.

In past years, it is learned, the question of inclusion of Canada in the Pan American Union has veen much discussed unofficially by influential men in the organization and outside of it. Officially, however, it never got anywhere for the reasons already indicated.

In view of the growing importance of Canadian trade with Latin America and with the United States, it has to be admitted that the reasons for including Canada are stronger than many years ago, when the Union was formed. It would be entirely natural if the question should arise at Santiago of taking Canada into the Union. While officials here do not say this will be done, there are substantial reasons why it should be a proper subject for consideration. Even though no invitation goes to Canada to attend the conference, it would cause no surprise if the conference should discuss the question of extending an invitation to Canada to attend future Pan American Union gatherings.

CANDLE COLORS.

The craze for candles is increasing, perhaps because candle light is a kind light. Be sure when you get yours, however, that you do not match your wall paper. The effect is more lovely when the candles contrast rather sharply with the remainder of the furnishings of the room. Black candles are beautiful in gold or brass holders.

Princess Mary Furnishes Pattern for This Season's Bridal Frocks

AN ESPECIALLY ORNATE BRIDAL GOWN OF THIS SEASON. NOTE ELABORATE HEAD-DRESS.

By Marian Hale

Though the role of June bride has been played by millions of women, with varying degrees of success, there is always a chance for the beginner to add new touches and make her characterization distinctive.

This season, in the matter of costumes, brides are following the precedent of Princess Mary. Consequently, we see less white satin than usual. Many of the most favored gowns this season are of lace or silk tissues, embroidered or dotted with designs in pearls.

Instead of looking very formidable and austere in a white satin gown, high necked and very long, the June bride looks very much like herself and manages to put her own particular personality in her frock.

Some of the bridal gowns are very short—American women simply won't take kindly to the long skirt—but the ceremonial effect is gained by the addition of a long train, which is usually fastened from the shoulders.

Of course, the bride who has inherited some old lace always uses it on her wedding gown. It it is a small piece she usually incorporates it into her head-dress. If she has several yards it may always be depended on for the veil.

Frequently we must, admit, the weakest point in the bridal outfit is the head-dress because women so rarely wear this sort of thing they are likely to get the wrong effect when they attempt it.

The Dutch cap with the points over the ears, the Spanish cap, which is a high-pointed treatment, and the Russian cap, with the wide band surrounding the face, are all helpful suggestions learned from foreign lands.

The relation between white satin and pearls is so close a one that it is no wonder that the favorite jewel of the bride is the pearl. The bride usually avoids a display of jewelry excepting her engagement and wedding ring, and the bar pin which is so frequently the gift of the groom.

Often the buckles of the white satin slippers, however, are jewelled

The bridesmaid's role is a decorative one and her selection of a gown offers a much wider range of possibilities. Taffeta, made ito bouffant frocks, georgette, lace and organdie are the favored materials, and they are cut on the lines of the fashionable frocks for afternoon or evening according to the time of the ceremony.

Usually the bride asks her maids to dress alike and she plans the costumes and the colors, to match her general scheme. This year the large picture hat is the bridemaid's choice in millinery.

EACH OF THESE BRIDAL GOWNS ACHIEVES CHARM THROUGH A DIFFERENT MEDIUM AND PERIOD. THE HEAD-DRESSES ARE NOVEL. BRIDEMAID'S HAT (INSET) WITH FACINGS OF OLD BLUE ORGANDIE IS THE SIZE LANVIN PREFERS.

RAYBESTOS NINE IS DEFEATED BY C.G.E. PLAYERS

A CLOSE SCORE.

The intermediate ball classic put on at Riverside Park last evening went to Canadian Generals who won a exciting game with Raybestos by the score of 5 to 4. The teams showed a variety of baseball stunts, including a throw to third, with two gone and two strikes on the batter, and pegs to the plate with two out and easy chances at retirement at the initial cushion. Raybestos did not disappoint their supporters who expected their favorites to pound the pill, but there were no whoops of joy over the baserunning performances of the team.

Daynard's leave to third with two out and a pair of strikes on Ray Rose, scored the usual penalty for the throw was wild and Nelson counted with a run that tied the teams. Bob Ross got the Electrics well away in the fourth by doubling to right. Infield taps did the rest giving C.G.E. a lead of three. Raybestos lost a lovely chance in the fifth, which Lundy opened with a single. Prosser was sure when Rose threw the ball to the fence. Russell singled into middle, and Lundy went on home only to be thrown out easily by McCarney. Prosser was run down between second and third and Nichols flew out to short. Raybestos also came strong in the sixth, and on a single and a couple of errors sent two runners home. Lundy hit to left but went out on a close decision at second, on the throw in from Legon.

The sixth and seventh for Raybestos were featured by several fine stops by Frank Barrie. Jack McCarney also won added fame as a fly-copper by taking Coursey's long poke in the fourth.

Both Rose and Daynard were wild.

BIG PRICE FOR A BALL PLAYER.

Price Paid For Willie Kamm Said to Be in the Neighborhood of $125,000.

NEW YORK, May 31.—(Canadian Press)—The sum of $100,000, together with two players valued at $25,000, reported as the price the Chicago American League Club has agreed to pay the San Francisco club in the Pacific League for Infielder Willie Kamm, equals the high record established last December by John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Nationals.

It is the common understanding that McGraw paid $100,000 and two players, who value may or may not have been 25,000 to the Cincinnatti Club of the National League for Heinie Groh, who plays third base, the same position as Kamm. Mc Graw about the same time paid $75,000 to the San Francisco Club for Jimmy O'Connell, who will not come to the Giants until next year.

IF THIS PLAY COMES UP

If the batsman with two strikes swings at the next pitch and slightly fouls it and the ball strikes the catcher's protector, and bounds directly off it, the batsman is out if the catcher recovers possession of the ball before it touches the ground. If, however, the ball after being fouled becomes momentarily lodged under the protector or some other part of the uniform it nullifies the out, even though the catcher should recover the ball before it touches the ground. There must be no delay in the rebound from the protector to the catcher's hands.

JIMMY MURPHY IS NEW KING OF THE SPEEDWAY

Winner of 500 - Mile Auto Race Smashes All Previous Records For Speed

HARTZ IS SECOND.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 31.—(Canadian Press)—Leading from start to finish, Jimmy Murphy, of Los Angeles, California, winner of the 1922 French Grand Prix, carved his name deeper in the Hall of Motor Fame yesterday when he flashed across the wire a winner of the 500 mile automobile race at the Indianapolis Speedway before a record-breaking crowd of 135,000 spectators.

Murphy smashed all records for the distance to smithereens, clipping more than 16 minutes off the best previous record. His time was 5:17:30.79, an average of 94.48 miles an hour, against the old record of 5:33:55.51 or 89.84 miles an hour, made by Ralph De Palma in 1915. Murphy did something which has never been accomplished before at the Idianapolis Speedway and to the knowledge of racing experts never before in a race of major existence. He shot in the lead at the start and never relinquished it during one instant of five hours of thrilling driving. He was the first away, was first over the line at the completion of the first lap, and was first over the wire when Captain Eddie Rickenbacker waved the flag for his victory.

The Los Angeles driver made only three stops during the entire 500 miles. He made his first stop at 185 miles, pulling up at the pits for two minutes to change all tires and replenish the fuel tanks. With a lead of about ten miles, Murphy pulled into the pits for another tire change and for more gasoline and oil after he had travelled 368 miles. The assistance of his pit men were nothing short of marvelous. It took them just 28 seconds to change right front tire and provide him with fuel enough to assure his finishing.

While major honors went to Murphy, Harry Hartz, also of Los Angeles, who finished second, drove a remarkable race. He jumped into second place sixty miles after the start, and held it throughout, always making a desperate fight to catch Murphy. Hartz's time was 5:20:34.59, an average of 93.54 miles per hour, which also was far in advance of the record. Eddie Hearne a veteran racer, piloted a French car to third place in 5:22:26.06 for an average of 92.04 miles an hour, while Ralph De Palma, one of the favorites, was fourth in 5:31:04.65 of 90.61 miles an hour.

PORT HOPE SELECTS THREE TRUSTY MEN FOR HOCKEY TEAM

Belleville Ontario—Port Hope is already putting in good work on next winter's hockey team. Just listen to this. They already have three new men:

FOR TENNIS PLAYERS.

A new magazine "Canadian Lawn Tennis" has made its first official appearance, the first issue being distributed last week. It is the official organ of the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association and is distinctly national in character. News from all parts of the Dominion are carried in its columns while tennis news from foreign countries which may be of interest to Canadian readers is also included, and it is well illustrated. It is a publication which should be in the hands of every tennis player in the Dominion. It is published in Toronto.

ALL WAS QUIET.

Milton Dedman, that sly old fox in Lindsay, has been saying nothing but evidently he has gathered a speedy team together. The only news that came out of Lindsay was about Lindsay players leaving town and going to Bowmanville, but they kept enough at home to be able to step into Leaside on Saturday and defeat George Peacock's home brews and otherwise to the tune of 7 to 2.

LONDON, May 31.—(Canadian Press)—The international featherweight contest staged at Holland Park hall, London Monday night between Criqui the French champion and Joe Fox the British champion was won by the Frenchman. The contest was billed to go 20 rounds but Fox was so badly beaten that the referee stopped the fight in the 12th round.

OWLS WINNERS IN THE PLAY-OLF

The re-play of the cup game between the Owls and the Woollens resulted in a victory for the former, 3 to 2, at the Oval last evening.

The Owls won the toss and set the Woollens to face the sun. The Woollens were first in evidence in the play, a fine run and a cross by Read being narrowly headed by Shuttle. It was left to the Owls, however, to open the scoring, a soft shot by Hannah being spooned through by Chambers. The Owls followed up their advantage and attacked in full force. Some good play resulted, and only good work on the part of the goalie prevented a higher score.

Hannah scored number two for his team with an excellent bit of play. The Owls wre now master of the situation, the Woollens defence resorting to the one back game to defeat the scheming of the Owls' forwards.

The Woollens came back strong right from the kick-off in the second half. A series of corners to Woollens brought no result, and their first score came when Hoske of the Owls headed a cross from Downes through his own goal. The Woollens pressed the Owls strongly at this stage of the game, and Hillman showed up as a tower of strength to his team. Hannah, however, managed to get away with a dribble through the Woollens line, the ball falling dead off Chambers for Hutton to walk it into goal.

The Woollens then re-arranged their line-up, sending Chambers forward, which was a change for the better. A hard shot from Chambers re-bounded off McFadden, Shuttle netting. The game finished with the Woollens trying hard to save the game.

Teams:

Owls—McFadden, Hardie, Hosker, Burrows, "Wag" Hotston, Edwards, Bills, Hutton, Davie, Hannah and "Ted" Hotston.

Woollens — Griffin, Cridland, Chambers, G. Monkman, Hillman, C. Monkman, Read, Shuttle, Gaskell, Roberts and Downes.

Referee—J. Clark.

WON'T RELEASE ROSE TO PETES.

C. G. E. Club Decides to Hold Player Wanted By Central Leaguers.

For some time efforts have been made to secure the release of Ray Rose from the C.G.E. team of the City Baseball League in order that he might be used on the Peterborough Central League team, where his services could be employed to advantage and where the player in question would, it is said, prefer to play. At a meeting of the executive of the C.G.E. club last night, however, it was decided to refuse to release Rose to the Central League club, and the Petes will be without his services.

The decision is not likely to react to the advantage of either the C.G.E. club or of the City League. The majority of ball fans are concerned only with the Central League. They are anxious to see Peterborough represented by the strongest team possible, and they feel that Rose should be wearing a Peterborough uniform. That he is being held in the City League when he is needed in the big circuit will have the effect of reducing the attendance at City League fixtures, already small enough, to a minimum. As a result of the Rose case, President Frank Convery of the City League, has announced his intention of resigning from his position, as he feels that any City League players required by the Peterborough team should be allowed to go. The troubles of the local loop have been added to by the fact that the Classics have dropped out, leaving only three teams in the race.

NO LIGHT JOB FOR PETES TO WIN SATURDAY

Bowmanville Have Strong, Well - Balanced Team, and Solomon Crew Will Have to Be at Their Best

Three Good Twirlers.

Because this Bowmanville crew who meet the Petes at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon in a Central League fixture, have lost their first two starts, the fans should not make the mistake of putting them down as weak sisters. The Bowmanville team held Belleville to a 3 to 2 score in their opening game, and at Cobourg last Saturday it was anybody's game, with Cobourg leading by 1 to 0 until the eighth, when the Tysonites drew away. Any gang that can hold Belleville and Cobourg in check are dangerous, and Bowmanville should not be regarded as soft picking for any man's team. They have a trio of promising twirlers in Chambers, last year with Lindsay, Blaber, who got his baseball education in Toronto and Somerville, a Bowmanville youngster. Bates, Lindsay's catcher last year, is doing the receiving, and Jack Stark, also of Lindsay, is at third base. Moise, the clever shortstop of the Port Hope Ontarios, is patrolling the territory between second and third and if the rest of the team is equal in calibre to those named, the new entrants to the League will provide merry opposition for the Petes on Saturday afternoon. Another huge crowd is expected, as the good showing of the Solomon outfit in the campaign so far has aroused hectic interest in the League race.

CROP REPORT

Following is a summary of reports made by the Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

Representatives are noting with much satisfaction the absence so far of spring frosts.

Spring grains are making rapid growth; some describe it as phenomenal. Oat fields especially are in most promising conditions. Some mangels and other roots are up and are looking well. The prospects for early potatoes are also encouraging, as the weather has been very favorable for all spring crops.

A number of representatives speak enthusiastically of the prospects of fruit. Apples as a rule are heavily set, more especially the early varieties. On well sprayed orchards the prospects were never better.

Lincoln speaks favorably of the prospects of the strawberry crop. Speaking of the general outlook in the Province, all small fruits promise well, except raspberries, which have not come through the winter in first-class shape.

Sweet clover is over a foot high in Peel, and some farmers are already pasturing it. The acreage is being extended in many counties in the Province.

A large number of Representatives report concerning the condition of fall wheat, and the consensus of opinion is that the fields are in generally fair condition. Peterborough states that the fall wheat and rye are already shooting into head.

Kent states that tobacco beds have been making excellent growth during the past couple of weeks.

Halton says that much of the grain sown this spring was of the 1920 crop, but that, happily, the germination was good.

Waterloo is of opinion that haycutting will be about a week earlier than usual.

Middlesex states that farmers are asking from $1.75 to $2 a bag for good seed potatoes.

Port Arthur says: "Potatoes were loaded at Murillo last week at fifty-two cents per bag and at Kakabeka Falls at sixty cents per hundred lb. bag. Good table stock is still bringing one dollar per bag on the market."

Bruce states that more cattle than usual are being grassed this year as on account of the shortness of grains fewer animals were finished in the stable. Milch cows are selling at from $60 to $70.

Kenora says: "A car-load of young cattle and horses was brought in from the West last week and taken out to a 240-acre ranch south of Dryden. These cattle cost on average $35.

Peterborough says that owing to the poor price of cheese a good many patrons are deserting the cheese factories for the creamery.

On the other hand, cheese factories in Northumberland are reporting an increased supply of milk during the past week.

Middlesex reports the horn fly as being very bad for the time of year.

Ewes are selling in Middlesex at from $12 to $15 each. Grey reports that lambs are doing very well.

Lennox and Addington states that farmers are going into hog raising on a more extensive scale, as there appears to be more money in it at present than in any other branch of farming.

South Simcoe avers that fewer hogs are being fed than formerly, and that the greater part of the supply on hand are suckers, which are to be run roughly until the new grain comes.

Young pigs are bringing $12 a pair in Brant and Hastings. Lennox and Addington quotes them as high as $14 a pair, and Hastings cites $15.

Swim—It Reduces You and Gives You Grace

BY MARIAN HALE.

Since reducing has become the popular pastime it has brought into favor many sports once neglected.

Among these swimming undoubtedly takes the lead, because it is the most effective agency for removing extra pounds and keeping more from accumulating.

Also, it is a much pleasanter form of svelting than slow starvation.

However, Mary Beaton, celebrated Scotch swimmer, who conducts one of the most fashionable swimming schools in New York, believes swimming should be indulged in primarily as a means of acquiring grace.

* * *

"Swimming is as beautiful as esthetic dancing," she maintains, "and as much of a joy to the eye, if properly done.

"But in their eagerness to reduce flesh many women erroneously believe their end will be accomplished more quickly if they try to develop great speed in the water. Few women can swim fast and be graceful.

"Few women are physically capable of becoming long-distance swimmers and they injure their health when they try to be. They should be content to swim gracefully and beautifully.

"No one quality is so important to a woman as grace. With grace she may draw attention from a face which is not beautiful and still give the impression of great charm. But a face, be it ever so perfect, is powerless without the accompaniment of a graceful body.

MARY BEATON.

"A woman is never too old to swim. You would be surprised, possibly, to know that frequently granddaughter and grandmother come together for their swimming instruction.

"Often, too, grandmother proves to be a more apt pupil than the child, for she realizes the importance of what she is doing.

* * *

"Many of the women in my classes are 50 and 60 years old, and are taking up swimming for the first time. Usually, however, they do not look their ages, for they are wise enough to keep in good physical trim.

"All the massages and mud-packs a woman can use to keep her face young are useless unless she keeps her body slender and her step light and springy.

"Youth is life and motion. As long as a woman is active and agile she is bound to look youthful. But she has to use an effort to keep what is a child's natural endowment."

Miss Beaton has taught swimming in Scotland, England and Canada. She is a member of the British Royal Life Saving Society.

'THE QUEEN OF SHEBA' AND MISS BETTY BLYTHE LAST TIME TO-NIGHT

Moving picture photoplay has reached great perfection, yet it never fails to appeal to an audience and the enthusiasm aroused by some of the scenes in "The Queen of Sheba" featuring Betty Blythe, is beyond the ordinary. The scenic effects, showing as they do the glories of the Orient, and the famous Temple of Solomon as well as his palaces, present a panorama of georgeousness which is hard to credit. Yet the production, is a perfect, as true to the reconstructed idea of the ancient world as students and artists allied with the picture producers could make it. Miss Blythe, is not only a beautiful woman but a clever actress—there is none of that disappointment which a discriminating public found with the historic portrayals of another screen favorite and the Biblical allusions are discreetly used without offending good taste. Her costumes are of course magnificent, and she certainly typifies Oriental beauty; to a certain extent, the discussion concerning the great drama has much to do with Miss Blythe's daring costumes, but one cannot expect anything else in a story which must be a riot of georgeous color and pageantry. Among the most talked of scenes are those in which King Solomon mourns his dead child—his beloved David—but— in the tomb, with the light just coming in through the barred window, the rays illuminate the face of the child and he returns to life before the eyes of his enraptured father. Again there is a remarkable picture showing the famous scene in the court of justice at which Solomon presides, when he makes the memorable decision that gives the child under discussion to his proper mother.

THREE DAYS STARTING TOMORROW THE CAPITOL THEATRE WILL OFFER

TARKINGTON NOVEL FILMED

"The Man From Home" Finely Produced by George Fitzmaurice

Foremost among the novels which have brought Booth Tarkington lasting fame, is undoubtedly "The Man From Home", which has now been translated to the screen and which will be showing at the Capitol Theatre, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. With the action laid mostly in Italy, and several scenes in England and America, the story is a thrilling one and in its transferrance to the screen it has lost none of its intensity. Produced by George Fitzmaurice for Paramount, it has been invested with the customary fire and vigor expected from this virile director. On of the chief details is the excellent cast, which comprises such favorites as James Kirkwood, Anna Q. Nilsson Norman Kerry, Dorothy Cumming and John Miltern.

AT THE ROYAL.

Reader, if you are interested by the best class of photoplays, we would advise you not to miss your last chance to-night to see Richard Barthelmess in that wonderful romance of the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia, called "Tol'able David." If you follow press notices in the Toronto papers you know that this brilliant young actor took that city by storm last week. "Tol'able David" we consider one of the best pastoral plays ever produced on the screen. Its scenes are actually taken by the Trail of the Lonesome Pine, and its characters are the hardy, God-fearing mountaineers who avenge a slight and appreciate a kindness. The story is of a young man who avenged an injury done to his brother by outlaws. It has an exciting finish that charms an audience. Richard Barthelmess cannot be accused of being lacking in business acumen. When they were casting for "Tol'able David," he insisted that Miss Marion Abbot be signed to play the part of his mother.

"Miss Abbott is not only a fine actress," explained the young star, "but has never appeared in pictures and I am anxious for her to see at first hand that the salaries are not all the press agents say they are. You see, she's my landlord, and my lease expires this year."

Then Constance Talmadge, leading comedienne in movie stardom, appears in a six-reel serio-comic drama entitled "Good References." Billy Bevan in the Mack Sennett comedy called "Duck Hunters," brings a laugh a minute. It's a very clever production!

WORLD SHORTAGE IN TEA RESULTS IN HIGHER PRICES.

During 1919 and 1920 the greatly increased production and unlimited shipping facilities resulted in enormous quantities of tea reaching every market of the world. A consequent drop in price was the result. To stabilize the situation, the tea growers of Ceylon and India agreed to curtail production 20 per cent. in 1921. Since that time the demand has been constantly increasing and the price rising. The recent reduction of duty on tea entering England has further increased the demand, and the price is expected to rise accordingly.

THE EDWARDS CASE

didn't seem upset at all. She said it was his own ugly temper.'

To questions of Mr. Strickland witness said he found a note in a sewing machine drawer at the home of George Brown headed "Ernie" and evidently addressed to deceased He acted on instructions of "the chief', he said in getting this note, which was submitted as Exhibit B.

Constable Puffer gave a vivid description of the. arrest of Mrs Edwards and Filion at the home of George Brown near midnight. Mrs. Edwards, he testified, leaped out of the bed in which Filion was found lying as the officers entered the bed room.

C. R. Widdifield did not cross-examine Constable Puffer but raised an objection to the submission of Exhibit B as it was not evidence in the case.

Daughter's Evidence

Jennie Edwards, 14 year old daughter of the prisoner was called and impressed with the meaning of an oath by the magistrate. When prepared to take her evidence Dr. A. W. McPherson entered the court and the little girl was asked to step down until the doctor's evidence was taken. The doctor's evidence was that the post mortem examination with what the provincial analysist found would indicate Edwards died from strychnine poisoning. He said in cross-examination that death generally followed within two hours of the administering of the drug. He would not say that the body always became rigid. Recalled he testified to sending sections of the spleen, the liver, sections of one kidney and the stomach and its contents to Toronto for examination.

At the request of the Crown the noon adjournment was made following Dr. McPherson's evidence at 12.30 p.m.

If we were asked to decide one thing that does more harm to the human race than anything else, we would probably say that thing was the habit of worry. It causes us to work ourselves up into such an excitable state where we are not responsible for the things we do. Some of us drink to drown our worries which only plunges us into further trouble. Some of us become so nervous and irritable that we sacrifice our best friends. Many of us worry ourselves into a state of nervous apprehension which leads us to do foolish impulsive things.

More often than not, in fact ninety per cent of the time, our worries have no real basis, the cause vanishes and we have worked ourselves up over a mythical bugaboo.

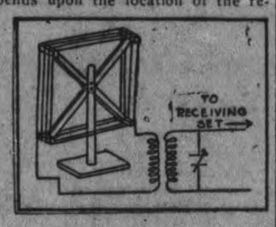
LOOP AERIAL PUTS WHOLE RADIO SET INDOORS

(By R. L. DUNCAN)
Director, Radia Institute of America

Where an outdoor aerial cannot be erected, either on account of lack of facilities or a disagreeable landlord, the radio enthusiast should use a loop antenna.

This can be made easily and placed in a corner of a room or attic where it would be out of the way. Fairly good results are obtained by using this indoor form of antenna.

The size of the loop aerial depends upon the location of the receiving station, its distance from the broadcasting station. At any distance away one should have at lest detector and two-step amplifier.



CONSTRUCTION OF LOOP AERIAL.

Construction

A good loop antenna for receiving wave lengths up to 600 meters is one about four feet square, using four turns of Litzendraht wire spaced one-fourth of an inch between each turn.

These wires must not touch even though they be insulated.

The frame of the loop may be constructed of two small pieces of wood crossed at the center. They should be a little more than 5 1-2 feet long for the four-feet-square loop.

Since the loop has a directional effect in receiving, the frame should be mounted on a small wooden up right which can be held in place by a solid wooden base. This should be so constructed that the loop may be turned easily.

To receive a desired station, the loop should be pointed towards that direction. Stations at right angles in the loop will not be heard unless they are very near and use a great deal of power.

No Ground.

It should be noted that no ground is used. One wire of the loop is connected in place of the ground lead.

Since the loop aerials are inexpensive, it is suggested that the radio amateur try several different dimensions and sizes. Experiment also with the grade of wire.

The more turns, though, that you have, the higher the wave length re ceived. Since most regenerative receivers are wound for not more than 700 meters, don't load up your loop aerial with to many turns.

To get better selectivty, use a variable condenser in shunt to the loop leads before they enter the primary of the receiver.

RADIO NEWS

By R. L. DUNCAN,
Director, Radio Institute of America.

In erecting or assembling an amateur wireless transmitting station, it is suggested that the vacuum tube be used for all-round efficiency.

All the records made by amateurs in the recent trans-Atlantic test were from stations using the tube.

A tube transmitter will cover three times the distance of the old type spark set of the same power.

For sending out all lengths of undamped waves the arc method, the Alexanderson alternator and the oscillating vacuum tube are used. But the only practical form of undamped wave generator for the short amateur length is the oscillating vacuum tube.

This method of transmission also permits the use of a combined radio telephone and telegraph set. By simply throwing a few switches, the operator may change from speech to telegraph code.

Wave Types.

There are three general types of wave which may be sent out by the tube transmitter: continuous wave (C. W.), interrupted continuous wave (I. C. W.), and telephonic.

C. W. can only be received by stations using a vacuum tube receiving apparatus.

Since there are a large number of amateurs using crystal receiving sets, the antenna oscillations of a tube transmitter are modulated by a "grid chopper" which is a rotary interrupter designed to interrupt the grid circuit of an oscillating tube approximately 1,000 times a second. This converts the output oscillations into a current with the same receptive efficiency as a quenched spark set, termed I. C. W., and may be received on either a vacuum tube or crystal receiver.

Voice signals are received on either.

Current Supply.

In a vacuum tube transmitting set a low voltage source is used to heat the filament. When possible this voltage should be of alternating current, for that tends to prolong the life of the filament.

A high voltage is used to energize the plate circuit. The current for the plate may be obtained in three ways:

2.—From a rectified alternating current.

3.—From an alternating current source applied directly to the plate and known as the self-rectification circuit.

THE COUNTERPOISE ALLOWS SHARPER TUNING OF SETS

BY R. L. DUNCAN
Director, Radio Institute of America.

The counterpoise or artificial ground is a useful addition to a radio receiving station and is simple in its construction.

Don' try to use it with a crystal receiver unless near the transmitting station.

But with a vacuum tube detector and amplifying set, the counterpoise lends sharpness in tuning and greatly eliminates interference, although it cuts down the strength of the incoming signals a little.

In using a counterpoise, no ground connection is made to the receiving set—the counterpoise antenna taking its place.

On aircraft and in places where the ground has poor conductivity, this counterpoise antenna must be used. This is merely another antenna suported above the earth and insulated from it. The station apparatus is connected to the regular antenna and the counterpoise, instead of to the regular antenna and earth.

Use on Airplanes.

On an airplane the counterpoise is furnished by the metal wires of the framework, the engine, and metalized wings. The antenna may consist of a long wire which trails often below the counterpoise. But the action is not different from the ordinary antenna and counterpoise systems.

Where an outdoor antenna is used in the country, the counterpoise should best be located directly under the aerial. It should be strung on small wooden posts arranged so that the wire does not touch the ground.

The wire should be of the same kind as that used in the aerial.

Each Case Individual.

To determine the amount of wire and length of the counterpoise, each operator will have to experiment with his own problem, inasmuch as it all depends upon the size, length and number of wires in the aerial.

Be sure to keep the lead-in wire from the aerial and the counterpoise well apart to do away with losses caused by induction.

In the city where the aerial is placed on top of an apartment house, it will probably be impossible to erect a counterpoise.

If at all possible, however, every transmitting station should use this counterpoise, for it increases radiation and transmitting distance.

BLOODSTAINS FOUND IN THE CROFT HOME.

CHATHAM, May 31.—(Special).—Bloodstains which are said to have been found in wallpaper and the bed clothes in an upper room of the Clayton Croft home at Charing Cross are at present forming a very important part in the weaving of the web of evidence in the Gus Noel murder case.

High Constable Geo. Peters visited the Croft home yesteday, secured the bed clothes and cut part of the paper off the wall. The exhibits will be sent to Toronto, where they will be examined by experts to determine definitely whether or not they are blood stains.

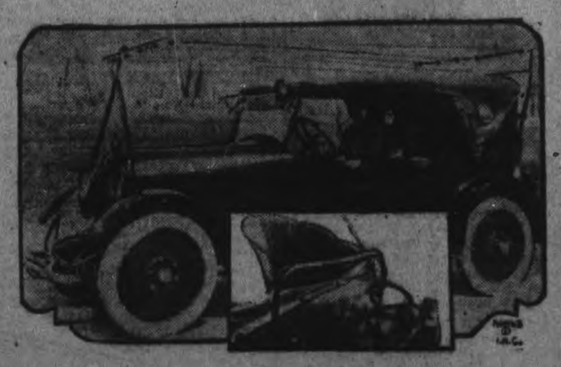
Motorists May Take City Pleasures With Them Now



..TOURING CAR EQUIPPED WITH RADIO RECEIVING SET.

Motorists who go on summer touring trips may take the pleasures of the city with them—by radio.

Radio, with its power to travel everywhere, will make it possible for concerts broadcast from the larger cities to be heard in the open country. While the motorist is driving along the highway he can "tune in" and listen to the program sent out from the city.

Fishing trips will not be without their radio parties, and camping grounds for motor tourists will be popular centers for such entertainments.

All that is needed is an aerial along the top of the automobile and a receiving set behind the front seat. While the car is moving the same radio program can be heard without the necessity of changing the instrument as the automobile advances.

Radio also is going to help motorists along the right roads to their destinations. An instrument has already been invented by which no driver using it could lose his way.

This instrument, placed on the radiator cap, with wires leading to the dashboard, is designed to catch signals transmitted through telegraph wires along the road. Each road would have its own code signal. Reference to a code book would tell the driver where he is.

Even detours are provided for in this system. Motorists are warned of such turns before they reach these points.

Adoption of this system depends on action of the various localities. The instrument has already been tried out and found practicable. But it needs the co-operation of state authorities who may line the roads with the wires needed to carry the signals.

Child Fell Into Scalding Water

Little Margaret Goodfellow Suffers Terrible and Fatal Burns.

While playing about the room, the floor of which her mother was preparing to scrub, at eleven o'clock yesterday morning, Margaret, the three-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Goodfellow, Sherbrooke Street, West, tripped in getting a plaything, and fell backwards into a pail of scalding water.

The child sustained terrible burns. The mother eased the injuries while she summoned medical help.

Dr. W. D. Scott was called, and later Dr. N. D. Sutton, but the burns proved fatal, the little life passing away at 10.15 last night.

The baby girl was the only child, had been in perfect health, and was a little ray of sunshine in the household.

The circumstances of the death are made even more sad by the fact that in January last Mr. and Mrs. Goodfellow lost their infant child.

The funeral will take place on Friday at 2 p.m. to Little Lake Cemetery, Rev. Robert Pogue officiating.

What I Made For $30

THESE GARMENTS—A WHOLE SUMMER WARDROBE—MADE AT A COST OF ONLY $30.

Sixty dollars was all one clever woman needed for a summer wardrobe for herself, her younger sister and her small son. And immediately you ask "How did she do it?" She's going to tell you—in three articles in The Examiner. In the first, printed below, she tells how she made her own summer clothes for $30. Can you do as well?—Editor.

Of course, three dresses and a wrap may not be a complete wardrobe, but the lack of them was all that stood between me and a vacation this summer.

If I spent much money on clothes I'd have none for a vacation. If I spent it on the vacation I'd have nothing to wear.

After carefully considering all my assets I found if I had the sort of vacation I wanted there would be $30 left for clothes.

Obviously I couldn't buy much for that. The only thing to do was to make the things I wanted. Fortunately fashionable lines are straight and simple, printed patterns are easy to use, and I am a person of average intelligence. Everything came out beautifully.

Four Garments.

For the $30 I bought materials for a wrap, a morning dress, a sport dress and an afternoon dress.

The morning dress I made of voile, for which I paid 50 cents a yard. There are plenty of materials at this price—dimity, gingham, printed cottons. The only difficulty was to decide which was prettiest.

Taffeta combined with georgette made an attractive afternoon dress, decorative enough to serve for dinner and evening wear as well, since summer affairs are never fearfully formal.

Slip-on Dress.

Instead of a separate sport skirt I made a sleeveless slip-on dress of ratine. The ratines are most dashing this year—checks, stripes, plaids and brilliant high colors. A voile blouse to go with it cost very little.

The cape is of black canton crepe lined with colored crepe de chine—plain and very good looking, I think.

Just in case you're not convinced about the prices here's a list of the materials I used:

Morning dress—3½ yards of 36-inch voile at 50 cents a yard; ¾ yard voile, contrasting color, for trimming	$ 2.14
Afternoon dress—2⅝ yards of 40-inch taffeta at $2 a yard; 1½ yards of 40-inch georgette at $2	8.25
Cape—3⅛ yards of 40-inch Canton crepe at $2.50 a yard; 3¾ yards of 40-inch crepe de chine at $1.75	12.64
Sports dress—3⅛ yards of ratine, for slip-on, at 85 cents	2.65
2¼ yards of 36-inch voile, for blouse, at 60 cents	1.35
Five patterns	1.85
Findings	1.12
Total	$30.00

GOD'S WORLD

O, world, I cannot hold thee close enough!
Thy winds, thy wide, grey skies!
Thy mists, that roll and rise!
Thy woods, this autumn day, that ache and sag
And all but cry with colour! That gaunt crag
To crush! To lift the lean of that black bluff!
World, world I cannot get thee close enough!
Long have I known a glory in it all,
But never knew I this;
Here such a passion is
As stretcheth me apart.—Lord, I do fear
Thou'st made the world to beautiful this year;
My soul is all but out of me,—let fall
No burning leaf; prithee, let no bird call.

Dismissed, After 27 Years ot Service, Elgin (Ill.) Teacher Takes Her Own Life

CHICAGO, June 1. — Feeling against the School Board in Elgin, Ill., which was fanned to fever heat at the election two months ago, expressed itself again at an indignation meeting last night, following the suicide of Miss Mary Elizabeth Long, for twenty-seven years a teacher in the schools of the Kane County city.

Miss Long, who was removed at a meeting of the School Board Friday night as Principal of the Sheridan School—a post she had held for the last fourteen years—ended her life by drinking carbolic acid in her mother's house in Elgin. A few hours later, Mrs. Jennie Long, widowed mother of the teacher, wept at the inquest as she declared that the action of the School Board alone was responsible for her daughter's act.

While the School Board met last night to pass a formal resolution of regret for Miss Long's death, more than thirty teachers who had either been dismissed or placed on probation by the same order planned to meet in the office of Attorney Frank A. Russell. So many flocked to the gathering, however, that it developed into a popular protest meeting and had to adjourn to a hall, where speeches bitterly assailing the action of the board as "un-American," and charging it with "the murder of Miss Long" were delivered.

A battle between the present School Board, headed by Dr. Edward H. Abbott, and the Elgin Teachers' Association has been waged ever since the birth of the latter organization, two years ago. Miss Long took an active part in opposing the recent re-election of Dr. Abbott and her dismissal followed.

SAVE FOUR MILES ON MOTOR TRIP, TORONTO

Hon. F. C. Biggs Encourages Hope That Welcome-Dale Road Will Be Included in the Provincial Highway Scheme.

BIG DEPUTATION.

The large deputation that waited on Hon. F. C. Biggs, Minister of Public Works, at the Parliament Buildings yesterday, representing Peterborough, Durham and Northumberland Counties, asking that the Government include the two-mile piece of road between Welcome and Dale in the Provincial Highway scheme received a sympathetic hearing. Hon. Biggs went so far as to order Durham County to stop work on the road, and the representatives of the municipalities interpreted this action as a practical assurance that the Government will take over the road.

The deputation was made up of Fred. Eason and W. A. Anderson, Otonabee, representing the County Council; Mayor W. H. Taylor and Ald. Walter Stocker, representing this city; H. O. Fisk, W. D. Tyrer and Secretary L. Fraser, the Peterborough branch O. M. L.; Warden Phillips and Deputy Warden McCamus, of the united counties of Durham and Northumberland, the Reeve of Hope Township, and Geo. Greer, road superintendent for Durham and Northumberland. S. Staples, M.P.P., Durham, introduced the deputation.

Case Presented.

Hon. Biggs, after he heard the various speakers urge the importance of taking over this direct link between the Port Hope - Peterborough highway and Kingston highway, directed Durham to stop work and said that he would go into the question of cost at once. Durham County has been constructing a 24-foot bridge over Smith's Creek on this roadway, and Hon. Biggs ordered the work halted at once, as a larger structure will be necessary to meet the demands of traffic if it becomes a section of the Provincial Highway.

The Peterborough branch O.M.L. has been advocating the taking over of this section, as it means a reduction of four miles on a trip to Toronto and will give this city more open and direct road communication with the western part of the Province. Motorists, by the present system, coming from the west have to go through the town of Port Hope, but if the Government acts as the deputation urged, the highway will be extended through to the village of Dale, two miles out of Port Hope, on the Peterborough road, and Peterborough-bound traffic won't get a glimpse of the lakeshore towns. If the scheme goes through there will be no danger of tourists bound for these parts getting sidetracked.

CITY GIRL STRUCK BY G.T.R. TRAIN

Miss Connie Downs Sustains Fracture and Cuts

Miss Connie Downes, of 535 Sherbrooke street, was struck by the 9.30 G.T.R. train last evening, when crossing the railway tracks on her bicycle at the corner of Westcott and Park streets, sustaining injuries the extent of which have not yet been determined, but which necessitated her immediate removal to Nicholls Hospital.

Miss Downes, who is sixteen years of age, was wheeling up Park street on her way from Wescott to Sherbrooke streets, and, from the appearance of the headlights on the approaching train, was of the opinion that it was still some distance away when she attempted to cross the tracks.

The pilot of the engine struck the back wheel of her machine, throwing the rider forward into a ditch, and totally wrecking the bicycle, fragments of which strewed the track this morning. Miss Downes was taken to her home by two young men who witnessed the accident, Dr. J. B. Mann called, and the young girl removed to the Hospital. Her exact injuries have not yet been determined, but they include a fractured knee joint and some severe cuts.

CLAUSE WITHDRAWN FROM ONTARIO BILL

TORONTO, June 1.— (Canadian Press.)—When Premier Drury's Superannuation Bill was before the Committee of the Legislature last night, on the Premier's own suggestion, a clause obliging civil servants to retire at the age of seventy years, was withdrawn.

McMILLAN IDENTIFIED.

SARNIA, June 1. — (Canadan Press.)—Edward McMillan was positively identified by three witnesses at Wyoming yesterday as one of the men who held up the Bank of Toronto at that place on October 20 last and got away with about eleven thousand dolalrs. He was sent for trial at June sessions here.

THE M'CORMICK ROMANCE WILL START A FIGHT

Mathilde Goes Back to Chicago Instead of Boarding Ship N.Y., as Was Expected.

Takes Sides With Father.

CHICAGO, June 1. — The appearance of Miss Mathilde McCormick before Judge Henry Horner in the Probate Court to-day to settle for herself the matter of her guardianship, which has a definite bearing on her romance with Max Oser, the Swiss riding master, and the announced plans for their wedding, looms as a possibility as the result of her sudden return to Chicago yesterday.

Harold F. McCormick, her father, whose appointment as guardian has been re-opened by a Court order obtained by his divorced wife, Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, met the Twentieth Century Limited from New York to welcome Miss Mathilde. It had been stated that she would sail this week on the Berengaria for a trip to Switzerland and a June wedding there, and her recent trip to New York was believed to have been in preparation for the voyage abroad.

Her unexpected return here is taken to mean that she thought it necessary to take sides with her father in what might later develop into a Court fight over her marriage, inasmuch as Mrs. McCormick is represented as being opposed to the match. But Miss Mathilde is not revealing any secrets.

When she stepped from the train here into her father's arms he greeted her with, "Hello, darling; so glad to see you back."

Says "It's Nobody's Business."

Miss Mathilde, wearing a grey coat suit, a plain shirtwaist, and a jaunty brown turban, turned her face aside as the photographers' cameras clicked, and the reporters crowded about to ascertain the latest wedding plans.

"I can't say even a word," she protested, "I've been bothered to death. I can't say anything at all."

Questions came fast. Why did she return from New York? When would she sail? Would she have a statement later?

"I don't know," she replied. "I can't say anything at all."

Then Mr. McCormick chuckled when she added: "And, after all, it's nobody's business but my own. It's really my affair. I don't see why other people should be so interested in it."

But the reporters wanted to know who could explain if she could not.

"You might ask the kitchen cat—maybe it would know," Mathilde replied archly.

"Is there any one who can speak for you?" was the last question.

"Only the gods in heaven," she laughed, as her father hurried her to an automobile.

Mr. McCormick paused long enough to say that his daughter had no intention of sailing on the Berengaria, but merely had gone to New York to bid her friend, Miss Julia Mangold, Oser's former secretary, good-bye aboard the Cunard liner.

But why did she not remain in New York to see her guest aboard the liner, which was leaving the pier about the time she arrived in Chicago.

Mr. McCormick would discuss the matter no further. He put his finger to his lips when asked to make some statement regarding the action of his divorced wife in halting the issuance of guardianship papers.

Expected to Select Father.

Despite the fact that counsel for both Mr. McCormick and Mrs. McCormick intimate the proceedings today will be merely of a formal nature to see that the law is strictly complied with and that no dispute as to the guardianship is likely to develop, Miss Mathilde, under the law, is entitled to name the guardian she chooses.

And, as she has made her home with her father ever since she returned to America to announce her engagement to Oser, there is little doubt as to whom she would select should the question be put to her by Judge Horner.

DECLINES TO APPOINT COURTNEY A. KINGSTON.

TORONTO, June 1 (Canadian Press). — Premier Drury has again declined to appoint Courtney A. Kingston, K.C., of St. Catharines, to the Chippawa Investigation Commission representing the Hydro municipalities.

TORONTO, June 1 (Canadian Press). — The May Customs collections at the Port of Toronto show an increase of $766,067 over the corresponding month last year. The totals were $4,156,067 and $3,390,000.

FIELD DAY.

The first field day for the public schools will be held this evening at the King Edward School. The Queen Alexandra boys will hold a sport day at the Oval to-morrow evening.

A Wage Reduction of $50,000,000 Coming

CHICAGO, June 1.—(Canadian Press).—A wage reduction of approximately fifty million dollars, to affect four hundred thousand railway shop employees, is expected from the Labor Board as a sequel to last Sunday's slash from the wages of maintenance of ways employees, says the Examiner today.

The contemplated cuts are: For apprentices and helpers, five cents per hour; mechanics and passenger carmen, seven cents; and freight carmen, nine cents. Electrical workers, blacksmiths, boilermakers and sheet metal workers will also be cut.

CAVALRY CAMP HERE IN JUNE

Approximately 225 Troopers Are Expected to Go Under Canvas.

A nine days' cavalry camp will be held here for the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoon sat one of three places during the month of June, officers of the dragoons announced yesterday. The sites under consideration are the Exhibition Grounds, Nassau and the Rifle Rangers. Government authorization is expected shortly in this regard.

Nassau has been advocated on account of the proximity of the water and in spite of opposition it is possible that the camp will locate there.

Approximately 225 men are expected to go into camp. The department decided against a joint cavalry and artillery camp like that held last summer at the Exhibition Grounds, on the ground that separate training of each unit was more satisfactory.

JEWISH PEOPLE HERE CELEBRATE

Ceremony Will Commence To-Night — Special Services.

This evening, at 6 o'clock, the Jewish people of this city, in common with the Jewish congregations of the entire country, commence the celebration of Shavaises, a period extending from this evening until Saturday evening, to commemorate the giving to Moses by Jehovah of the commandments, the ancient Bible of the Hebrew race. Prayers are offered from 9 to 11 o'clock in the mornings and from 6 to 7 o'clock in the evenings, conducted by Rabbi Raizman, the resident rabbi in Peterborough, who arrived from Palestine some months ago, and are held in the Jewish Hall on Water street.

The particular interest occasioned by this feast rests in the modern use made of it by Reform congregations. On this festival the children of the religious school who have attained a practical knowledge of Biblical history and Jewish religious beliefs and doctrines, as well as a reading knowledge of Hebrew, and graduated or confirmed.

The confirmation ceremony is a modern adaptation by the synagogue. In this rite the children testify to the love and justice wherewith God rules the destinies of men and nations. It is a ceremony of consecration wherein the boy and girl, having reached the age of reason, pledge themselves to continue the covenant made between God and Israel at Sinai, when God gave the decalogue unto Israel and consecrated him a priest-people to serve at the altar of humanity.

A renewal of this dedication is now involved in the confirmation service which marks, on the one hand a culmination of religious instruction received in the religious school, and on the other hand a voluntary recognition of duties and responsibilities as a member of the household of Israel to labor in behalf of those ideals of righteousness and justice which are the saving factors of humanity.

DELORME CASE IN HANDS GRAND JURY

Not to Consider Accused as Priest, But as Man

MONTREAL, June 1.—(Canadian Press). — The grand jury in the King's Bench to-day became considerate of the case of Rev. Adelard Delorme, charged with the murder of his half-brother, Raoul.

Justice Monet charged the jurors not to consider accused as a priest, but as a man. "You must not think of him as Father Delorme," he admonished, "but as Adelard Delorme."

Should the grand jury bring in a true bill, it is understood counsel for Father Delorme will, when the case is reached on the docket, apply for an alienists' commission to examine accused. Judge Monet will decide whether the commission shall be appointed after hearing arguments of the Crown counsel.

LOVE-LORN, HE KILLED SIXTEEN YEAR-OLD GIRL

Gordon Dibsdale, Aged 23, of East London, Faces a Charge of Murder—Admits His Guilt.

USED A SHOT GUN

LONDON, Ont., June 1.—(Special to Examiner.)—Detective Inspector Thomas Nickle this morning formally laid a charge of murder against Gordon Dibsdale, the 23-year-old East London man, who in a fit of love-lorn despondency, last night killed his sixteen-year-old sweetheart, Christina Near, with a shotgun.

Dibsdale is being X-rayed at the hospital this morning, where it is stated that his own wound has grown very painful, but he is still regarded as in no danger. He spent the night in a steel cage commonly used for persons sufferings from delirium tremens, or in other need of physical restraint. A police guard remained constantly with him, holding him virtually under arrest pending developments this morning.

Lover's Quarrel.

A note found in Dibsdale's pocket when he was taken to the hospital, indicates that there had been a lover's quarrel during the past couple of days, and that Dibsdale had tatken the matter very seriously when the Near girl refused to marry him within a year.

She said nothing to her own people, but gave a note to Dibsdale's sister to deliver to her lover. It read: "Dearest Gordon, I hope you are alright after what happened last night. But, dear, I didn't mean anything. I wasn't mad, and I want you to please forgive me and be the same as ever, because if you throw me over I won't get married at all. You know that, and I'll get out of the world as soon as I can. Well, dear, I must hurry as I am going home. Elsie (Dibsdale's sister) and Walter are coming down to Adelaide street with me. It is nearly past eight. Well, love, good-bye till to-morrow noon. I reamins as ever, yours only, xxx, poste haste."

A strip had been torn from the bottom of the note, leaving along the edge indecipherable parts of further writing.

Signed Confession.

Mayor J. C. Wilson, in his capacity as coroner, secured a written confession from Dibsdale at the hospital last night. It was signed by the young man and witnessed by the coroner and Policeman Algove, the guard. It merely admitted full responsibility for the killing.

The police have not accepted possession of the statement, preferring in the meantime for the purpose of the prosecution to tell the story of the prosecution through the statements of a dozen witnesses who were in the immediate vicinity when Dibsdale made his appearance with the shotgun and killed the girl.

A coroner's jury was sworn in this morning, and after viewing the body to-day will probably adjourn to take the evidence at the police station at an adjourned session.

INSPECTION TRIP LOCAL ENGINEERS

Will Motor to Raney Falls on Saturday

The Peterborough branch of the Engineering Institute plan their first out-of-town inspection trip next Saturday, when 30 cars of engineers will make the motor trip to Raney Falls at Campbellford, and inspect the new power house. The engineers have the happy faculty of combining business with pleasure, and an enjoyable time is planned for Saturday afternoon.

The fleet of cars will get away from the Empress Hotel at 1.30 p. m. S. C. Flitton, the secretary, has the arrangements well in hand, and indications are that the party will be the largest the engineers have ever put on the road to inspect engineering works in this vicinity.

FULL TIME HEALTH OFFICERS FOR CITIES

Suggestion of Medical Association —Officers Inefficient.

TORONTO, June 1.— (Canadian Press.)—In the opinion of Dr. F. J. Farley of Trenton, President of Ontario Medical Association, Medical Health Officers in smaller centres of the province are so inefficient that he would have them all scrapped in municipalities of less than twenty thousand population and replace them with full time, well paid officials who would be in a position to look after the health of various communities in the proper manner.

LEE RE-ELECTED.

TORONTO, June 1.— (Canadian Press.)— President W. G. Lee, of Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, was re-elected at yesterday's session of the convention, defeating Val Fitzpatrick and A. F. Whitney, vice-presidents.

Says Prohibition A Cause of Crime

REGINA, June 1.—(Canadian Press). — In his charge at the opening of the Anglican Synod of Que'Appelle yesterday, Right Rev. McAdam Harding delivered a powerful condemnation of the prohibition laws in Saskatchewan, which he held were contrary to the right of liberty vested in the Church, and were the cause of crime and debauchery.

"It is very difficult for any one in these times to speak concerning temperance without being misunderstood," he said. "That is, unless one is in full accord with the supporters of prohibition. But I feel that a solemn duty lies at the door of the Anglican Church, the duty of insisting on Christian liberty and temperance rather than on prohibition."

AMERICAN BOAT ON WAY NORTH

Viva M. of Peoria Passed Over the Lift Lock Last Evening.

Viva M, Peoria, Illinois, the first of the fleet of American water craft, expected to cruise in the upper lakes this year, reached Peterborough last evening. The boat had the unusual experience of a trip over the Lift Locks in the evening, and it was pulled up in the upper reach for the night. Not a little adventure and romance is attached to the cruise of this boat, which set out last fall from Peoria for a sail around the eastern half of the continent by the Mississippi to the Gulf of Mexico, around the Atlantic coast to the St. Lawrence and through the Trent route to Georgian Bay and thence home by Chicago.

This 36 foot motor boat of five ton displacement, which has essayed and completed the most dangerous part of a water trip larger vessels would turn back from, is owned by A. C. Osborn, of Peoria. A capable pilot who has spent his life on the water, is guilding the craft and Mrs. Osborn completes the crew of three. The boats pulled away from the Lift Lock early this morning, and escaped by about an hour the visit of representatives of the Chamber of Commerce and the press. The lockmaster at the Lift Locks, however, was able to give some details recorded in regard to the motor cruiser.

While this was the first American motor cruiser travelling north, the first boat that went over the Lift-Locks this season, on May 23rd, was the Mary Luella, owned by W. E. Beers, Cleveland. Mr. Beers was taking the boat back to Cleveland from Penetang. Within the next few weeks a number of cruisers bound for the upper lakes are expected to pass through the city.

BIG IMPROVEMENT PETERBORO' WATER

Almost As Good As Beer Now—Demand For New Services.

Peterborough is getting better water than has been the case in years, according to R. L. Dobbin, waterworks superintendent. Tests that are made at the pumping station and the new filtration plant show this happy state of affairs, he said, and the chlorine being administered is practically nil. In other years about this time it has been necessary to begin the copious injection of chlorine, but this year the filtration process has left the water in a condition that so far at least requires little need of chlorination. Mr. Dobbin explained that in sections of the city where there are "dead-ends," the mains are being flushed out, and for several days there are likely to be settlings in the water. The results are justified, however, and the superintendent hopes to complete a wash out of all the pipes.

The waterworks department have been so busy laying new services that there has been little time for this cleaning out process or for main laying. Fifty new water services have been put in this year, twice as many as up to this period last year. The department have been able to give work to more men than usual, and the prospect for work is bright for the remainder of the summer. On account of the clamor for services the laying of mains has been held up. Work on the new 8-inch main on Bethune Street, between Simcoe and Hunter Streets, supplying the terrace on that street with direct water service, has been started.

HEAVY LOSS DUE BOYS AND MATCHES

TORONTO, June 1.— (Canadian Press.)—Boys with matches are said to have been the cause of a fire at Don Valley Paper Company here last night which, before it was got under control, damaged the plant and contents, manufactured paper and paper products in process, to the extent of a hundred thousand dollars.

SPIRITUALISM IN TESTIMONY AT EDWARDS CASE

Witness Declares She Heard a Mysterious Knocking on Door Preceding Ernest's Death

FILION'S HEARING

That a mysterious knocking took place at the home of Bessie Chard, Norwood, preceding the death of Ernest Edwards, was revealed at the hearing of the preliminary charge of murder against Abraham Filion at the court house this morning. Mrs. Chard, whose daughter is married to Roland Edwards, testified that on the Sunday morning before April 12th, about 8 a.m., three distinct knocks were heard on the front door, Roland answered it, but no one was there, and the dog was lying on the door step. She did not think of there being any connection between the uncanny knocks and Ernest's death until later when, on Thursday evening in the presence of herself, Abe Filion, her daughter and her son-in-law, Mrs. Emma Jane Edwards said, in discussing the matter, "that that was the time Ernest died and the knocks were a token." "You got the 'token 'three hours ahead then," remarked Magistrate O. A. Langley. Bessie Edwards gave the same description of the supernatural occurrence as her mother.

The Same Evidence.

Much of the evidence offered this morning was a rehash of the evidence offered against Mrs. Emma Jane Edwards yesterday. Filion was represented by F. D. Kerr, K.C., while J. F. Strickland carried on the case for the Crown. Constable Isaac Puffer was first called to-day, Jennie Edwards, 14 year old daughter of Mrs. Edwards next, Dr. A. W. McPherson, Mrs. Chard, her daughter Mrs. Roland Edwards, and Roland Edwards. At 12.45 adjournment was made until 3 p.m. as Mr. Strickland said he did not expect important witnesses from Norwood would be here before that time. The evidence taken to-day was practically in its entirety in regard to statements made by the parties in the case.

Jennie Edwards said she and her brother were chums, and were ashamed of the relations between her mother and Filion. When she saw him laying dead she thought he must have taken the poison known to be in the trunk, she told Mr. Kerr. On Monday noon after Fillion had gone, Ernest said, "What good was Filion" "He's as good as Verna Martin," Mrs. Edwards is alleged to have replied.

Roland Edwards said in a heated discussion with his mother he told her if his father was living Ernest wouldn't be where he is to-day, for Abe Filion wouldn't have been around. He told his mother that she, a 42 year old woman, had no business going with Filion who, he said, was only 23 years old.

GAVE VICTIM A PHOTOGRAPH

London Man Made Careful Plans to Kill His Sweetheart.

LONDON, Ont., June 1.—(Special.)—Gordon Dibsdale, who yesterday shot and killed Christina Near, and then went to the hospital suffering from a self-inflicted wound, spent a great part of the night crying, according to the hospital authorities. "Did she die quickly," he asked several times of the house surgeons. "I shot her and I wonder if she died quickly."

Dibsdale volunteered the statement that he had intended discharging both barrels of the shot gun into his own body.

When he was searched by the police, a big cartridge belt, with five shells in it, was found on him, and a butcher knife about a foot long. The knife had been sharpened until the edge was razor keen. The police believe that Dibsdale had been carefully planning to kill the girl for some days as a result of her refusal to marry him.

Yesterday when he went home, he told his mother that he had quit his job at the London street railway. This turned out to be correct, as he handed in his resignation at noon.

Dibsdale recently got his picture taken and presented it to Miss Near. On the back of the photo he wrote the following:

"Take me into your heart, make me yours from the start; my love is tried and true, and I love you, yes, I do, Gordon Dibsdale, but you——"

It was Dibsdale's watch in his breast pocket, which prevented his taking his own life after shooting the girl. When he fired at his own breast the watch received most of the charge, a few of the shots inflicting minor flesh wounds. When people who were nearby rushed to the spot, attracted by the three shots, they found the watch nearly red hot and Dibsdale's coat on fire from the gun.

HOUSE IS DISTURBED BY A FALSE ALARM

Fire Alarm Puts a Temporary Halt to Flow of Oratory on Many Questions.

A LIVELY DAY.

TORONTO, June 1. Canadian Press. — The Legislature this afternoon passed the third reading of the London street railway bill which gives the company authority to increase its fares. Dr. Stevenson of London made a fianl effort to halt the bill by an amendment to postpone its coming into effect until 3 months after it had received the royal assent. The city council in the meantime to get a vote of the electors on whether the city would take over the road. This amendment was defeated on a division of 50 to 24. Four members of the ministry supported the amendment, Premier Drury, Hon. W. R. Rollo, Hon. D. Carmichael, Hon. H. C. Nixon. The other members of the cabinet present voted with the majority. Most of the support of the amendment came from the government side of the House, the only members of the opposition voting for it were Major Tolmie (Windsor), W. F. Nickle (Kingston), A. C. Lewis (Toronto), G. G. Halcrow (Hamilton East), and H. P. Hill (Ottawa.)

A Lively Day.

It was a lively afternoon in the Legislature. Aside from the London bill which has been fought out for weeks at every turn, there was a heated clash between H. H. Dewart and Attorney General Raney over the Jockey Club litigations, in which Hon Howard Ferguson joined.

The investigation into the death of Captain Orville Huston came into prominence. The professional engineers' bill passed through the committee of the House. It provides that only men registered with the Engineering Association may assume the title of professional engineers; but it does not prevent other men from doing engineering work.

The Prime Minister introduced a motion appointing a committee to take up the question of town planning during the recess.

When the Premier introduced a motion that for the remainder of the session government business would take precedence, Hon. Howard Ferguson wanted to know if there would be further government legislation introduced. Mr. Drury replied that there would be one of any import.

A Fire Alarm.

At this moment the fire alarm rang but the members were informed as the fire fighting appliances came rolling up that it was all a mistake—that there was no fire.

KILLED BEAVERS OUT OF SEASON.

PORT ARTHUR, June 1 (Canadian Press).—"The beaver is the national emblem of our country, and if I had my way, I would not allow one of those animals to be killed," declared Police Magistrate W. W. O'Brien, in the Police Court yesterday morning, after he had fined Fred Denhard $900.00, and costs, or one year in prison, for having forty-five beaver skins in his possession illegally.

"You are a licensed trapper," said the Magistrate, "and I have no sympathy for you, for you deliberately cleaned out that whole colony, and in the close season."

COAL OIL STOVE THREATENED HOME HASTINGS VILLAGE.

HASTINGS, June 1.—What might have developed into a serious loss, occurred on Tuesday morning at the home of Mr. P. M. Howard. Mr. and Mrs. Howard and family were at church, and when Bruce Trotter went to Mr. Howard's home to get one of his sons to go to Norwood High school, he found the kitchen full of smoke and flames shooting high out of the coal oil stove. He managed by getting down on his knees to pull the stove out into the yard and save a serious fire.

Water Tank Collapses.

The large watering tank on the south side of the river collapsed on Monday afternoon, leaving the residences of that side without water for domestic service.

SHOT GIRL THEN WOUNDED SELF.

LONDON, June 1 Canadian Press). — Jilted in love, Gordon Dibsdale, 334 Oakland Avenue, shot and killed Chrissie Near, 18 years old, as she was returning to her home last evening.

Dibsdale immediately turned the shotgun on himself, but only inflicted a superficial wound. He was taken to Victoria Hospital.

PRIME MINISTER DEFENDS ACTS OF THE COMMISSION

Lloyd George Believes Germany is Sincere in Efforts to Live Up to the Treaty.

BRITISH POLICY.

LONDON, June 1 (Canadian Press). — With Germany undefiant, Premier Lloyd-George had planned to make a brief statement on reparations in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon, but when John Robert Clynes, Labour member, opened the debate and attributed the present difficulties to the Government's election pledges of 1918, the Prime Minister launched into a lengthy defence of the Reparations Commission and the Treaty of Versailles.

Mr. Lloyd-George praised the German attitude toward the Reparations Commission, and indicated that so long as she was not defiant, Germany could count on Britain's sympathy and understanding of the difficulties involved in meeting the Treaty conditions.

He declared, however, that there was no cause for disagreement between France and England, for should Germany refuse to fulfill the Commission's proposals, Great Britain's place would be at the side of the Versailles signatories, despite the misrepresentations which were being made.

THE WEST SAYS KEEP OFF GRASS.

Agreement With C. P. R. Should Be Executed.

OTTAWA, June 1.— (Canadain Press.)— "We are not asking for anything. All we say is 'keep off the grass and let the grass grow.' In these words H. J. Symington, K.C., counsel for Manitoba and Saskatchewan, summed up the position of these provinces before a Special House Committee on Railway Costs last night. He held that the west was entitled to have carried out an agreement made by the C.P.R. in return for a subsidy to the Crow's Nest Pass railway.

BUSINESS BEFORE I.O.D.E. CONVENTION.

Approves of Washington Disarmament Policy.

VANCOUVER, B.C., June 1. — (Canadian Press.)—Approval of the disarmament policy adopted at Washington, adoption of a new constitution for a test period of five years, and discussion on the need of selective immigration, featured yesterday's session of the convention of the I.O.D.E. here.

BARNARDO HOMES.

LONDON, June 1 (Canadian Press). — At the annual meeting of the Dr. Barnardo's Homes, it was stated that the number of Barnardo children resident in the Homes at the end of last year was 7,025.

Emigration activities were resumed during the year, and 506 boys and girls were sent to Canada, and a pioneer party of 47 boys were sent to Australia.

METHODISTS OPEN LONDON SESSIONS

Rev. J. W. Hibbart Presiding at the Ministerial Sessions of Methodist Church in London.

LONDON, Ont., June 1.—Ministerial sessions of the London conference of the Methodist church were conducted yesterday in the Centennial church here, the agenda scheduled for the day being disposed of according to programme under Rev. Jos. W. Hibbart, of Kingsville, president of the Conference.

At six o'clock last night 160 ministers and 100 laymen had registered for the conference and general sessions will be opened this morning by Rev. George Elliott, D.D., of New York, editor of the Methodist Review, who also delivered an address to the ministerial session yesterday morning.

A LARGE CROWD AT CONNAUGHT RACES.

OTTAWA, June 1 (Canadian Press). — Even a greater crowd than the large gathering which attended on Tuesday, were on hand yesterday for the second day's racing of the Connaugh Park Jockey Club at their pretty plant on the Chelsea Road.

Long Shot and Favourite vied yesterday for the greater percentage of winners, and the former had the better of the exchange. Woodbine, the Brockdale Stable entry in the Dominion Handicap, a test at 1 mile and 70 yards, fashioned for Canadian three-year-olds and upwards, paid the best dividend of the day. Woodbine paid $23.55 on a two-dollar ticket. Woodbine, a five-year-old bay mare out of Rera by Tippocance, with Erickson up, came up from behind, and going fastest of all, nosed out the favourite, Yowell, in the stretch drive. Exhorter and Sailor were winners in the longer distance races, and were well played, and their wins were popular.

PROMINENT MAN IN WINNIPEG IS SHOT.

WINNIPEG, June 1 (Canadian Press). — Rowley Jex-Long, secretary of the Winnipeg Builders' Products' Association, and president of the Royal Society of St. George, Winnipeg, was found shot to death in his office here this afternoon, and is believed to have committed suicide. No reason is known.

Jack Daly, 27, groundsman for a local golf club, overturned his canoe in the Red River yesterday afternoon while paddling with a piece of plank, and drowned.

PITIABLE WRECK SAVED FROM EARLY GRAVE

"I couldn't sleep, my nerves were all unstrung, I was steadily losing weight."

"My husband is a mechanic and earns good wages," writes one woman. "We have six children between the ages of seven and fifteen. Both my husband and myself have denied ourselves actual necessities to give our children the best schooling we could afford. I have often stayed up all night making clothes for them or doing mending. Besides this, I have always done the washing and ironing for the eight of us. I also do the scrubbing and the cooking. The outcome of this was that I was doing more than any human being could stand and so broke down. I became a complete nervous wreck. I was reduced to a skeleton. I was in such a nervous, high strung condition that the least excitement would start me on a crying fit which I couldn't control. This breakdown meant keeping my children from school to help in the housework, because I couldn't do anything as the least exertion left me a wreck. I was the finest example of a complete nervous break down that you ever saw. Everything was wrong with me—I couldn't eat, I couldn't sleep. I had that dreadful weak feeling which I cannot describe but can only be understood by those who have had it. I was so weak that I was ready to catch anything that was going. I tried several preparations but none of them did me any good. One day my husband came in and said, "I see a preparation in a drug store called Carnol. No extraordinary claims are made for it and I have an idea it might do you good. Why don't you get a bottle? They say if it doesn't do you any good they will refund your money." I believe that advice of my husband's saved my life because seven weeks after I started taking Carnol I was doing more work than I had ever done before and was feeling stronger than I ever felt in my life." CHANGED FROM WAR TO A PEACE BASIS.

LE CRUESOT, France, June 1.—(Associated Press)—A group of American bankers, now visiting this part of the department of Saone-et-Loire were shown today over the celebrated local iron and steel works by Charles Schneider, the director of the enterprise.

The visitors were astonished at the successful transformation of the various plants from a war to a peace basis. The section devoted to the making of heavy artillery during the war is not turning out daily 35 locomtives, and the factories which not long ago produced light artillery are today making turbine engines.

MADE DEEP IMPRESSION

LONDON, June 1.— (Canadian Press.)—Colonial Secretary Churchill's statement on Ireland in the House of Commons yesterday has made deep impressions. The serious emphasis which he laid upon the extreme gravity of the situation and the suggestion of the possibility of Great Britain re-occupying Irish territory, are featured by this morning's newspapers as opening an ugly vista leading to incalculable trouble.

CHRISTIAN FAITH CAN CURE THE SICK—SYNOD REPORT

Bishop Bidwell Tells of Case in Which Cure Was Obtained By Laying on of Hands. Special Committee Makes a Report.

KINGSTON, June 1.—(Canadian Press.)—The Special committee appointed last year by the Anglican Synod of the diocese of Ontario to look into the question of spiritual healing presented its report to that body yesterday afternoon. The report which reviewed the matter both in the modern way and in Biblical times agreed that cures had been effected as the result of Christian faith and prayer, but pointed out that it was not to be granted that God would always give health in this way. The case of St. Paul was an outstanding example of the latter point. The majority of clurs were in mental not in functional disorders.

Pigeon Creek Floating Bridge

The following letter published in the Lindsay Post will find interest with Peterboro district readers:

On Tuesday, May 9th there appeared in your paper a lengthy communication from the above named gentlemen. Its length was not the only feature that attracted attention. It was remarkable for its seriousness its humor and the variety of topics introduced. The living and the dead men were brought on the scene. Poets, orators, statesmen, a renowned general and members of Parliament were pressed into service in order to give point to the truth that the day of floating bridges has gone by. In the midst of this galaxy of great men, the name of your present humble correspondent was introduced Oh, shades of Shakespeare, Burke, and Webster, take it not amiss that you were passed over and that the honor was given to me.

Through the length of this farrago of amusement and information, the floating bridge dragged its weary length. For the benefit of the uninitiated it must be stated that a floating bridge at one time spanned Pigeon Lake in the northeastern part of Emily, but the poor structure no longer exists. It served a noble purpose while it remained, but winds and waves wrecked it, and it went the way of all the works of man. The community whom it served and the men and women who it benefited now desire to have a new bridge in its place. Hence the anger of Mr. Barr, who would relegate such people "to blazes or to a hotter place with a shorter name." Fie Fie Mr. Barr. Why do you thus become angry In the words of your favorite poet Virgil, we might say, "Fantaene animis caelestibus irae?" Translated freely, as you translated your quotation, that means "Why do exalted minds allow themselves to be transported by anger" There is one consoling feature about Mr. Barr's epistle, and that is that it affords convincing proof that the good gentlemen still believes in hell. I also, Mr. Barr, believe in the existence of that terrible place, and because I do, I go to mass in Downey ville or Ennismore, or wherever else I can attend, but oh, I assure you I never once thought of it shortening the way to heaven by having a bridge built to Ennismore

The Prime Minister of Canada, the Honorable Mr. Fielding, Mr. G. N. Gordon, M.P., and Mr. Thurston, M.P., will in all probability never see Mr. Barr's recent letter; but should they see it, they will know how to discount the assertions and advice therein contained. They know that there are more things in man's philosophy than wheat, flour, oatmeal, curling and golf. They know that Pigeon Lake and Pigeon Creek are more imposing bodies of water than the Scugog, that winds its way through Mr. Barr's fown. They furthermore know that the advantages of travel enjoyed by the early settlers should not be denied their descendants. They know, still further, that when the Government of Canada converts a narrow stream that can be bridged by a twelve foot plank into a pretentious lake, the successor in office of that government is in equity bound to compensate those who are thereby injured, even at the risk of incurring the displeasure of those who are benefitted. These are afcts that Mr. Barr probably overlooked. But Mr. Barr may have written only to amuse and not to instruct. Should he decide to discuss the matter in all seriousness, I shall be only too pleased to be a party to a discussion in The Post.

I thank you, Mr. Editor, for the space you accord this letter.

Yours truly,
J. C. O'LEARY

THE RACES.

LONDON, June 1 (Canadian Press). — Reviewing the work of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals at the annual meeting, Lord Lambourne, vice-president, said the Council of the Society some time ago urged the Minister of Agriculture not to rescind the embargo on the importation of store cattle and sheep because of the great suffering which this trade formerly involved.

The appeal of the Society, he said, was based purely on humanitarian reasons, as the Society was not concerned in politics.

MOTHERS' ALLOWANCES.

If there is one piece of legislation upon which the Ontario government deserves commendation, it is the Mothers' Allowance Act which is now functioning smoothly and which has been of the utmost benefit to many of Ontario'smothers. The total cost of the allowances in the province, it is said, amount to little more than the total amusement tax collected each year, and it is money well expended. Not only does it relieve mothers who have been struggling against great odds to maintain their families, but it gives the children a chance to be educated and to make something of themselves, who will be the men and women of tomorrow. The Mothers' Allowance Act is amply justified, and the Government in putting this measure into successful operation has earned general gratitude. The extesion of the allowance to include a widow with one child, should be the next step in the development of the measure, and no doubt, will soon be taken.

MR. NICKLE'S STAND.

While Mr. W. F. Nickle, M. P., of Kingston, who made a strong protest against the $600 bonus for members of the Legislature has been accused of a desire to advertise himself by this method, the majority of the people of Ontario will undoubtedly endorse Mr. Nckle's stand and applaud the member for Kingston, and Mr. Ross, U.F.O. member, both of whom will refuse to accept the additional indemnity. If a vote could be taken in the province on this question the Examiner believes that it would show that public opinion is strongly against the action of the members of the Legislature in voting themselves a bonus, based on the length of the session. The unanimity with which Farmer, Labour members, Liberals and Conservatives, agreed that the grant was justified, indicates that there is no trouble in getting the members of the Legislature to co-operate when their own pockets are concerned. And now they talk of making the $2000 indemnity permanent. The people should be consulted before such a step is taken. It is doubtful whether the public would consider the services of some of the members as worth any such sum to the province, but at all events the increased indemnity question is one that should not be settled without an opportunity being given to test public opinion. Just at present there is no evidence of popular support for the additional $600 voted by the members to themselves.

THE SCHOOL HEALTH SERVICE.

The annual report of Hon. R. H. Grant, Minister of Education for Ontario, shows unmistakably that the extension of the school health service to every part of the province is an absolute necessity. The figures quoted, while proving the need of such work, are such as to afford serious food for thought. During last year 72,000 children were examined by physicians in the employ of the Department and the percentage of those found to be defective in one way or another is high enough to be alarming. 8,564 children were found to have defective vision, and 1,707 were defective in hearing. No fewer than 48,913 youngsters, the report shows, were found with defective teeth, and 48,260 had never been successfully vaccinated. No doubt these figures are typical of the whole province, and a survey of all the school children in Ontario might increase, rather than cut down, the percentage of those found defective. These striking facts challenge attention and indcate the great need for the extension of school health service to every part of the province, if children are to have a fair chance in life. Hon. Mr. Grant points out, and there will be few who will quarrel with the Minister of Education in this finding. The war revealed the fact that a very large proportion of the men of Canada were physically unfit, and the report of conditions in Ontario schools shows that no improvement is being arrived at. The school health service must be extended.

TWO KINDS OF MOTORISTS.

There are people, and a good many of them, nowadays, who have been driving automobiles almost as long as there have been automobiles to drive, and never have they either caused or been involved in any of the "accidents" which make such a grisly showing in almost every issue of every newspaper, says the New York Times.

By no means all of these people are particularly intelligent or particularly cautious. They include more than a few who have no very tender reverence for the speed laws, and not all of them have that intimate knowledge of the complex machine they drive which every automobilist should have. Their immunity commonly is ascribed to luck, but much more is it due to their possession of just the prompt co-ordination between mind and muscle which the driving of an automobile demands.

These are they who, when an emergency, big or little, arises, not only know what to do—that is information easy to acquire by anybody—but can do it with a promptness that closely approaches the instantaneous. The ability to do this is a "gift." One has it or one does not; it is not to be gained by taking thought and it is not a product of experience. There are tests by which the presence or the absence of this ability can be determined, and if they were used, instead of the much inferior and largely irrelevant tests commonly applied before issuing an automobile license, it would not be necessary to print every Monday a list of killed and injured that reads like the report of a small battle.

If accounts were kept it would be discovered that by far the greater part of the so-called accidents happen to persons who have what can be described as the accident habit. As a matter of fact, nearly all automobile accidents should be put in the category of "avoidable," and for nearly every one of them somebody could be, and should be, held both morally and legally responsible. So long as they are regarded merely as misfortunes they will continue to increase in exact ratio with the multiplication of motor cars.

THE DOPE HABIT.

The decision of the local Kiwanis Club to wage a strong campaign against the drug habit is justified by the statement made recently in the House of Commons by Hon. Dr. Beland, who declared that while the number of addicts is steadily increasing, the quantity of drugs imported has rapidly decreased. That means, of course, that smuggling of drugs is being carried on on a large scale, and that the activity of the authorities to stamp out this terrible evil must be redoubled. The Kiwanis Club can do a great deal by education and otherwise to assist in the fight against the "dope" ring, and it is to be hoped that the organization will be successful in the work it has undertaken. The fact that the habit is increasing shows the need of earnest effort on the part of everybody who appreciates the terrible effect the use of drugs has been upon its victims, ruining them not only physically and mentally but morally as well.

LIVING IS GETTING CHEAPER.

The enemy of every household, the High Cost of Living, is suffering almost daily during these glorious spring days from staggering blows which must very soon make his war-time proportions no more than a hateful memory.

The way to slay the High Cost of Living is to starve him to death. This cruel and voracious Giant lives, moves and has his parasitic being by virtue of a number of High Costs of other things which enter into his make-up. Now that war restrictions are removed and the blessed breezes of free competition are once more blowing wholesomely over the community, the only thing that can keep up the High Cost of Living is the High Cost of Producing.

So it is obvious that every time we cut a layer off the cist if production, we chisel away a part of the intolerable burden which has been afflicting every household in the land. The reductions in rents which descended like the dews from heaven upon us this year, were an encouragng factor in this relief. Price-cutting anywhere is of the same welcome variety.

* * *

But lately the American Interstate Commerce Commission and now the United States Labour Board, have struck two tremendous blows for the liberty of their people—and eventually of ours—from this most heartless and unrelenting of slave-drivers. The Interstate Commerce Commission began the good work by cutting $400,000,000 off the freight rates charged by the railways of the United States; and now the Railway Labour Board comes along with a cut of $48,000,000—which is expected to go up to $150,000,000—on wages paid for transportation. It is anticipated, if the proposed policy is carried through, that the total reduction in wages, including the $400,000,600 made last year, will cancel the $600,000,000 advance made in 1920.

This means $600,000,000 off the High Cost of Living.

When to this we add the $400,000,000 lifted last week from the freight rates of the United States, we have a clean billion dollars a year saved to the consumers of the American nation.

Of course certain classes of capital and certain classes of labor will have to bear the brunt of this reduction. This means nothing more, however, —provided the reductions have been fairly made—than that these capitalists and these workingmen will have been gently eased down to the level of the rest of us. They were presumably getting their billion a year out of the rest of us because of certain advantages conferred on them by war-time and post-war concessons which have now ceased to be fair. That is, they were in effect, paid a war subsidy which now ceases. The Americans are "demobilizing" their railways as well as their armies.

But the community as a whole, including these very capitalists and workingmen will benefit by this slashing at in the basis of the High Cost of Living. Transportation will be that much cheaper. And if anyone desires to see what an important part transportation plays in the production of the articles whose purchase constitutes the Cost of Living—High or otherwise —all he need do is to consider the frightful state of Russia, where transportation has broken down.

* * *

These reductions must, of course, be met in Canada. This country cannot live and prosper if it charges more for identical services than is charged in the United States. Sir John Macdonald used to say that we should make Canada a cheaper country to live in than our big and magnetic neighbor. It must at least be as cheap.—Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Tobacconists in Belleville are still selling cigarettes at the old prices. Does that prove they are behind the times or merely that they are satisfied with their normal profit on goods bought before the new taxes were inflicted?

After all it may be worth $600 to have to listen to some of the speeches made in the Legislature.

Some of the Ontario members who think four months' service in the House is worth $2,000 want the hired man to work for $20 a month.

"The condemnation which has been passed upon the people of Orangeville for tarring and feathering a man," says the Kingston Standard, "should make this unknown in Canada in the future."

THE SPREAD OF THE DRUG EVIL

Christian Herald: The menace of narcotics needs no emphasis. Its easiest victims are young people sixteen to twenty years of age. It is estimated there are in the United States now, more than one million addicts, and new victims are recruited every day by an army of pedlers who infest every city and hundreds of villages. In the year 1919, the figures latest available, 365 tons of opium, equivalent to 40 tons of morphine (the form in which opium is generally used now), was shipped into the United States. China, the world's terrible example of drug addiction, with her more than 400,000,000 population, had thirty tons of morphine. The United States in 1919 took more morphine than any other country in the world! Not a comfortable thing to contemplate, is it? It is within reason to say that unless this traffic is stopped the opium dealers will debauch untold millions of American boys and girls in the next ten years, and re-enslave China beyond redemption in spite of all that nation is doing to protect herself.

FOREST FIRES RAGING

PRINCE RUPERT, B.C., June 1.—Canadian Press.—Forest fires are still raging along a three mile strip of the Skeena river between Hazelton and Quesnel, according to fragmentary reports yesterday. The dry weather is continuing and the situation is becoming more serious in the north country. Fire is raging on two sides of Hazelton.

MINERS' BLINDNESS CAN BE ELIMINATED

LONDON, May 31. Canadian Press. — "Miner's Blindness," which has become widespread in the coalfields of the United Kingdom and has caused much disablement and suffering, can be entirely eliminated, it is believed, by the adoption of simple precautons. Inadequate lighting of the pits is the causative factor of the disease known as miner's nystagnus, or popularly as miner's blindness, and the remedy proposed is an improvement in the lamps the miners use so as to increase the illumination in the pits.

A special committee appointed by the Medical Research Council, headed by Professor Haldane, of Oxford has investigated the matter. Deficient illumination is given by the committee as the cause of the trouble with the miners eyes, the safety lamps being too low in illuminating power and too far apart, the great absorption of light by the coal and the coal dust covered surfaces tending to obschre the almp glasses. Electric lamps as well as oil lamps are affected by the donditions in the mines.

Workers at the coal face are more affected than any other under ground workers, and this appears to be due to the unrelieved blackness of the coal and the greater need to form accurate vision. While a large proportion of coal miners are affected by mustagnus, only a comparatively small number are incapacitated thereby.

Incapacity due to nystagnus is rare among coal miners working with open lights, the committee therefore recommends that everything possible should be done to make the standard of illuminatng of objects looked at by the miner equal to that of an open light pit. This can be affected, the report states, at the coal face and elsewhere either by increasng to two or three candles the illuminating power of safety lamps as ordinarly used, or by the use of an electric light capable of being fixed on a miner's head, belt or other convenient position, so that the light is automatically brought nearer the working area and does not shine directly into the eyes. Whitewashing in the mines is also recommended by the committee as well as the stone dusting that is now obligatory for the prevention of explosions. By the application of the proposed remedies, greater illumination and whitewashign, the committee claims that, by degrees, there will be no further disablement of miners from the so-called blindness.

An interesting feature of the committee's investigations was the prevailing belief among the coal miners that miners' nystagnus caused permanent damage, if not total loss of sight, if they continued the underground work. This belief, the committee states, is entirely erroneous, but it has led to much unnecessary suffering and to the development of psycho-neurotic symptoms in many cases.

MRS. EDWARDS COMMITTED FOR TRIAL ON CHARGE OF MURDER

Magistrate Langley Stated That the Case Was Not a Strong One But Evidence Justified Him in Referring it to a Grand Jury — "If He Had Minded His Own Business, He Wouldn't Have Got It," Mother Alleged to Have Said.

Several Contradictions.

Mrs. Emma Jane Edwards was committed for trial yesterday afternoon by Magistrate Langley on the charge of murdering her son, Ernest Edwards. Abe Filion, the young man jointly accused with the woman of the alleged crime of poisoning, is due for his separate preliminary hearing today. Mr. J. F. Strickland represented the Crown, Mr. F. D. Kerr, K.C., appeared for Filion and Mr. C. R. Widdifield for Mrs. Edwards.

When all the evidence for the prosecution was put in, Mr. Widdifield moved for the discharge of his client, and in reply Mr. Strickland contended that sufficient evidence had been adduced to justify Magistrate Langley referring the case to a grand jury. His Worship concurred in this opinion, and announced his decision for the commital of Mrs. Edwards. He regretted that there would be no session of the court until the Fall Assizes, and that the prisoner would have to be detained in jail during the summer months, but that was a regulation beyond his authority.

New Evidence.

Mrs. Bessie Chard of Norwood gave new evidence that was not brought out at the inquest. She is the mother-in-law of Roland Edwards, and it was from her house the funeral of his brother was held.

Questioned by Mr. Strickland as to whether she had any conversation with Mrs. Edwards, witness said she had on the Thursday following the Wednesday on which the body was found at the Edwards home in Dummer.

"I said it was very sad", Mrs. Chard testified. "Mrs. Edwards said: 'It was his own ugly temper, and if he had minded his own business he wouldn't have got it. She didn't say what he got."

Mr. Strickland: 'Was there anything further after that?"

Mrs. Chard: "She said he poisoned himself, and she supposed Jennie (her daughter) was telling a whole lot and putting a lot to it. 'If she was out of the way she wouldn't tell any tales.'"

Continuing, Mrs. Chard said that on the Friday night before the funeral the death of Ernest was discussed. Mrs. Edwards, Jack Edwards, Verna Martin, who was engaged to Ernest, and others were present.

"I said I didn't think Ernie took anything," Mrs. Chard related, "and that I thought there was foul play. Mrs. Edwards told me I'd better shut up my mouth or she'd make me prove it.

Grieved Like a Mother!

"If I had been his mother I couldn't have taken it any harder," witness remarked ingenuously. "They were going to have the funeral from the undertaker's, but I sent Rollie to have the corpse brought to my place. Mrs. Edwards wanted him buried on Friday, but they fought against that."

Asked about what led up to her conversation with Mrs. Edwards on the Thursday of that week, Mrs. Chard said: "I thought she'd be, you know, kind of broken-hearted, and I said it was a sad case. That's when she said 'it was his darn ugly temper, and if he had minded his own business he wouldn't have got it.'"

Saw Him in the Evening.

Mrs. Chard brought out another new statement attributed to the prisoner. According to Constable Puffer of Norwood, Mrs. Edwards told him she didn't see Ernest from noon on Monday until Wednesday night when she arrived home from Hill's upon notice that the body had been found in the yard of the family's home on the 9th line of Dummer. Next it transpired that Mrs. Edwards had seen him in the afternoon lying on his back in the yard near the place where his dead body was found two days later. The supplementary evidence on this particular, as told by Mrs. Chard, was Mrs. Edwards' statement that about 5 p.m. on Monday she saw Ernest lying in the same part of the yard, but he had turned over on his face.

Mr. Strickland: 'Was anyone else present when she told you that?"

Mrs. Chard: "Yes, my daughter."

First Suspicion.

Cross-examined by Mr. Widdifield: "When did you first think there had been foul play?"

"After she said he wouldn't have got it if he had minded his own business."

Mrs. Chard also swore that Abe Filion had told her before Ernie's death that he and Ernie were not on speaking terms.

Mr. Widdifield: "From that, coupled with what you heard, you concluded there had been foul play?"

"Yes."

"And your opinion is firmly rooted?"

"I am convinced, still I really wouldn't like to say there was, but—"

'You would like to see that opinion made a fact?"

"Yes."

To Mr. Strickland witness said Mrs. Edwards had come down from Dummer in March and told her Ernest had put Filion and herself out of the house.

"Did she says why?"

"No."

Mrs. Roland Edwards.

Mrs. Roland Edwards, 21 years old, daughter-in-law of the accused, corroborated the testimony of her mother, Mrs. Chard, and added that Mrs. Edwards had said Filion was innocent—that he an her son, Jack, had been working at Hill's.

To Mr. Widdifield she said that she and her husband didn't consider it right that Filion and Mrs. Edwards should be living together.

"Did you feel that your husband and you were disgraced?"

"Yes, we did."

"You weren't very proud of your mother-in-law?"

"No, I couldn't be."

No-Poison in the House.

Mrs. Abbie Lee of Dummer Township spoke to Mrs. Edwards on her way home from Hill's on Wednesday, April 12th.

'After we heard Ernest was dead we watched for Mrs. Hill going home," said witness. "I went out and said: 'That's hard news, Em.' She said: 'He's done it through his own ugly temper.' I asked her what had happened, and she said she didn't know unless he had taken poison or Verna Martin had doped him.

"I asked her if there was anything there he could take, and she said: 'Not that I know of.' She said: 'The talk of the people would set you crazy.' On the Saturday of the funeral she told me she had searched all over the house for strychnine and couldn't find it."

Verna Martin.

Verna Martin, whose illness with chickenpox caused several adjournments in the preliminary hearing, said she had been engaged to Ernest Edwards. She lives with her aunt, Mrs. Grieves, in Norwood and appears to be anywhere between 16 and 19 years old. She had stayed with the Edwards family about March 14 for a short time.

"Did you ever see this pitcher?" asked Mr. Strickland holding up a small fancy piece of bricabrac.

"Yes, in a trunk in Ernie's room."

'How did you happen to see it?"

"We were looking through the trunk together. There was a watch and some other trinkets in it."

A previous witness, Jenny Edwards, had sworn that the strychnine had been kept in a small bottle in this jug.

"Did you see anything else?"

"No."

"Did you see Ernie again after that?"

"Yes, several times."

"Was there anything unusual in his conduct?"

"No, I don't think so."

'Was it a shock to you when you heard of his death?"

"Yes, it was."

"Did you see Mrs. Edwards after the body was found?"

"Yes, at Chard's."

"Did you hear her say anything?"

"Yes, she said we'd find out there was poison in his stomach."

"When was that?"

"On the Friday before the funeral."

'Did she say anything else?"

"She said that about 3 o'clock on the Monday afternoon when she was going to Brown's she saw Ernie lying on his back in the yard with his cap on his face and his hands under his head, and at dusk she saw him still lying there. When she was asked why she didn't go and see what was the matter with him, she said she was afraid because he was mad."

Holding up a small phial, Mr. Strickland asked Miss Martin if there was such a bottle in the pitcher. She answered no.

Sure He Was Poisoned.

Nervously twisting and pulling her handkerchief, Miss Martin detailed to Mr. Widdifield the places where she had lived and worked, and denied that she had ever left her aunt's home with a married man.

"You're quite positive about that?"

"Yes."

"Did you ask Mrs. Edwards any questions at Chard's?"

"No, I just heard what she said while the rest were there. She said she was sure Ernest was poisoned, and that we'd find there was poison in his stomach."

"Did she volunteer that remark—off hand, as it were?"

"As far as I know."

Witness recalled that Mrs. Chard had said she 'laid it between Abe Filion and Mrs. Edwards."

"Is that all she said about strychnine?"

"She told us it was in the pitcher in the trunk, and had been put there by her husband."

"She didn't tell you when she last saw the poison?"

"No."

Jennie Edwards.

Parts of the testimony of Jennie Edwards have already been published. On the Wednesday the body of Ernest was found in the yard of their home she went to the house, washed the two smaller children, packed their lunches and took them to school with her. She didn't see anything of Ernest from Monday noon until the recess hour on Wednesday afternoon when a man came to the school and told her the body had been found. Afterwards she drove to Hill's where her mother was staying.

"Mother said he must have done it himself," she told Mr. Strickland. "She didn't say how he had done it."

Continuing, she said she heard her mother tell other persons that Ernest must have taken strychnine.

"Where did she tell that?"

'She told it to so many that I can't remember."

"Try to recall where you first heard her tell it," Mr. Strickland pressed.

"Over at Hill's."

"When was that?"

"On the following Sunday."

"That would be the 17th of April?"

"Yes."

"Did you ever see any strychnine?"

'I saw some in a trunk in Ernest's bedroom."

"Where was that?"

"When we were living in East City."

Witness said the poison was in a little bottle in a pitcher. She identified the pitcher produced in court.

"Did you ever see the bottle again?"

"No."

"How do you remember that time?"

"The trunk used to be in my room."

"How much strychnine was in the bottle?"

"There wasn't very much."

"After you moved to Dunmer did you see the bottle again?"

"It always stayed in the pitcher. I saw the pitcher, but I didn't notice if there was anything in it."

Cross-examined by Mr. Widdifield, the girl said she last saw her brother alive on Monday, at one o'clock.

"Mother and Ernest were at home with my little brother and sister. When I came back from Norwood at 3.30 o'clock no one was there."

On Wednesday she left the following note on the dining-room table: "Ernie, where have you been? When I came back from Norwood nobody was home. I went up to Brown's and mother was there. She said she was going to Warsaw that night. So when I was over to Andrews' grocery, Abe Filion went past and stopped at Brown's. So Lizzie said this morning she had gone with Abe. I asked Liz, where to. She said she didn't know. She only took Freddie and left the others at Brown's. I went up to Wigmore's and stayed there on Monday night. I would not stay here alone for anything, so good-by. I came home on Tuesday, but nobody was home. If you read this, burn it. Then if I come I'll know whether you are home or not."

It was pointed out that Mr. Puffer had testified that he had seen no letter on the table Wednesday night. It was found in Mrs. Edwards' sewing machine at Brown's, after her arrest. Mr. Strickland said that the word Monday had apparently been written over the word Tuesday which had partly been erased. Jennie admitted that this word was not her writing.

"How did the note come in the possession of Mrs. Edwards if she was not on the premises between noon on Monday and Wednesday night?" Mr. Strickland asked in the argument that concluded the hearing.

"Ovaltine" Hastens your return to Health and Strength

Convalescence is always tedious. Depleted strength and vitality must be restored—not by drugs and stimulants which act only superficially, but by nourishment. Yet an invalid's fastidious appetite and weakened digestion prohibit much food and retard the return of health. In such cases "Ovaltine" is invaluable.

STORY OF TEN DAYS' BATTLE HEAVY GALES

Leyland Passenger Liner Winifredian Dragged Safely to Port By the Huge Freighter Oxonian

ST. JOHN'S Nfld June 1 —(Canadian Press). — An interesting story of ten day's battle with hard gales and heavy seas to make 450 miles with an unmanageable mass of 20,000 tons deadweight at the end of a 20 ton towline —most of the time going it blind through dripping fogs shrouding wild waters strewn with the peril of drifting bergs— was brought here when the Leyland passenger liner Winifredian arrived in port, dragging after her the big freighter Oxonian, of the same line rudderless and helpless. British seamanship of the highest order was bent to the task, and British pertinacity, as well as seamanship, was required to accomplish the tow; a heart-breaking tussle, interrupted when, within a few miles of St. John's the big freighter snapped the 20-ton tow line like packthread, and went plunging away towards the ice fields in the east. The arduous character of the struggle is indicated by the fact that 15,000 messages conveying orders, directions and warnings, passed by wireless between the two ships—to say nothing of many urgent messages passing between the bridge officers by Morse lamp and semaphore.

When the Winifredian in a response to a wireless call, reached the Oxonian, disabled by the breaking of her rudder, a moderate sea was running. She launched a boat and transferred one of her Marconi men (also disabled) aboard, giving two operators to each ship. Then a small line was passed between the two ships. This served to enable the Oxonian to haul aboard the end of a stout manilla hawser, which in turn served to haul the end of a big wire cable to her forecastle head.

Meantime the Oxonian had unshackled the end of her chain cable from an anchor and brought it to her forecastle head, the bight being left in the hawse pipe. The wire hawser end was shackled to the end of the anchor chain and the tow line was complete.

A Heavy Drag

When the Winifredian went ahead the Oxonian paid out her anchor chain till there was a quarter of a mile or so between the ships; and the long tow began. The high powered passenger liner found the big freighter a heavy drag, but while the sea was moderate the tow went along fairly well with her cable leading down into the water as if she were riding at anchor. Before long, however, a head wind began to pipe up, whipping up an ugly sea, and the tow began to take broad sheers, putting a tremendous strain on the towline, though never lifting it to the surface. The Winifredian would then stop her engines and some times come astern to avoid parting the tow line; then she would have to manoeuvre carefully and tediously to straighten out the rudderless and refractory Oxonian in the direction of St. John's again When the Oxonian opened up her own engines she sheered more wildly, and the engineer was told to merely let enough steam into them to keep them warm for an emergency.

The ships made slow progress, and to add to their troubles a thick fog shut down. At times they were invisible to one another, and then the disposition of the Oxonian to take the bit in her mouth and go off at a tangent was a constant menace to the towline. Not only were the demands upon the altertness of the deck officers increased; but the wireless operator had to remain constantly on duty, with men standing by to relay messages between the bridge and the radio-room.

Through the long watches, fearing any minute they might blunder into a berg the Winifredian and her lumbering tow struggled slowly towards St. John's—so slowly that by the end of the second day, the captain fearing a fodder famine, ordered that the 850 cattle on the liner and the 750 cattle on the freighter be put on short rations. And soon to the bowl of the winds, the uproar of angry waters and the groanings of the laboring ships, was added the mournful lowing of hungry animals. The cattlemen found their work becoming increasingly difficult and dangerous, for the beasts began to develop a vicious temper.

After a weary week the ships arrived somewhere off the entrance to St. John's, but the fog was too thick to tell just where they were. So they sent out a wireless call for tugs to help steer the Oxonian through the Narrows and waited for the fog to clear.

That night a gale came out of the east, and the Winifredian laboried mightily and warily to hold her tow up to it, manoeuvreing delicately, yet powerfully, because to part the tow rope would leave the Oxonian helpless on a pitiless lee shore, while if she did not held her own against the head wind and sea, both ships would be gradually set back upon the coast. Gloom and dripping fog enveloped them—a fog bearing waves of biting cold air, alarmingly suggestive of ice drifting down the wind.

Coast Under Lee

Shortly after day dawned, the fog lifted, and they saw the high coast under their lee—too near for comfort. The Winifredian put her engines ahead some revolutions to work out to sea, and about the same time the Oxonian took a wilder sheer than usual and a vicious squall swept down upon them. Then as the freighter lifted her prow high on a sea, the long tow line came hissing out of the water and, twanging like a mighty fiddle string, parted near where the wire hawser joined the cable chain. The ships were shaken as if they had run full tilt into a berg. On the Winifredian, passenger aroused from sleep by the jarring vibration, hastened on deck in alarm, while the chinaware clattered in the pantries.

Broadside on, rolling heavily, the Oxonian was drifting toward a high cliff, against which the rollers were spouting hoarsely. But apparently a part of her laundred and dragged her bow around; at any rate, her head swung off shore, away from the foam fringed cliffs and Captain Parry put his engines ahead full speed. Out to sea went the big freighter, while the mate and his crowd went on the fo'castle head, and started the windlass, and hove up the dragging cable.

And then the easterly gale suddenly died out; the squall that nearly settled the fate of the freighter was its flurry. When the Oxonian began to turn broadside to the sea again and Captain Parry stopped his engines, it was nearly calm. And not long after breeze came out of the west and grew in force until the freighter was drifting to sea at a rapid rate.

A High Sea

The Winifredian took several hours to get her heavy hawser aboard, and the Oxonian was ten miles out when she caught up with her again. A high confused sea was running and it was considered too dangerous to launch a small boat. The weather prospects indicated that the sea would not moderate for a long time. Captain Trant of the Winifredian faced the question of manoeuvring his big ship near enough to the freighter to throw a line aboard, or leaving her adrift another day and night, with the chances that she might drift into an icefield or be set back on the shore by a change in the wind. He decided to try to put a line aboard the freighter a difficult and delicate operation, and sufficiently dangerous. But he tackled it. Manoeuvring near enough to the drifting freighter many many times, only to be compelled to sheer off in a hurry, owing to some fluke of the wind, or some erratic movement of the helpless freighter.

"Our First Year"

CHAPTER LI
TRIVIAL TROUBLES

When a girl marries she expects life is going to become a succession of startling events.

Pretty soon she discovers that life goes on after her wedding much as it did before.

Jack never asked me why I had gone to the station, nor whom I had seen there. His lack of curiosity made me awfully cross. He ought also to have raged about the play, but he did not.

But I hadn't a particle of right to be cross if Jack was living up to our contract far better than I did.

Somewhat vaguely said I to Me:

"Peg Madison, that letter from Mrs. Herrod was only a little rift in between you and Jack, but it will be as deep and broad as the grand canyon if you keep on imagining things as you've been doing the last few days.

In spite of this wise admonition, I permitted our next big trouble to develop over a mere trifle.

Jack was obstinate about nothing at all. Sometimes I surmised that he must have been jealous of Bart, a little bit, or he wouldn't have been so stubborn about not shaving off his mustache. The story seems silly, now I look back at it.

Jack had decided to wear a mustache thinking it would make him look older, would add to his dignity as a business man.

I developed an intense dislike for it from the first.

I like to believe that I have a sense of humor, but I must own up that I was unreasonable about that mustache. Jack had been cultivating it about two weeks when one morning I announced, impulsively, that I would not kiss him until he shaved it off.

"Never again, Peggins?"

Jack put his lathered face into my kitchenet before breakfast. No man looks like a hero in that state. It was easy for me to say with decision:

"I mean just what I say! I will not kiss you until you have off that mustache! So—you'd better do it—NOW!"

I suppose that demand made Jack unreasonable; or convinced him that I was. Certainly he must have been convinced of something very disagreeable when I absolutely refused to kiss him goodby, and he had to go off to the office—for the first time—without it!

So we went along for two weeks. Every morning I cried after my husband went to work.

Embrace me he might, kiss me he might not! Becoming a real cave man, upon one occasion, he got soundly slapped for his pains.

Baby Carriages
on Instalment Terms

SOME one has said that "nowadays the whole world travels on wheels." At any rate, all infants do. From their earliest days they know the pleasure of lolling about on luxuriously soft upholstering and rolling along without any effort of their own; and we might add, very little effort on the part of their mothers, if they are using a Carriage of the same construction as these that we offer on instalment terms.

Master craftsmen made them and designers with artistic ability designed them. Will you take time to inspect them? It's well worth while.

THERE ARE ELEVEN CARRIAGES—ALL REPRESENTING THE BEST VALUE AT THEIR RESPECTIVE PRICES

$72.50—This is the most expensive Carriage on the Floor. It is of the finest of full round reed, cream finish, long body with roll edge, adjustable top with roll edge and window panels, upholstered in the best quality cream corduroy, brown finish artillery wheels and reversible gear.

$72—Much the same as the above, but without window panels and slightly different in design. Cream finished body and corduroy upholstering.

$70—A beautiful Carriage, similiar to the two models mentioned above, buf not quite so elaborate in some of the details of trimming.

$65—A different type of Carriage to the others. It is an English model with cream wire wheels, like those in the illustration, but the body is of full reed with roll edge, cream finish, corduroy upholstering, reversible gear.

$62.50—This one is a departure in design to the others. The body is of wood and trimmed with a roll edge of the reed. The upholstering is corduroy. The artillery wheels, reversible gear and body are all finished in cream.

$39.50—This number has a split reed body with full reed roll edge on both body and top. Rubber-tiked wire wheels and cream denim with corduroy stripe.

$30—This number is strongly constructed of split reed! wire wheels, adjustable top and cream denim lining. Cream finished body and top.

$45 and $47—These models resemble both a Carriage and a Go-Cart. They have the advantages of both. They are much larger than a go-cart, but not so large as a carriage. Woven of the finest of reed, cream corduroy lining, artillery wheels. Cream finish body and top.

CHICAGO WHEAT.

CHICAGO, June 1. Canadian Press. — Lively but unspectacular trading and price changes yesterday accompanied the settlement of contracts for May delivery of wheat. The chief struggle between opposing factions in the market appeared to have ended Monday when values smashed downward 10 1-4c a bushel as a result of liquidating sales on the part of leaders on the bull side. Shorts covered freely today but met with no great difficulty in obtaining all the wheat they needed. Prices closed irregular at 2 3-4c net decline to 3-4c advance, with May 116 to 117, and July 118 3-8 to 118 1-2. Corn finished 3-8 to 3-4c up, oats varying from a shade decline to 7-8c, a 1c gain, and provisions unchanged to 10c lower.

STERLING RATES.

MONTREAL, June 1. Canadian Press. — Prices were up 1-2c a bushel in the local cash market yesterday. A weaker feeling developed in the flour market and prices were down 50c a barrel. Trade in millfeed and rolled oats was quiet. The baled hay market was fairly active. The egg market was without feature and there was no change in the potato market. Prices in butter are steady and were up 1-4 to 7-16c per pound in cheese.

MONTREAL, June 1. Canadian Press. — Sterling exchange rates were quoted yesterday—
Demand 4.4898.
Cables 4.4929.

EGG MARKETS.

OTTAWA, June 1. Canadian Press. — The tone of the market is about steady with supplies more than ample to meet all the requirements. The general quality of the product coming forward is beginning to show the effect of warm weather and the jobbers are finding it increasingly difficult to get enough of the higher grades out of current receipts to meet the local requirements.

Winnipeg unchanged. A car of seconds rolling to Quebec costing 23 1-2 f.o.b. Winnipeg.

CROPS IN FRANCE.

PARIS, June 1. — (Canadian Press)—Reports of the ministry of agriculture, made public today, show that 1,250,000 fewer acres were planted in wheat, barley and rye this year than last because of unfavorable weather conditions, the wheat and oats acreage each being half a million short, and barley a quarter of a million. The reports show, however, that crop prospects have improved during the past month.

Great Refund Offer
To Peterboro People Who Are Weak, Sickly, Nervous or Run-Down

IMPORTANT NOTICE:—By special arrangement, we can now extend to any person in Peterborough who wants more strength, energy and endurance, the opportunity of using Nuxated Iron so that if you do not get all and even greater benefits than you expect, it will not cost you one cent, because we ourselves will promptly return your money.

You may wonder how we can afford to do this. The answer is that week after week eighty to one hundred Peterborough people come into our store for Nuxated Iron; throughout the country over four million people use it annually. Blood examinations by physicians all over the country show that an enormous number of people do not have enough iron in their blood. Without iron the blood becomes thin, pale and watery. In many cases this so seriously weakens the vital organs that people often believe they have heart or stomach trouble, kidney diseases, nerve force exhaustion or some other serious ailment. They have pains and palpitation of the heart, sudden dizziness, faintness or spots before the eyes, when as a matter of fact the trouble is all due to lack of iron in the blood, and when iron is supplied, all of these symptoms disappear.

Genuine Nuxated Iron contains true organic iron like the iron in your blood. So many people are deficient in iron who would surely be benefited by this remarkable remedy that we recommend that you come right to Warne's Drug Store and get a regular $1.10 bottle for $1.00, use it for two weeks and note the improvement in your own case. You are the judge—if you do not get all and even greater benefits than you expect, just bring back the wrapper and we will promptly refund the full amount you paid.

ANNUAL MEETING HELD MILLBROOK

Churches on the Circuit Had a Good Year. Millbrook News.

MILLBROOK, June 1.— The annual congregational meeting of the Millbrook circuit, (Fallis' Line, Carmel and Zion, outside appointments), was held in the Methodist church on Tuesday evening with about 100 of the members and adherents in attendance. The pastor, Rev. S. T. Tucker, occupied the chair, and very encouraging reports, on the whole, were given by the various officers of the organization in connection with the circuit.

An opening chorus, "Notes of Joy," by three girls, was followed by the report of the Ladies' Aid Society given by the president, Miss May Needham, and showing a total amount raised during the year, of $900; Miss Hampton, the vice-president, reported for the Woman's Missionary Auxiliary, stating that $235.57 represented the receipts of that organization for the year, $234 being the amount sent to the branch treasurer. Miss Stella Pethick, treasurer of the Mission Circle, showed that $91 was received, with $71 sent to Mrs. Foley, Bowmanville, conference treasurer, while the Mission Band sent $45, which goes to the support of the 'Sunshine Cot' in China.

A recitation, Tennyson's "The Revenge," by Kathleen Freelove, was given by special request, and was much enjoyed. This was the selection which Kathleen recited at the elocutionary contest held in connection with the High school entertainment in the Town Hall two years ago, and for which she received the gold medal. Mr. F. Fallis, the superintendent of Millbrook Sunday school, read the report, stating that 11 scholars had not missed a Sunday in 1921, the total temperance offerings amounted to $37.70, the general offerings to $439.53, the Home Class to $28.60, and there had been a special donation of $5; the Primary Department was given by Miss Gertrude Richards, teacher of the Beginners' Class, and showed a total membership of 58 up till the New Year, when 24 scholars were promoted to the junior section of the school; there are now 43 names on the roll, 22 beginners, and 21 primary pupils. The total membership of the school, including Cradle Roll, Home Dept., etc., is now well over the 300 mark.

Carmel Sunday School.

Carmel Sunday school had an encouraging report as read by the superintendent, Mr. W. Lunn. Number on the roll 60, average attendance 45; 3 member of the school had united with the church during the year; a total of $206.21 was raised, and there was now a balance on hand of $32.61.

Miss Stella Hetherington, president of the Epworth League, gave an interesting account of the year's activities, and also the fact that $100 had been sent to Dr. F. C. Stephenson for the Forward Movement for missions. A quartette followed, by Miss Needham, Mrs. F. Johnston, Messrs. W. Coombe and G. Duncan, Miss May Duncan acting as accompanist, after which the ... lis' Line church was read by Mr. T. H. Aiken, and Miss Marjorie Skitch, the newly-appointed secretary of the Young Worshippers' League read the statement of church attendance of the 59 children who are members of the League; the highest record was that of Mary Burnham, who was present 50 Sundays; 13 others over 40 Sundays, and 16 new members were added during the year. Mr. G. E. Burnham, treasurer of the church, then gave the financial statement, with suggested changes necessary for the needs of the church today, and the recording steward, Mr. W. C. Hetherington, followed with some interesting facts and figures, amongst the latter being the total amount raised, $7,268, last year.

The reward cards for the members of the Young Worshippers' League were given out at this meeting instead of on Sunday morning as had formerly been the custom, quite a number of the boys and girls being present.

Refreshments were served, and a most enjoyable social hour spent before the gathering was dismissed.

Held a Shower.

The "Mizpeh" young ladies' Bible class, of the Methodist Sunday school, held a delightful "shower" at the home of their teacher, Mrs. P. Stinson, on Friday evening in honor of Miss Hazel Jones, whose marriage to Mr. J. Crown, of Reaboro, takes place at the residence of her aunt, Mrs. W. Brock, Peterborough, this week. The gifts for the 'shower,' which was a miscellaneous one, were daintily arranged in a small waggon prettily trimmed with pink roses, and were brought into the drawing room by little Miss Iris Hammond, Mrs. Stinson's niece. The bride-to-be, although taken completely by surprise, made a brief reply, thanking her class mates and teacher for their kindness, and afterwards a musical program was enjoyed, all present joining in some of the songs and choruses, and having a thoroughly good time together, with refreshments served before the guests left for their various homes.

Lodge Initiation.

The "Golden Sheaf" Rebekah Lodge, No. 176, held a special meeting on Tuesday, May 29th, at 8 p.m., for the purpose of initiating three candidates, Miss Jean Syer, Mr. Douglas Sheppard, and Mr. Cecil Sutton, who were presented for membership. The Noble Grand, Mrs. T. H. Bradley, occupied the chair, and there were about fifty of the local members in attendance. Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Jones, (the latter a past N.G., and also a Past District Deputy President), Mrs. Merritt, and Miss Rookes, of Peterborough, were also present. Following the conferring of the Rebekah Degree, brief addresses were made by the visitors, who expressed themselves ah being pleased with the work put on by the degree team, and also by the new members.

Ice cream and cake was served downstairs in the dining room, and the usual social hour enjoyed, before the meeting was finally brought to a close.

Baseball Game.

The first baseball game of the C.M.E. League to be played in Millbrook, will take place at the Agricultural grounds on Wednesday evening, May 31st at 6.15 p.m. A large attendance is looked for as there is a lively interest taken locally in the league.

THE FRIEND OF THE ENTIRE FAMILY

NO longer is Dad the week-end chauffeur for the family. Mother and the girls can confidently and alone operate a Disappearing Propeller Boat. There's nothing to learn. The improved Dispro Self Starter instantly starts the motor and then there's only one lever to think of. It's right at hand as you sit comfortably in the centre of the boat. The further you lower it, the faster you go—simply raise it to slow up.

Then there's the famous patented Disappearing Propeller Device, whereby the propeller is automatically raised to safety when a sunken obstacle strikes the protecting skeg; also enables you to run the boat up on a sandy beach for landing. Has Silent Motor—no vibration. The propeller being amidships stabilises the boat. Price is within the reach of every summer cottage owner. It is true economy—20 to 23 miles per gallon of gasoline.

Deftly removing the slip of paper from her glove, Disraeli held it up and finished the sentence.

"The code!"

Mrs. Travers faced him. She was completely at bay.

"Well? What of it?"

"Ah, that's better. That's how I remember you," Disraeli spoke as though his memory was taking him back to almost forgotten years, to other lands, and vaguely remembered faces.

"Remember me?" Mrs. Travers was puzzled. She tried to smile unconcernedly.

"Yes. When we met at The Towers—so curious. I remembered, you, but I couldn't place you. I connected you with something blue and white."

With fear in her eyes, but a laugh on her lips, she suggested:

"Milk and water!"

"No! Snow and water! Mont Blanc and the Lake of Geneva!"

She started. But he went on:

"Geneva in the 'sixties! Russian refugees and their English sympathizers! A man called Lumley and his ravishing—shall I say—wife?"

Mrs. Travers looked at him, quickly, cold dread in her eyes. Disraeli continued ruthlessly.

"No—not wife! Comrades was their word. Charming relationship. That delightful couple—so good to the unhappy exiles! But people are cruel. They said kind Mr. Lumley and his lovely comrade—were agents—decoys in Russian pay, engaged in worming out the secrets of the refugees, in tempting them back to Russia—to Siberia—to death."

The woman's face assumed an expression of horror at the memory of the past. A stifled cry escaped her lips, but she recovered herself. Once more, she smiled.

"And pray, what has all this to do with me?" she asked.

"Ah, what, indeed? You—the friend of duchesses! Of dukes! Good Mr. Lumley, and his comrade, were driven out of Geneva by the slanderers; and, where do you think I saw him next? In Downing Street. He had changed his name to Foljambe. I was so sorry for him, I gave him work. But you did better. You gave him instructions to hurry to Trieste."

"That is how I remember you, dear, Mrs. Lumley-Travers-Foljambe!"

"And—what next?" she asked.

"Admiration! Profound admiration until this moment. To-day you have disappointed me. Why steal the code? Weak, very weak. You had only to ask me. I would have told you. 'The celery is ripe to cut' means 'The Suez Canal purchase completed and cheque accepted.' Poor dear Lumley-Foljambe has had all that tiresome journey for nothing."

Mrs. Travers laughed triumphantly, and said:

"Your apple-faced boy has blundered into success."

"That's all any of us do," Disraeli remarked.

"Into success that will cost you dear."

"That's the sort of thing Gladstone will say!"

"It's what the world will say when it knows that Meyers is bankrupt!"

"When it knows—what?" he asked, pretending amazement.

Mrs. Travers leaned over to him and repeated sweetly:

MAGNESIA FINE FOR ACID STOMACH

Quickly Neutralizes Acidity. Stops Fermentation, Sweetens the Stomach

Nine people in ten, when food upsets the stomach causing distress, think they have indigestion. In reality, they are suffering from "acid stomach." An excess of acid in the stomach causes gas, heartburn, bloating and sourness.

To have a strong healthy stomach capable of easily and normally digesting three hearty meals a day you simply must keep these stomach acids neutralized and the stomach contents sweet. No artificial digestents necessary. Just ge a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia from any good drug store and take a teaspoonful of the powder or two tablets in a half glass of water right after eating or whenever the slightest pain is felt. The result is amazing and you will be delighted with the almost instant relief it brings. This famous stomach sweetner combines Magnesia and Bismuth in desirable proportion and is not only splendidly effective but perfectly harmless. Its regular use keeps the stomach sweet strong and healthy all the time.

Bisurated Magnesia is well known to druggists everywhere and is used annually by more than a half million people who now eat as they please, in reason with no fear of indigestion.

Radio Music Replaces Orchestra

Dancing to music from the air has been taken up in New York. It's spreading to other places. Instead of its regular orchestra, the Pennslyvania Hotel installed a large machine shaped like a phonograph and tuned in on the Newark radio broadcasting station. Dance music came over by radio. Other hotels are copyig this stunt.

"The Message of the Bluebird"

A Light Opera Written and Produced by Mr. Asa Huycke

"The Message of the Bluebird," Mr. Asa Huycke's original light opera, was repeated last evening at the Grand Opera House, before a filled house.

If the first night's audience exhibited a slightly critical tone, last night's enthusiastic applause for every number gave the seal of approval to the ambitious attempt of Peterborough's young composer.

Appreciation was manifested throughout the entire performance, which moved with a snap and vim that made the second night more effective than the premiere.

Cries of "author" resounded through the theatre just before the final curtain, and Mr. Huycke was presented with a large floral tribute by little Sophie Yeotes, cunningly garbed as a small Swiss maiden.

During the third act, also, numerous bouquets were received by the principals of the cast. Mrs. A. A. Perrin was showered with flowers. Mrs. M. H. Park received several beautiful bouquets, and Miss Ida Sanderson, Miss Greta LeBarr, and Miss Lillian Eastwood had armfuls of fragrant blossoms.

OTTAWA OR BUST NOW PLAYED OUT

No Longer the Slogan of Riley's Army

PRESCOTT, June 1.—(Special to The Examiner).—"The men have only hurt themselves," said E. C. McDonald, with reference to his final dismissal in the small hours of the morning. "I have made my money in the form of an offer to publish the book I am going to write about myself. A Kingston publisher is going to do it for me. The men are getting near Ottawa and are fed up with discipline and marching. Their slogan, 'Ottawa or bust,' is played out," he said.

McDonald's Downfall.

The cause of McDonald's downfall was his fondness for rigid discipline. His men feel that success made him too egotistic. It was all very well for a while, and resulted in welding them into a solid organization with real military discipline. Then one day the hikers suddenly woke up and realized that they were no longer soldiers, but civilians and comrades. A re-action set in, and McDonald's brief reign was over. For three days he was unable to march, and spent his nights at hotels. He delayed handing over cheques amounting to one hundred and eighty dollars to the treasurer. The men then suspected him of being on a drunk with the army's funds, and although he turned in the cheques intact it was too late; his downfall was only delayed by his admission to the hospital.

Under the new regime every one is supposed to have the same status. All meetings are for the whole army, and every comrade is free to make suggestions. The executive of twelve merely act in an administrative capacity, dealing with the details of instructions from the whole body. The men are busy guessing where McDonald has gone. It has just occurred to them that he might have gone on to Ottawa instead of using the $16 they gave him to go home to Toronto. He disappeared as quickly as he came. It was all over in a few minutes after his arrival by taxi at 3 o'clock in the morning; before all the army were awake he was away again. No one even protested against the manner of his dismissal when he was away. He only got a hearing when he spoke this morning after all was over.

Off to Spencerville.

The hikers are leaving at eleven to-day for Spencerville, twelve miles away, which they expect to reach by four. They will bivouac until ten and then cover the fourteen miles to Kemptville in a night march. Last night there was almost a riot when some one offered to sell the veterans tickets for a dance. Then they suddenly remembered that they had sore feet, and the very suggestion of a dance made them sore. They were not too tired to go to a ten o'clock concert, at which the town band assisted. The collection amounted to fifteen dollars. McDonald has it all now, and there is only a dollar in the treasury. However, the motor truck has all the rations it will carry as the result of the town's generosity. The food donations included fifty pounds of beef and thirty pounds of butter, and a whole day's supply of canned vegetables and fruit.

Turn Down a Ride.

An offer to ride all the way to [illegible] the hikers when a phone message from Mr. Mahoney, of the cartage firm of Mahoney and Rich, came through to Riley, their leader. "We've an offer to ride there," he said to the men. "Then we'll ride," they broke in. "No you won't," he replied.

After a brief harangue by the chief they decided otherwise. "We'll walk," they yelled in chorus after it was explained that walking would have a greater moral effect. Then they fell in and marched away, cheerily, on the trail to the capital. Riley could not understand the offer, and thought there was some ulterior motive behind it.

T. H. LENNOX HAS NOT PROVED HIS CHARGES.

TORONTO, June 1. Canadian Press. — The Public Accounts Committee of the Legislature this afternoon passed a resolution declaring that T. H. Lennox, North York had not proven in his evidence before the committee his charges made on the floor of the House that Attorney-General Raney had knowingly "employed thugs and criminals to enforce the Ontario Temperance Act."

W. F. Nickle, Kingston, and the Attorney-General declined to vote.

A FINE COMPLEXION

Can be Had Through Keeping the Blood Rich and Pure.

A girl's complexion is something more than a matter of concern to her vanity. It is an indication of the state of her health. Pallor in a growing girl means a thinning of blood. Eruptions mean impurities in the blood. Mothers should be watchful of their daughters complexions, and see to it that these are corrected—not covered up.

When a girl in her teens becomes pale and sallow, especially if, at the same time, she shows an inclination to tire easily, a listlessness, and inattention to he work or studies, she needs Dr. Williams 'Pink Pills' a tonic which directly and specially corrects the condition from which she is suffering. A chemical analysis of the blood of such a girl would show it to be deficient in just the elements that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can supply, but the physical signs are plain. The girl with a bad complexion or who suffers from occasional headaches, who is easily tired and breathless after slight exertion, should begin taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at once. A good appetite, sparkling eyes and rosy cheeks follow the fair use of this medicine.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

An Alpine pass in northern Italy was named for Pope Pius XI several years ago in tribute to his prowess as a mountaineer.

TEA PRICES RISING WITH INCREASED DEMAND.

The shortage of the supply of tea available for consumption, due to the 20 per cent. reduction in production in the gardens of Ceylon and ndia during 1921, has, as might be expected, pushed the price of the tea offered on the market to-day, up and up. At the same time the use of tea has been gaining in popularity, and the reduction of fourpence a pound duty on tea entering England will further stimulate the demand. Those in touch with the situation advise us that higher prices are inevitable.

RED FROCKS.

At the Paris races recently it was noticed that many of the Parisiennes appeared in all red frocks. Some frocks were of crepe and some of heavier materials. The most pleasing one was worn with a small turban of the same material as the frock.

FALL SHOES.

Fancy shoes are most popular now, but the newer models indicate a return to more conservative models than we are now seeing. Heels seems to stay "sensible."

POPULAR CREPE.

Georgette crepe continues to be a most popular material, and is especially so when it is printed in bright figures or brocaded in self-tones.

FIFTEEN BOILS ON NECK AT ONE TIME

Any one who has suffered from boils can sympathize with poor old Job.

There was no Burdock Blood Bitters in those days, so Job had to suffer in silence. Nowadays no one need endure the misery of boils.

Boils are simply evidences of the bad blood within coming to the surface and just when you get rid of one, another seems ready to take its place and prolong your misery.

All the poulticing and lancing you may do will not stop more coming. What you have to do is take and the blood will be cleansed of all its impurities, and then every boil will disappear.

Mr. Roy McSwain, High Bank, P. E. I., writes: "I was troubled with boils for some time, and had as many as fifteen on my neck at once. After taking one bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters they commenced to get better, and after I had taken two bottles I was relieved of them and felt much better. I think B. B. B. is a grand blood medicine, and can recommend it highly."

For the past 45 years B. B. B. has been manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Officers Were Elected for the Peterboro' Women's Canadian Club

Miss A. Lancaster Heads the Organization—Several Meetings Held During the Season — Reports Received.

The annual meeting for election of officers of the Women's Canadian Club was held on Tuesday afternoon at the Public Library, when elections for the year resulted as follows: President, Miss A. Lancaster; 1st vice-president, Miss A. Halliday; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. Robt. Harstone; secretary, Mrs. Adrian Macdonlad; treasurer, Mrs. G. E. Porter; executive committee, Mesdames D. Walker, C. R. Widdifield, J. N. Fraser, F. J. A. Morris and the Misses Feint, Ross and Erskine.

Mrs. E. F. Mason gave the treasurer's report, which showed a balance in the bank of about $23, and Mrs. Gerald Wood the secretary's report ,as follows:

"The season for meetings of the Women's Canadian Club has been rather short this year, owing to the lateness of beginning. However, there have been some very enjoyable lectures given, and the attendance as a whole has been satisfactory to the committee.

"As you will no doubt remember, we have had two illustrated lectures, one by Prof. Morison of Queen's University, on "Glimpses of a Highland Countryside," and the other that of Mrs. McMurray of Natal, on "Sunny Africa." Then we had one Social Service lecture by Miss Charlotte Whitton, M.A.; one on Poetry, by Mr. T. G. Marquis, of Toronto; one University Extension lecture by Prof. Horning, on "Canada Before and After,' and two on Education, one by Provost Seager, entitled "The Challenge of Our Country To-day," and the other by Sir Robert Falconer, entitled, "Education and the National Life." It has been the aim of your committee to secure as much of a variety of topics as possible, in order to varry the year's programme, and they hope that they have been successful in making the season an enjoyable one.

"The membership for the year numbers 131, which is a slight increase over last season, and, as before mentioned, the attendance has, we think, shown an increase also.

"At the last meeting, it was decided to change the date of the annual meeting from October to May, and the advantage of such a change is obvious. Last year, the Executive was not able to meet until late in November, which meant that Christmas activities were well under way before a speaker could be secured, hence the first meeting was not held until January 9th. The object of the change, therefore, is to enable the new executive to meet early in the year and so have a longer time to prepare their programme.

"It is earnestly hoped that the membership will increase from year to year, and that the Club will attain and maintain a high record of attendance, through which the officers and committee receive much encouragement in their efforts to secure lectures which will be interesting to all. The interest shown in the past year has well repaid all effort and is gratefully acknowledged."

CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETIES

At the annual conference of the Association of Children's Aid Societies, held at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, last week, which was attended by representatives of the Society from Peterboro, discussions of interest took place on many subjects connected with child welfare work, among them recent amendments to The Children's protection Act of Ontario.

By the provisions of these amendments, a local superintendent or probation officer or any other officer of a Juvenile Court or a constable may apprehend without warrant and take to a place of safety, any child who appears to be a neglected child, and the term "Neglected child" is further enlarged to include one "who is deserted by either parent, the other being unable to maintain the child."

In connection with expenses incurred by the Children's Aid Society in supporting a child, it is enacted that "when committing a child to the custody or control of a Children's Aid Society, the Judge shall make an order for the payment by the corporation of the municipality to which the child belongs of a reasonable sum, not less than seventy-five cents a day, for the expense of supporting the child by the Society or in a temporary home, or in a foster home where children are not cared for without compensation" and "the Council of every municipality shall have power to pass by-laws for the levying of such amounts as it may be necessary or desirable to raise for the purpose of complying with any obligation imposed on said municipality by any provision of this Act or for the purpose of offering to a Children's Aid Society such other assistance as may be deemed desirable." The order for maintenance is to be sent to the clerk of the municipality which is liable; they having one month in which to dispute such liability, and it is further agreed that "for the purposes of this Act stay as an inmate in a maternity boarding house, an infants' or children's boarding home, a correctional or charitable institution, a hospital or any similar home or institution for custodial, medical or other care or supervision, shall not be deemed residence or domicile in any municipality."

Other sub-sections are as follows: "No child shall engage in any street trade or occupation between the hours of 10 o'clock in the afternoon and 6 o'clock in the forenoon of the following day."

"A children's Aid Society shall be governed by a Board of Directors or Executive Committee composed of a president, one or more vice-president, a secretary, a treasurer, a local superintendent, and such other officers and members as may be determined, elected in such manner and for such period as is provided by the constitution or by-laws of the Society."

"Two or more Childrens Aid Societies may appoint the same local superintendent."

"Every local superintendent of a Children's Aid Society shall for the purposes of this Act be vested with the powers of a Peace Officer or a School Attendance Officer under the School Attendance Act, 1919, and shall be deemed an officer within the meaning of Section 12 of The Public Authorities Protection Act". "Any Children's Aid Society may furnish temporary shelter to any child with the consent of the parents or parent of person in charge of the child and may charge the municipality thereof at a rate not exceeding $1 per diem on the written requistion of the mayor or reeve of such municipality.

ST. PETER'S RECORD

St. Peter, who, in the pause of a busy day, had set himself down for a moment to glance over one of the daily newspapers of the terrestrial world visible far below in space, scratched his head—thoughtfully. What caused this distinctly earthly gesture was the article he had just been reading, in the "obituary columns of the publication. It was a laudatory "obit", describing at length the virtues and far-famed qualities of a man who had just died. According to that paper, this man was a saint on earth. His benefactions had been numerous, he had stood high, very high, in several superior earthly societies, he had been a pillar of the church, a kind husband and father, and his family were "inconsolable."

Once more St. Peter scratched his head—thoughtfully, and then he tinkled the small bell at his elbow, summoning to his side the assistant secretary of Earthly Affairs in charge of Ledgers S—Z. "Look up John Smith, of Smithville, who passed away day before yesterday," he directed. The celestial record was brought. St. Peter perused it with attention, to the final cross at the end which marked the extinction of the entrant's earthly career. "I do not remember this man" he said, slowly, "did he make application for admission here?" "No, Master", answered the calm secretary. "Ahem", said St. Peter, and passed on the account of a new star just discovered by an earthy scientist.

HOUSEWIVES HAVE SURVIVED ORDEAL OF HOUSECLEANING

The joyous house-cleaning season is nearly over, and most of the houses where busy housewives have been at work for the last few weeks have their figurative hair smoothly brushed, their faces freshly washed, and clean white 'pinnies' in full evidence. Elizabeth, writing in her "German Garden" story, relates the tale of the English visitor to northern Germany who was so horrified at the practice in common use there of washing the family linen every four months only. The German housewife regarded this as a sign of owning immense quantities of linen but to the metal eye of the hearer there appeared only the vision of piles of unwashed fabrics through long weeks. At any rate, the German lady was perfectly clean every once in a while, and after spring cleaning, our homes are in the same happy condition.

One lady's system is to go through the house from attic to cellar. Commencing aloft, she looks carefully through the attic paraphernalia, usually re-folding and re-packing much that is stored therein, with few discards. Having satisfied her mind here, she goes through the house, cleaning our clothes closets and bureau-drawers, and transferring the findings to the attic, which latter present its usual aspect of being a hold-all for numerous leftovers.

The hazards of the business are various. There is the amusing chore of scraping of divers layers of wall-paper from lengthy walls, a process which induced in one housewife this spring a calculating eye which saw in her pretty new paper only its future possibilities of coming off the wall easily or otherwise. And there is the painting varied by sticky fingers of exloring children; the washing and stretching of curtains; the pursuit of the elusive dust fluff by the purring vacuum cleaner; the odor of fresh paint and soap, of red pepper and camphor balls which accompany the annual overhauling of our domestic shrines.

THE DEBATES ARE ALMOST FINISHED.

The debating competition among the district junior branches of the U.F.O. clubs which has been going on now for some months, in a contest that had for its objective the winning of a silver cup at annual U.F.O. picnic this summer, is almost finished. This week will see the two final events in the schedule. The standing of the various clubs at the beginning of the week was as follows: Peterboro 5 wins, 5 losses; Lakefield, 6 wins, 3 losses; Rush Point 6 wins, 3 losses; Norwood, 5 wins and 4 losses; Zion 4 wins, 5 losses; Havelock, 2 wins, 8 losses; The clubs have been debating on a variety of subjects, ranging from "grave to gay from lively to severe;" including consideration of matters of interest to the daily life of the farmer.

LANDLUBBERS IN MIDDIES!

You may have no closer acquaintance with the billowing blue than your morning plunge and yet wear a more or less nautical costume.

Although middies are not what they were they are much nicer. When they were first worn, several year ago, they were taken over in their entirety—regulation collar, straight baggy lines and wide set-in sleeves.

The 1922 model is cut in under the arms. It is longer. It has a belt. It has raglan sleeves. It has a convertible collar. It doesn't, of course, bear the remotest resemblance to a middy.

BROWNATONE

DARKEN GRAY HAIR, LOOK YOUNG, PRETTY

Sage Tea and Sulphur Darkens So Naturally That Nobody Can Tell.

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

COBOURG IS STILL AT TOP OF LEAGUE

Greybirds Fall Before the League Leaders By a Very Close Score.

LINDSAY, June 1.—(Special to the Examiner)—Greybirds as a result of errors, poor coaching and bad judgment handed Cobourg a C.O.B.L. fixture yesterday by a score of 4 to 3. The Birds led 3 to 1 to the sixth frame when Alan walked two, Butlers two bagger scored both and McMahon's wild throw from right field enabled Butler to cross the plat. Petes Beaten by 4 to 2 In Game With Belleville Poor Fielding and Inability to Produce the Necessary Hits With Men on the Sacks Cost Them the Decision.

Johnston Had Homer.

HE Petes bunched their hits at Belleville yesterday, and could not bunch their errors but as a result the Grand Trunks tucked the game into bat bag with a 4 to 2 score, after a battle that was always exciting. Had only earned runs been counted the teams might have been playing until dark, for one counter on each side was clean, Johnston earning one for the Petes by a mighty wallop to left centre on which he easily made the circuit, while Belleville's one merited run was scored on a hit by pitcher, an infield out and a timely single. All the other scores were gifts.

The Solomon crew had a bad day in the field with a total of eight misplays, several of which were costly. They tucked three errors into the first innings and presented the Goyerless Trunks with two cheap runs, and after getting back on even terms, handed the winners another easy one in the sixth. On top of their defensive weakness the Petes also fell down in their attack, the needed hits not being forthcoming when the stage was all set for a clean-up. Altogether it was a poor afternoon for the visitors and tough going for Heckman, who was handicapped all the way by indifferent support, but who worked his head off to bring home the bacon. He fanned thirteen of the Grand Trunks, kept their seven hits, some of which were scratchy, well scattered, and with any help should have turned in a win.

Belleville trotted out their southpaw Indian twirler, Williams, a left-hander with a picturesque motion and a barrel of stuff. Like Goyer, the new Belleville portsider was especially effective in the pinches, whiffing fourteen of the Petes.

It was an exciting if not a well played engagement, the closeness of the score and the number of men who got on the runways keeping the interest at fever heat. It was also noteworthy for the number of casualties. Harry Mills was hurt sliding into the plate in the third and had to retire, Holyman got hit with a pitched ball and finished the game on one leg, and Weir, the Belleville shortstop, was knocked out by a collision with Left Fielder Hagerman.

Yesterday was the first home game of the season for Belleville, and a big crowd turned out to see the season ushered in. There were the usual ceremonies, with Mayor Chas. Hanna tossing over the first ball.

Belleville got a cheap pair in the first. Casey, first up, walked. Heckman caught him off the initial sack, but in the chase between bases Heckman dropped the ball and Casey got back to first. Meagher singled to right, Johnston's leap at the liner failing to stop the drive. Harry Mills fanned. Billy Mills lifted a fly to centre field and Hatrick muffed, filling the bases. With the infield in, Weir's pop fly back of short scored Casey. Holyman's throw to get Meagher at third was low and the runner was safe. He scored the next moment while Johnston was tossing out Ross. Hagerman fanned for the third out.

The Petes got one back in the third. With two out, Soden singled to centre. On a wild pitch, which Mills blocked, but could not hold, Soden broke for second, and when Mills threw to centre field in an effort to stop him, Soden came all the way home.

Johnston made it fifty-fifty when he led off in the fourth with a clean home run to deep left centre. Swanston was safe on Weir's fumble. Heckman fanned. Hatrick sacrificed Swanston to second but Collins missed three.

The Petes had a great chance in the fifth. Dugan started by beating out a slow roller, and Holyman was hit. Soden fanned. Dugan and Holyman pulled off a double steal. Shaughnessy rolled to Williams, who caught Dugan between third and home. Johnston also hit to Williams and Holyman was caught at the plate.

Belleville took the lead in the sixth. Holyman lost Ketcheson's roller to start with, and W. Mills singled to right, Ketcheson going to third when Hatrick fumbled the roller. Mills started to steal second, but Swanston's perfect throw nailed him. Johnston's return to the plate, however, was low, and Ketcheson scored. Weir struck out. Ross doubled down the right field line. Hagerman flied to left centre, Soden making a nice catch.

In the seventh, with two out, Soden doubled to right centre and went to third on a wild pitch. Shaughnessy drew a pass and stole second, but Johnston struck out.

The eighth saw another good chance wasted. With one out, Heckman singled over second and advanced on a wild pitch. Collins singled past third and stole second, but Dugan's tap to Ketcheson retired the side.

Belleville got their last run in their half of the eighth. Billy Mills was hit to start with, and advanced to second while Collins was throwing Weir out. Ross singled past short, scoring Mills. Hagerman and Williams fanned.

The Petes had still a chance in the ninth. With one down, Soden lifted a fly to short left that went for two bases when Hagerman and Weir collided. Shaughnessy struck out. Johnston slashed a hot one at third which Ketcheson dived for, getting Soden going into third for the third out.

Diamond Dust

* * *

Bowmanville has a good team this year, and the locals will have to get right down to work. However, that is what they have been doing right along, so there is not much need to worry.

* * *

We have not heard any of the fans speaking favourably of the action taken by the C.G.E. powers that be in the Rose case.

* * *

Ruth got his second home run on Wednesday afternoon. At this time last year he had fifteen homers to his credit.

* * *

Toronto seems to be headed in the wrong direction again.

* * *

Al fanned thirteen yesterday which wasn't so bad at all.

* * *

"Shiner" Johnson banged out a homer while Lawrence Soden came across with two doubles and a single.

* * *

Sandy Lockington's proteges are looking up and Bowmanville is coming here Saturday looking for another trimming.

* * *

Huff of the "Y" nine has been signed by the Lakeviews.

* * *

The Adanacs and Lakeviews will clash on June 8.

The Lakeviews got trimmed by the Maple Leafs last night. The Maple Leaf youngsters are coming along pretty well so far.

* * *

Cobourg took a fall out of Lindsay yesterday. That leaves the Lakeshore team still in the lead of the Central League.

* * *

It seems that even Oshawa can trim Leaside.

Y TIGERS WIN ON DE LAVAL DEFAULT.

The Y Tigers won by default last evening from the DeLaval team of the Girls' Playground Ball League. The latter team failed to put in an appearance at the field so an exhibition game was arranged between the Tigers and the junior P.C.I. team. The Y girls were the winners but only after a great battle on the part of the younger players. Helen Brown and Edith Killaly who did the pitching and catching for the P.C.I. nine showed up exceptionally well.

IF THIS PLAY COMES UP

If a fair hit ball strikes the person or clothing of the umpire on fair territory, the batsman is entitled to first base, provided no play has been made on the ball. No base runners can advance on such a play unless forced to make room for the batsman. If a play has been made on the ball, and it then hits the umpire, it is considered in play and runners advance at their peril.

C.G.E. TEAM WINS SEMI-FINAL GAME

Quakers Lose Fast Football Game at Riverside Park Last Evening By 1 to 0 Score.

The C.G.E. team met the Quaker Oats in the semi final series of the Peck Cup games last evening at Riverside Park and after one of the stiffest games of the season the electricans won by the only goal scored. The first half was brim full of good football both teams showing up well. Hard checking was in order with no easy passages for anything. The C.G.E. players were handicaped by the loss of Sharman for some time. No goals were scored in this half though there were plenty of missed chances.

In the second half Monk scored from outside the defence, the ball curving away from Griffin's reach. The Quakers kept pegging away and J. Willshaw got through for them only to shoot over when he had an open goal. The game finished with the C.G.E. attacking strongly. The players were:

C.G.E.—C. Griffin, Gamble, Parkinse, Williams, McMillan, Hurrle, Gatfield, Dyer, Monk and Sharman.

Quaker Oats—G. Griffin, Young, R. Wilshaw, Hepburn, Cliark, Honour, Croft, Foster, Russell, J. Willshaw and Gardner.

TOBIN SUSPENDED FOR ARGUMENT.

ST. LOUIS, June 1 (Canadian Press).—Right Fielder Tobin, of the St. Louis Americans, was given notice of an indefinite suspension yesterday afternoon by Umpire "Brick" Owens, as a result of an altercation during Tuesday's game with the Detroit Tigers.

Pitcher Shocker, who was ordered out of the game with Tobin, was not mentioned by Owens. Whether the notice of suspension came from B. B. Johnson, League president, was unknown here.

TEAM SUSPENDED.

WINNIPEG, June 1 (Canadian Press). — Members of the Brandon Grays Amateur Baseball team have been suspended by the registration committee of the Manitoba branch of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, on account of their competing against the Pembina, N.D., team, which has professional athletes in its line-up.

Warning is issued by the local amateur body that any players competing against the Greys will be suspended.

GIRLS' GAMES.

A LITTLE TROUBLE OVER THE SALARY.

Mack and Ed. Rommel Have Settled Their Little Disagreement and All Is Serene.

Baseball abounds in unusual situations on and off the ball field.

The case of Pitcher Ed. Rommmel of the Athletics bears this statement out.

Last winter Rommell and Connie Mack disagreed over salary. Rommel was of the opinion that he was worth much more than Mack offered.

"I am through pitching major league ball for minor league salary" is the way Rommel put it. "I will never play ball for Mack again.

Connie Mack, who is always there with the retort courteous, came back with this one:

"If Rommel has been pitching major league ball since he joined the Athletics, he has kept the matter a secret."

Then to end the argument Mack advised Rommel to take his salary grievance to Commissioner Landis. The judge politely refused to listen, saying that it was no affair of his.

Hommel finally decided to join the Mackmen. What salary he received no one knows.

However, there is no denying the fact that Rommell has pitched major league ball since the opening of the sesaon.

Rommel won six of his first seven starts and bids fair to have a big season.

"Rommel has been pitching the ball of which he is capable," says Connie. "He should win many a game for me."

All of which is very much different from the winter dialogue.

PORT HOPE WON AT BOWMANVILLE

Blaber Started on the Mound For the Home Team—Story of Game.

BOWMANVILLE, June 1.—(Special:)—This town had its first taste of twilight baseball in Central Ontario League yesterday afternoon, when Port Hope team paid our local club a scheduled visit. The experiment proved entirely satisfatcory regarding attendance, but the result of the game was not to Bowmanville followers' liking, which ended 7 to 4 in Port Hope's favor. Blaber started on the mound for Bowmanville, but was retired in the third innings after two runs had been scored in the second and three more in the third. Minogaud finished the game, striking out 9 men and only allowing two hits, which netted 2 runs in the fifth innings. In the seventh innings he had the unique record of striking out the side with the delivery of only nine balls to batsmen. Bowmanville got its four runs in the third by a batting feast, in which they faced Deer. With the exception of this innings, Deer kept the hits scattered, and in the ninth retired the side with three strike-outs and two men on second and third. The score:

Bowmanville	004 000 000	4	10 3
Port Hope	023 020 000	7	7 2

POWERFULL TEEGRAPH TRANSMITTING SET

By R. L. DUNCAN,
Director, Radio Institute of America.

Here is a hook-up for a telegraph transmitting set using two 5-watt power tubes:

No. 1—Oscillation transformer which consists of 24 turns of nickel-plated copper strip wire, size .06 by three-eighths inches, supplied with clips for accurate adjustment of wave length. The size of this bit of apparatus is 7½ inches in height, 9½ inches long and 6¼ inches wide.

No. 2—Series condenser of .001 microfarads capacity for control of wave length.

No. 3—Antenna ammeter with scale reading from 0 to 2.5 placed in ground lead. This is used to measure the output or radiation.

No. 4—Grid leak, transmitting key and grid condenser. The grid leak should have a resistance of approximately 5,000 ohms. While the sending key may be one of the ordinary kind, it is preferable that it be one especially made for C. W. transmission with one-eighth-inch interchangeable, sterling silver contact points. The grid condenser should have .002 microfarads capacity rated at 3,000 volts.

No. 5—Power tubes rated at five watts each.

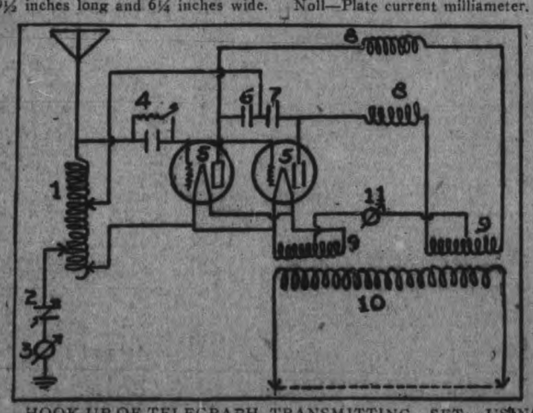
Nos. 6 and 7—Radio frequency bypass fixed condensers of .002 microfarads capacity rated at 3,000 volts.

No. 8—Radio frequency choke coils with inductance of 0.5 millhenry, consisting of about 90 turns of No. 30 insulated wire wound on tube 2¼ inches in diameter and 2½ inches long.

No. 9—Secondary windings of power transformer.

No. 10—Primary windings of power transformer.

Noll—Plate current milliameter.



HOOK-UP OF TELEGRAPH TRANSMITTING SET, USING TWO 5-WATT POWER TUBES.

The power transformer should be one with a double secondary. The plate windings should have a 175-watt output, and 1,100 volts between outside wires.

The filament winding should have an output of 75 watts, 7.5 volts. The primary of the transformer should be supplied with 102.5 to 115 volts A. C. at 50 to 60 cycles.

A transmitter using two 5-watt vacuum tubes will cover a considerable area, depending on the location, size and height of aerial.

The antenna should be of the cage type using counterpoise of flat-top "T" type two-wire aerial.

Amateurs using such a set have spanned the ocean by radio.

RADIO PRIMER

IMPEDANCE—Resistance offered by a wire to a current flowing through it, due to the pressure of an opposed electrical flow. This is irrespective of the actual resistance of the conductor in ohms. Impedance, instead of being a resistance, is the result of a reaction.

Capitol Entertainment

The Feature Picture Presentation Today, Friday and Saturday Will me "The Man From Home" New Paramount Picture, by Booth Tarkington.

What is regarded as one of the most popular novels written by Booth Tarkington is "The Man From Home" and now, having reached the screen as a George Fitzmaurice Paramount production, it will be on the silver-sheet of the Capitol Theatre, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Booth Tarkington is an American novelist who has created man famous fictional characters. One recalls with delight his famous Penrod, who will take his place in history along with Mark Twain's Huck and Tom. One also has found memories of his "The Gentleman From Indiana" and other equally memorable works, not the least among which is "The Man From Home."

James Kirkwood, popular leading man has the leading role, and others prominent in the cast are Anna Q. Nilsson, Norman Kerry, Dorothy Cumming and John Miltern. The adaptation was made by Ouida Bergere.

An extra added attraction "How to Grow Thin"! In every city, town and village in America you will find hundreds of men and women carrying far too much superfluous flesh. In fact, they are too fat. Many people grow fat from over-eating; others from lack of exercise. Dr. Anderson, of New York City, America's greatest specialist in reducing fat without the use of harmful drugs, has made a remarkable film showing you how you can get rid of that extra fat. Come and see Dr. Anderson reduce a lady 40 pounds in five months. See him remove wrinkles. You can do it if you see this picture, "How to Grow Thin."

AT THE ROYAL.

For to-night we have the justly celebrated exponent of western life, Dustin Farnum, in a five-reel romance of a mining town. The play opens in Placid, a small hamlet. George Kirby, a rich mining man living there temporarily, announces his wife's abduction by bandits who knocked him unconscious. His wife recovers her senses in a small shack where two men are fighting. Tom Curtis, an outlaw, enters and "drawing first" orders the men away. He offers his assistance and is recognized by Mrs. Kirby. When he learns her name he tells her he will detain her at the shack to spite her husband, who had once been his partner and swindled him. It was George Kirby who had been him an outlaw. He consents to guide her home and on the way is wounded by one of the bandits he had ordered from the shack. Mrs. Kirby drags Curtis back to the shack and nurses him for two weeks. A rescue party comes for her but she tells them Curtis had left the day before. Kirby thinks his wife has fallen in love with Curtis and hires a New York gunman to kill him. Strange to say the plot works out a happy culmination. In addition to this great Fox feature there is a two-reel Sunshine comedy called, "The Barnstormers" that is a cornucopia full of laughter and mirth. Then there is a Mutt and Jeff comedy called "A Tongue Sandwich." To cap the climax there is a reel of Fox Pictorial News.

AT THE REGENT.

"The Guttersnipe" is a story that calls for all the tricks of manner and personality that she has, a tale of New York's "Irish Ghetto." The star's role is that of Mazie O'Day, a shop girl with an ambition to buy a nine-ninety-eight dress and a longing for the romance that comes with fine dresses—in the stories published in "Sloppy Stories" magazine.

"Lord Lytton's Love," a serial of the dyed-in-the-wool, continued-in-our-next variety, gives her a vision of life among the elite of English society and also a vision of a handsome lord for a lover.

In a transport of dreams, the little shop girl is walking down a "Hogan's Alley" of her district when she sees a man closely resembling the hero of her dreams—Lord Lytton—being beaten up by a gang of rough necks because he has on dress clothes. Being Irish, lively and not at all bashful with her fists, Mazie wades in and helps the dress suit hero extricate himself.

He turns out to be a soda fountain clerk—but that's a small matter to Cupid. And Percival Wilde's story contains many unusual elements. Regent to-day.

TORONTO CRITIC PRAISES MUSIC OF LOCAL MAN

The Composition of Asa Huycke is Hailed as a Real Work of Art. May Be Put on in Toronto.

The following criticism of "The Message of the Bluebird" by Asa Huycke, which was presented for the first time on Tuesday evening, appeared yesterday in the Toronto Telegram and was written under the signature of "Yenmita" the nome de plume of one of Toronto's music critics. It pays great tribute to Mr. Huycke's musical talent and recognizes him as one of Canada's most gifted sons.

The rule — that a prophet is not without honor save amongst his own kinsfolk—has one exception at least in Peterboro. For Peterboro has a natural-born, nature-endowed musical creator in her midst, and she is honoring him and his work with splendid devotion.

Last night "The Message of the Bluebird', an entirely original light opera, written and composed by Mr. Asa Huycke, a Peterboro-born composer, was performed in the Grand Opera House of that city. And we cannot say less than that Mr. Huycke merits all the honor his native city can offer him, and that Peterboro is worthy her talented son.

For the work abounds in all that goes to make a successful light opera. The story is frankly natural and well lit by unforced humor There are never-lacking arrestive incident and dramatic movement. The dressing is beautiful and the dancing always graceful. And the music never once steps down from a level wherein original melody, insinuating rhythm, and rich ingenious—and at times gorgeous—harmonies are the established standard.

The Story

The composer is responsible for the story and the lyrics, as well as the music. The story is elemental in its appeal to the emotions. Its incidentals are delightfully pertinent, though of course impossible.

The beautiful daughter of an operatic impressario of the mild and mellow kind is summering in Switzerland. Her pastime is pursuit of the real lover. The lover designed for her by her father is a typical comic count. A Swiss shepherd boy with a voice, a temperament, and dreams of a career, arrests her butterfly fancy. But he is already a lover whose lass is a sweet mountain-bred songstress. The designing heiress persuades him to come out into the great world and seek his career. Her father would place him. But he must be without encumberance. His loved one must be forgotten, or she must wait—which in career hunting is much the same thing. It is the parting of the ways, and career wins. He vows to be faithful, which he is.

The ship that takes them away is captained and officered by original mortals ,and has aboard also passengers equally oriignal. Unlimited fun under such circumstances is of course inevitable.

The shepherd boy finds fame, but his heart is always sore, and he forsakes all and returns to his mountainous home. Here all is set straight and everyone is happy ever-after.

The Music

Around this story and running intimately throughout every phase of it, the composer has scored some extraordinarily beautiful music There are at least half a dozen songs that are in themselves little treasures of rich charm. Not a phrase but is singable, melodious and wedded irrevocably to the healthy sentiments they enshrine. The composer never shuns a familiar cadence because it is familiar. He has genius enough to know that the most enduring things in the world, and the most beautiful are the simplest. His harmonies, in the approach to and the treatment and resolution of discords, are modern, save that they are never academically nasty and irritating.

His counterpoint is free, not from the liberty that is above law, but from sheer naturalness. He simply cannot help being melodious. And, heaven be thanked, he can infuse variety in his rhythmic developments without resort to jazz. His concerted numbers are just as clear and unmuddled as his melodies. There is a septette in the opera that is grand opera without the individual vocal competition that characterizes that class of work.

A Triumph of Co-Operation

The production of "The Message of the Bluebird" was a triumph of loyal, enthusiastic co-operation The composer has been working for three years on the opera. His music master, Mr. J. H. Renwick, who was also musical director of the performance, has been responsible for much of the arrangement inseparable from an effort of this sort. Mrs. A.A. Perrin did all the staging. Mr. W. F. Leader, orchestral director, did the orchestrations. And the singers and actors, from the least to the greatest, have diligently, whole-heartedly and with never a "let up" in long continued earnest rehearsals, united in bringing the work to the success it won last night. For that it was a success there can be no doubt. The spontaneity and heartiness of the audience in its continuous expression of delight and approval were good to mark. With such talent behind the footlights and such appreciation before the foothights as was in evidence, it is not surprising that Peterboro can boast to-day of having a native-born music maker on its roll of citizens.

Why Not Here

There is always a "next step" in these things; and our next step is to have "The message of the Bluebird" performed in Toronto. Peterboro has done splendidly, but Toronto has opportunities that are denied our lesser Canadian city. Why should not our own "Savoyards" not produce "The Message of the Bluebird' in Toronto next season? But in such case we would suggest that Mrs. M. A. Park in her role as "Cleo" and Mrs. A. A. Perrin as "Marion" be invited to cooperate, for more finished and delightful artists in their creations it would be impossible to desire.

Here, then, we have a real light opera, "made in Canada" throughout. Let us finish with a blunt commonplace question: "What are we going to do about it?"

HEART WOULD BEAT LIKE A TRIP HAMMER

Heart trouble has of late years become very prevalent. Sometimes a pain catches you in the region of the heart, now and then your heart skips beats, palpitates, throbs, or beats with such rapidity and violence you think it is going to burst.

You have weak and dizzy spells, sinking sensations, are nervous irritable and depressed, and if you attempt to walk up stairs or any distance you get all out of breath.

We know of no remedy that will do so much to make the heart regain strength and vigor, regulate its beat and restore it to a healthy and normal condition as will

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS.

Mrs. Chadwick, Delhi, Ont., writes, "I had palpitation of the heart, and the least exercise such as going upstairs or up a hill, my heart would beat like a trip hammer and at times I was dizzy-headed and had a sinking sensation as if my time were near.

A friend suggested I try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I procured three boxes and by the time the first one was used I began to improve. In all I took six boxes, and now, although in my 66th year I feel like a young girl; no dizziness or heart-thumping and can walk miles without fatigue. At time of sickness I weighed 120 pounds, now I weigh 150."

ANOTHER GAME FOR THE LEAFS

McCall's Triple With Three on Gave Midget Team Early Lead.

Maple Leafs won their second straight game in the juvenile series by defeating Lakeviews at King Edward school grounds last evening by the score of 7 to 2. It was a battle by southpaws. Young, who started for Lakeviews, was wild, and with three on in the first, McCall hit for three bases, giving his team three runs. Two more runs were counted before the side was retired. Maple Leafs tallied in the second and third and were then halted by Whitehouse, who had relieved Young.

Bradley twirled a steady game for the Leafs, and his team mates gave him good support. Lakeviews got their brace of runs after two were gone in the fifth. Score by innings:

Lakeviews	0000200—2
Maple Leafs	511000x—7

PETES HAVE TO WIN SATURDAY

Game With Bowmanville Must Be Captured If the Homesters Are to Remain in the First Division.

BIG CROWD LIKELY.

The dropping of yesterday's game in Belleville makes it imperative for the Petes to win their game with Bowmanville at Riverside Park on Saturday and increases the interest in Saturday's battle. Bowmanville, after losing three games, are out to grab their first win and the Petes will have to be in good form to hold off the new members of the Central League. A loss for Peterborough would send them down into the second division and they are determined to win back their lost percentage by beating Bowmanville. The game is called for 3 o'clock and there will be a big crowd out to see the battle. As a result of yesterday's games, Cobourg is still further out in front in the League race, and Manager Tyson's boys are the only undefeated club in the League. By winning yesterday, Belleville and Port Hope both passed Peterborough and Lindsay and are tied for second, while Oshawa climbed up even with the Greybirds and the Solomon crew. Bowmanville remained on the bottom and the Leaside crew took another slant towards the bottom. The race is so close, however, that anything is bound to happen, and Saturday's games will provide another shake-up.

The standing:

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Cobourg	3	0	1000
Belleville	2	1	.667
Port Hope	2	1	.667
Peterborough	2	2	.500
Lindsay	2	2	.500
Oshawa	2	2	.500
Leaside	1	3	.250
Bowmanville	0	3	.000

Oshawa at Cobourg.

Lacrosse

In the juvenile lacrosse league opening games yesterday evening, the Athletics won from Riversides at King Edward Park by 3 goals to 0, and at the Oval Strathconas defeated Crescents by the score of 6-3. R. M. Glover handled the south end game and Dr. Sutton officiated in Ashburnham.

Friday night's game in the senior league will be between Athletics and Crescents at King Edward Park.

A typographical error that entirely altered the meaning, occurred in connection with the obituary of the infant child of Michael Coss, 261 Murray street, in yesterday's issue. It stated that Mr. Coss had lost his life. As originally written the statement was that Mr. Coss had lost his wife a short time ago.

Parisiennes Spend Little, Dress Well

By MARIAN HALE.

Canadian women are no longer slaves to French fashions. Even France admits that.

French designers now are considering the personality and the individuality of Canadian women, and are designing for them quite different styles from what they formerly did when it was the general belief that Canadian women would stand for anything if it had a French label.

"French and Canadian women both express their temperament and their ideals in their dress—that is why they dress differently," explains Marcelle d'Arville, French actress.

* * *

"Canadian women are so vivacious and so—what you call 'snappy,'" she says, "that they seem to like best 'snappy clothes.' Their clothes are witty and clever as they are. They have the same dash and 'pep' their conversation has.

"French women always try to look picturesque and beautiful.

"French women give more time to the selection of their clothes than Canadians do. They cannot go out and purchase a wardrobe in a few hours. They usually have to give some little individual touch to a gown before it suits them.

"I have seen a Canadian girl go into a store and come out an hour later in a new blue serge suit, blouse and hat, and look as smart and dashing as if each piece had been especially made for her. French women could not do that.

"I believe the French women is much more economical than the Canadian. Because she has to be. Her dress allowance is rarely as large as that of the Canadian woman and few French women earn their own money.

* * *

"But French women keep up what clothes they have, and consequently seem to have plenty. The French woman always knows how to sew, and from her infancy she is taught to care for her clothes.

"If the collar on her gown is unsatisfactory she changes the line, but she does not discard the frock. She goes over a gown each time she wears it and if there are any beads loose, or if any lace is torn, she mends it immediately. Her gown is in perfect order before she puts it away.

"I have seen Canadian girls get out of a gown, throw it over a chair, let it crumple into a mass of wrinkles and stay that way until some other person rescued it. I have seen many of them discard frocks that needed only a few stitches and a little time to put into good condition.

"But you understand, I'm not criticizing the Canadian woman," Mlle. d'Arville explained. "I believe she could give lessons in smart dressing to every other woman in the world."

MIND QUIETED AFTER JURORS DINE IN HOME

Real Estate Dealer Brooded Over the Slaying of a Farmer in Self-Defence.

FEELS BETTER NOW.

NEW YORK, June 2. — Gaetano Amadeo, wealthy Bronx real estate dealer, went to the farm of Arturo Carfiro to foreclose a $4,200 mortgage. Carfiro approached Amadeo with a levelled shotgun. The real estate man drew a pistol and killed the farmer.

Amadeo was tried. The verdict was not guilty. Judge Francis D. Culkin, who presided at the trial, believed with the jury that Amadeo had acted in self-defence. The judge congratulated the 12 men on having reached the verdict so quickly.

Amadeo left the court jubilant. Days passed and he grew moody and taciturn. He brooded. He had taken a human life. He had been acquitted. But did this acquittal justify him in the eyes of his fellow-men? He asked his friends. They assured him that he had done no wrong. But he could not believe them—they were his friends, they were merely trying to ease his anguish. How could he be sure?

Finds the Answer.

Long nights of thinking brought the answer. If Albert Vitale, the attorney who had defended him, and the 12 men who had cleared him would come to his home and break bread with him, would sit at his table as his guests, then he would be rehabilitated in his own estimation. Hoping, fearing, he despatched the 13 invitations. If they would come it would be proof that they held no resentment toward him for they, of all men, knew the details of his act.

The night of the dinner came. The Amadeo home, 1334 Chisholm Street, was bright with lights. Amadeo sat tense and pale. The hands of the clock moved slowly toward the hour. The door bell rang, and, still hoping and fearing, Amadeo answered it himself.

Amadeo with his attorney and the 12 men who could have sent him to the electric chair, sat down to the table. Almost every topic save the one uppermost in Amadeo's mind was discussed. Throughout the meal he was pale and tense. And when the dinner was over Amadeo clutched his wife to him, crying, laughing. Now he goes about his business whistling and humming a Neapolitan street song.

Looks World in Face.

"I did not ask the jurors, 'Do you condemn me morally for taking a human life?'" said Amadeo. "I did not have to. I studied their faces just as they studied my face through that long, tedious trial. I found the answer.

"They held no resentment against me. If they had, they would have shunned me, but they met me as man to man. Now I can look the whole world in the face and no man can see blood on my hands."

Daughter Insisted Upon Full Penalty

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 2.—William Donovan, of Bloomingdale, Ind., convicted of wife murder, was put to death in the electric chair to-day. It was revealed that the State Pardon Board, in denying commutation of sentence, had been influenced by a letter to Governor McCray from Mabel Donovan, 17-year-old daughter of the condemned man.

"In behalf of mother," the letter said, "I want to say to you and the Board of Pardons I don't want this sentence changed."

The girl added that her father had shot "without cause" and that the "sentence given him is what he surely deserves."

Donovan shot his wife as she held their 2-year-old child in her arms. He then asserted the woman had shot herself.

FIXES SEX AND CAREER BABIES BEFORE BIRTH

New York Physician Says to Accomplish This It's Only Necessary to Concentrate.

A SIMPLE MATTER

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., June 2—A brief lecture on anatomy was delivered before the eleventh annual convention of the Allied Medical Associations of America by the four year-old son of Dr. Alzamon Ira Lucas of 342 West Fifty-sixth street New York City. The boy, standing on a chair, so that the 100 delegates to the convention from all parts of the country could see and hear him, pointed out, in response to questions from his father, every important bone in the body and described the function of the principal organs.

Dr. Lucas, who is the founder of vocational therapy and is a doctor of psychotherapy, besides being an ordained Baptist minister, told the convention that the sex of the boy and of the boy's sister, who also was present standing on a chair, had been predetermined a girl being the first choice of the parents and a boy the second. The girl, Marguerite Vivianne, was born March 9, 1916, and the boy, Alzamon 2d March 6, 1918.

Dr. Lucas told the doctors that it was a simple matter to determine the sex of an unborn babe and that it also was simple to select the vocation of the unborn infant. His boys vocation is philosophical and scientific and the girl's artistic and musical.

To guide the vocation of the unborn the parents must concentrate mind and heart upon it and also practice it to a certain extent. For instance if a musical career is selected, the mother should each day perform at different times upon some musical instrument, whether or not she is adept at it.

Types of vocations that can be selected include, said Dr. Lucas, agrarian, domestic, trades people, mechanical, business, professional, scientific, philosophical literary, artistic and musical.

Dr. Lucas declared that not only had the sex of his children been decided but that there were ninety-five other cases that had come under his direction, in each case a girl or a boy being born, according to the wishes of the parents. Dr. Lucas said he would go more fully into the pre-determination of sex later in the convention when a paper on the subject is read by Dr. David H. Reeder of La Porte, Ind.

The speaker told the importance of selecting a vocation for the unborn, because, he said, influences might be brought to the children in their early youth that would effect their vocation. It should be decided before the child was born, he said. He declares that it was well known that many blacksmiths should be dentists and that many dentists should be blacksmiths and that the proper vocation was of the greatest importance.

Dr. Frederick Dugdale of Boston, retiring President of the association in his annual address told of the progress of the association. The plat form for which the association stands, he said, was that it be non-sectarian and composed of graduates from medical schools. "Our tenets are free and untrammeled and our members are unfettered and can belong to and read and discuss association, club or society".

YOUNG PEOPLE THE PROMISE OF DOMINION

But, While a Pretty Good Set, Waste Their Time in Objectionable Reading.

TIMELY ADDRESS

ST. CATHARINES, June 2. — (Special to Examiner.) — Over 600 men and women sat down last night at the well laden tables in the Armouries at the banquet given by Hamilton Conference Laymen's Association. J. M. Denyes, of Milton, President, was in the chair, and the address of the evening was given by Rev. George A. Gullen, pastor of West Boulevard M. E. church, Detroit, who spoke on "The Promise of To-morrow." The promise of the nations and the church were the young people, Dr. Gullen said, and he deplored the fact that the young people of the present day are not receiving the religious instruction they should have. About 35 minutes on Sunday afternoon is all they get.

"If you can give sixty minutes a day in the home to a child's instruction in music, surely you can give that much time for religious instruction," declared Gullen with emphasis.

Gullen deplored the fact that young people of to-day, while a pretty good set all around, are capable of splendid development, waste their time in reading objectionable literature, and spend almost no time in reading religious matter. He feared for the nations when the reins of government must be handed over 20 years from now to those who know nothing about religion because they have received little or no instructions in it.

The Saddest Factor.

"The saddest thing about the young people is that they do not know God's work," said the speaker. He told a story of a minister who spoke to a young girl of sixteen or so, when he found her playing ragtime music. He asked her if she knew the Ten Commandments. She looked puzzled for a moment, and then said, "Well, just whistle a bar or two and I guess I'll get on to it."

ONE STEP FORWARD AND ONE BACKWARD

Is Agnes MacPhail's Opinion of Budget.

OTTAWA, June 2. Canadian Press. — The government that supports it is going to take its life in its hands, but the government not willing to take its life in its hands is probably not the best kind of government."

So Miss Agnes MacPhail pleaded for direct taxation in the House of Commons last night. Her speech, which created considerable interest, was brief and referred to the budget as one step forward and one step back. She attacked protection, with which the Liberal party was "riddled," regretted that Canadians had come "very near to dollar worship," and urged better rural credit system.

T. E. Church, Toronto, attacked the Progressives, and said that they had done nothing progressive yet. He proclaimed himself a Tory of the Tories.

FIVE TO BE SUMMONED FOR SPEEDING FROM DANCE.

Provincial Constable T. Y. Stratton made a clean-up on the Chemong Road speedsters last night and this morning five summons were signed by the Magistrate. On account of the dance at the Park the opportunities for picking off drivers who exceed the speed limit of 25 miles an hour were unusually good. According to the Provincial Officer, the fast drivers haven't raised the throttle one iota in spite of heavy fines, and unless they take their foot off the accelerator he will ask the Magistrate to make the fine the maximum in each case.

A Bride in Wedding Dress Stops Plea of Husband Slayer in Court

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., June 2.—Mike Benedetto, 24 years old, was led into the Supreme Court to be allowed for a second time to enter a plea of murder in the second degree for taking part in killing Santa Fama, when he was startled at seeing his bride of a year at the door attired in her bridal gown. Mike shuddered and paled. When Supreme Court Justice Tompkins asked him if he desired to change his plea Mike blurted out: "I am guilty, but I am not."

Mortimer J. O'Brien and Edward J. Quinn had arranged to enter the plea last week, but Mike backed down. It was expected that Mike was ready to go to prison, and his answer to the Court startled his lawyers and the Judge.

"This is the second time the defendant has made that statement," said Justice Tompkins. "I will entertain no further plea from him. He will have to stand trial. Take him back to the jail. I will not let him plead again."

When O'Brien was asked what had caused Mike to change his mind for a second time, he said he saw his wife, to whom he was married only a years ago, standing outside the court-room door attired in the white dress she wore when they were married. This was a signal to him that if he pleaded guilty and was sent to prison, she would divorce him and marry another man. She had told him before he must go to trial and fight for his liberty. We couldn't hold him to our arrangement to enter the plea, and he will now have to stand trial for murder in the first degree.

Mike's brother, Joe Benedetto, 25 years old, of Tarrytown Road, White Plains, and Anthony Martilito, 22 years old, of Port Chester, who recently pleaded guilty to taking part in the same murder, were sentenced to indeterminate sentences of from twenty years to life just before Mike was arraigned. The Benedetto brothers and Martilito confessed that they took part in killing Santa Fama in the cemetery road near the White Plains Fair Grounds because of a feud on February 19.

It was decided to try Mike Benedetto on the third Thursday in June.

The sale commemorates a new birth of the Oak Hall stores, which have now been established for half a century, during which time the doors have never been closed on a business day.

The new management have purchased the whole of the stocks of mens and boys' clothing and furnishings, at a low rate on the dollar, thus making it possible to give the public the advantages of special reduced prices.

Exceptional values are being offered, and the public are assured they will find everything as advertised. Every customer can rely on prompt and efficient service. Money will be refunded if goods are not satisfactory.

Alterations during the sale will be free of charge as usual. The Examiner wishes the new management the same successful record that has followed the Oak Hall business for the past half century.

SAW CHERRETTS LAST AT SOUTH END PARK GATE

MYSTERY DEEPENED

All doubt about the disappearance of Roy Cherrett was removed by the finding of his body this morning at the upper gate of the Peterborough lock, only a few feet from the place to which the mother's body floated last Monday morning. Today's revealing episode in this double tragedy which has distressed the Peterborough countryside and hung over the city like a pall since the first news was circulated on Monday has cleared up some phases of the mystery surrounding the death of a mother and son, who in life had been attached to each other by a love and affection that had been heightened by the previous death of the father and husband.

Of their movements last Sunday night it is reported that the mother expressed a wish to go out for a walk, calling on a friend. The son told his wife of their intentions, and said they would be back by eleven o'clock. It was about nine o'clock when they left the house. Searching enquiries have traced them down Aylmer Street to the entrance to King Edward Park, where they were last noticed.

Roy Cherrett's watch stopped at 10.12, indicating that a little more than an hour from the time he and his mother left home he was in the water, presumably near the road bridge above the lock. His body must have floated down last night into the position in which it was found this morning, for a diver searched that very part of the lock entrance yesterday.

Of what happened or was said, of what motives lead the mother and son to the water, no information has been suggested except rumors, and the police have intimated that some of these rumors are utterly false and unjust.

HIS BACK BROKEN BY WHEELS OF MANURE SPREADER.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., June 2.—A fatal accident occurred on the farm of Mr. Bert Finkle, in Sidney Township, the victim being Roy Marshall, aged 22 years, unmarried, whose father conducts a store at Chatterton, in Sidney. Marshall was in a field driving three horses attached to a manure spreader, and it is supposed the animals ran away and the wheels of the spreader passed over Marshall's body, breaking his back.

When discovered by Mr. Finkle, the victim was alive, but died before he could be taken to his home nearby. Dr. Boyce, coroner of this city, was called, but deemed an inquest unnecessary.

RADIO CONCERT TO-NIGHT WILL BE INTERESTING.

The radio concert which is being held at the G.W.V.A. Hall this evening, under the auspices of the Veterans' Association, promises to be an interesting affair. Arrangements have been made to hear from the stations at Pittsburgh, Newark, Schenectady and Detroit. A feature will be the attendance of the Peterborough Rangers Band, and a special and novel item on the programme will be the dances by thirteen-year-old Annie Logan, who just arrived in the city this morning from Scotland. The little lady will give a series of dances that include the Sailor's Hornpipe, Irish Jig, Sword Dance, the Highland Fling, and the Shean Trews. Admission is fixed at twenty-five cents.

VITAL STATISTICS FOR THE MONTH OF JANUARY

Considerable variation is manifested in the record of vital statistics for the month of May last year and the corresponding month this year. Cupid did pretty well in 1921 in this month, when twenty-two marriages were recorded at the City Hall. This year, there is a lamentable shrinkage in his activities, with only four couples united in the holy bonds of matrimony during the month. However, the Grim Reaper has surpassed last year's total for the month, which was twenty-seven, May for this year having gathered in forty-one of Peterborough's citizens to their last resting place. Births stand at about the same figure, fifty last year, forty-six during this May.

Dr. Ward graduated on May 26 as a member of the largest class of Dental Surgeons ever graduated in Canada, 142 students being presented for their degrees on that occasion.

HE LEFT CHARLIE AND SPOT TO PLAY HORSE

If any of Peterborough's respectable citizens had occasion to look from their windows in the early hours of this morning they might have seen a strange sight toiling slowly but manfully up the main street. An old wagon, piled high with bags and packages of divers sizes and shapes was the object which might have attracted their attention first, but betwen the shafts where a horse should have been there was a man straining forward with a mighty effort to take his burden to the top of the hill.

The vehicle, flanked on either side with other toilers and with two men laboring manfully at the rear, made its torturous way forward and up the slight incline of George street. If the spectators' curiosity was aroused to a sufficient pitch to follow the strange procession to its destination he would have found that it was but His Majesty's Mail arriving in town.

It appears that Charlie, the jehu of the ancient chariot that carries the weighty mails between the post office and the stations, had, as was his custom, disengaged his prancing steed from the conveyance to facilitate the loading and unloading of the mail bags. That same prancing steed it transpires, had until early last evening been enjoying the ease and comfort of pasture life about five miles out in the country. Evidently tiring of waiting for Charlie and Spot to arrange the load she decided to go back to the country and promptly started in that direction. As far as could be learned this morning she was still going, for she has not been seen since.

Charlie and Spot managed by a mighty effort to bring the loaded vehicle as far as King street, but there a halt was called and an S.O.S. sent to the Post Office for more aid. Hence Bill was left in charge and the remainder of the force turning out en masse and went to the rescue of the stranded wagon. Here the difficulty was solved by putting Hod between the shafts while the rest of the gang pushed with a will so the Royal Mail reached its destination.

PRESENT BILL TO GRAND JURY

MONTREAL, June 2.—(Canadian Press).—The bill of indictment against D. C. Macarow, former manager of the defunct Merchants' Bank, charging him with having wilfully made a false return of the bank's financial standing to the Government has been completed and is now ready for presentation to the grand jury.

OVERWHELMING TRAGEDY TO THE CHERRETT HOME

Made Clear When Body of Roy Found in the Same Spot as That of His Mother.

FULLY CLOTHED

That an overwhelming tragedy occurred in the Cherrett family was made clear to-day when the body of Roy Cherrett, 23 years of age, who has been missing since Sunday night, was found at 6.30 this morning at the lower locks, at practically the same spot as the mother, and in the same position.

Lockmaster W. F. Edwards found the body. When removing the signal lights from the north gate, the lockmaster noticed the body floating in the water. He realized immediately that the worst fears of the young man's friends were confirmed. The body was floating upright, the head protruding above the surface of the water through the scum that clings heavily to the water every morning. While the mother was found at the western side, the son's body was floating at the opposite side of the reach.

Down River at Night.

The body evidently floated down the river during the night. Fred Kiff, diver for the Trent Canal, searched for the body through the upper reach yesterday. The 24 feet of water, he told the lockmaster, was as clear as glass and there was no possibility of him missing it had it been thereabouts. The lockmaster stated that the body showed evidence of having been in the water at least five days and in his opinion would shortly have assumed a horizontal position.

Body Fully Clothed.

He was fully clothed, evidently in his Sunday suit, and wore shoes. Lockmaster Edwards identified Cherrett by a signet ring he wore on his right hand, engraved with the letters 'R.C.' The police were immediately notified and Sergeant Deannard and P. C. Carey arrived immediately with the undertaker. Lockmaster Edwards said he did not touch the body until they arrived, when by their united efforts it was removed and taken to Comstock's Undertaking Parlours.

Many Rumors.

After the body of the mother was found and the search for the son started, the police and Examiner Office was besieged by calls for news. Rumors were constantly in circulation that the young man had been found. This morning the news of the finding of the body was soon in circulation and hundreds of calls were received by the police for confirmation. The police were informed over the telephone that the news had been broken to Mrs. Roy Cherrett early this morning.

Inquest This Evening.

An inquest in connection with the death of Roy Cherrett will be opened by Coroner Dr. T. N. Greer at Comstock's Undertaking Parlours at 4 p.m. to-day. The body will be viewed and an adjournment made. A post mortem examination of the body of Mrs. Cherrett was ordered by Coroner Dr. Greer to be performed by Dr. H. M. Yelland and Dr. A. W. McPherson, and their report will be brought in at the resumed inquest Thursday night, June 8th. Mrs. Cherrett was buried in Little Lake cemetery Wednesday afternoon.

Rev. F. E. Malott, of Trinity Methodist church, of which Roy Cherrett was a member, was asked early this morning to convey the sad news of the finding of the body to Mrs. Roy Cherrett, and went to the family residence, 224 Rubidge street, at 8.30 this morning. Mrs. Cherrett had, however, received word that her husband's body had been found.

Frills, Flutings, Flounces Pass Into Discard

Where are the laces, frills, flutings and flounces of yesteryear Gone, evidently, with the well-known snowstorms of the same period. At any rate, they no longer makes their homes in the fashionable woman's wardrobe.

Clothes are severe affairs. They may be trimmed, but never with lace and ruffles. Even lace-edged handkerchiefs are difficult to find. As for underwear—a Spartan simplicity prevails in its cut an trimming.

Tailored underwear is the thing. If you have an irrepressibly giddy soul you may make it of bright colored crepe or silk, or even tissue gingham, this season—but that's as far as fashion will allow you to be frivolous.

All the colors you like—but not a single frothy, frilly, lacy ruffle, if you value your fashionable reputation!

RADIO ORGANIZATION

An organization without officers or any form of government is being conducted today by nearly all licensed radio amateurs of the United States.

It has no name. It has never constituted as a body. It has no constitution or by-laws. No meetings.

Yet it includes in its membership nearly every licensed radio amateur in the country.

This "organization" was in existence for some time before the war, and has been spreading rapidly since the armistice. Any licensed operator may join it. There is no expense. No dues.

The only way the members keep in touch with one another is by means of a post card system. Each amateur has his own post card on which is printed his name and address, and, in large type, his station call code. Besides this, the amateur has a description of his own sending and receiving set and blank spaces for remarks and information for the fellow member to whom he sends his card.

Operation

Station 8AUX at Cleveland, O., is transmitting a message on his allotted short wave length of not more than 200 meters, to station 2HK at Oklahoma City. Station 4FD, at Midbille, Ga., happens to be tuned to exactly the same wave length and gets the signals between 8AUX and 5HK.

Every amateur is eager to learn of the greatest distance and new areas at which his own set can be heard. In return, he is just as eager to let another amateur know of any distant messages he has succeeded in intercepting.

Therefore 4FD fills out two cards, explaining the conditions under which he happened to receive the signals of 8AUX and 5HK, and sends one to each of his fellow members. Thus, 8AUX and 5HK are glad to learn their stations were heard as far off as Midville, Ga.

This national interchange of cards is the only method amateurs have to learn how far their messages are heard or how efficient their sets are.

A. R. R. L. Supervision

Along the same plans, when one station cannot get another it happens to be calling, some intermediate station intercepts the message and passes it on.

The federal government, however, has recognized that some sort of supervision would have to be maintained over the relay of such messages. This power of supervision it has turned over to the American Radio Relay League, an organization composed of a large part of the licensed amateurs in the country.

Perhaps half, or even more, of the licensed amateurs are not members of this duly constituted organization. It is these, in addition to the A. R. R. L. members, who make up the larte national organization without a name or constitution.

POWER FARMING PROGRESS.

(By Jos. J. Duffus).

The radical reduction in the price of Fordson tractors is having a marked effect on farming, and although on the majority of farms horses still form the source of power, the most progressive farmers in every district are doing the heavier work with Fordson tractors.

With the recent tremendous cut in the prime cost of automotive equipment the motorizing of agriculture has been given added impetus. When a farmer finds that he can buy a tractor capable of performing the work of four to six horses and two men for $470 he naturally begins to question whether the older methods are giving him the returns they should. When he finds further that the use of a tractor speeds up his work, is the one means of enabling him to have a clean farm, allows him to take advantage of seasonable opportunities and get his fall wheat in before the man with horses has done more than a few acres of stubble plowing and that the use of the tractor to run his belt-driven machines makes him independent, it is not long before he pins his faith entirely to power farming.

Though custom dies hard and sentiment is one of the strongest ties with the past, there is little doubt that the low price and increased efficiency of Ford automobiles, trucks and tractors are fast putting Dobbin in a secondary place where agriculture is concerned.

It is true that the breeders of heavy draft horses are making strenuous effort to stave off what they think is for them the evil day, but in any case, horse-breeding hardly interests the average farmer. Horse-breeding is an art in itself and its products such as high-class Clydesdales, Percherons, and other good breeds are not cheap by any manner of means, and the risk and worry involved is stupendous.

No! Power farming has come to stay.

PRICE THREE CENTS — PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, JUNE 2, 1922 — PRICE THREE CENTS

MANY CHANGES ARE PROPOSED IN IMMIGRATION ACT

E. J. McMurray Expresses Fear That the Bill Will Be Killed in the Senate.

SPECIAL REPORT.

OTTAWA, June 2.—(By Canadian Press.)—"This bill will be defeated in the Senate because of the man who introduced it."

This statement was made yesterday by E. J. McMurray, member for North Winnipeg, in the special committee which was considering the Woodsworth bill to amend the Immigration Act.

An extended discussion took place on the bill and there was a general opinion in favour of a revision of the Immigration Act as a whole. In particular objection was expressed by various members to the provison of the Act of 1919 which took away in certain cases, the right of appeal to the courts from British subjects who had not obtained domicile in Canada. There were also opinions generally expressed against the provision providing for procedings on "come on repute" or "suspicion", and against the presumption, erected by the act of 1919 that a person who belonged to an illegal association at any time after May 4th, 1910, was still a member.

In the end the committee decided to ask the House for authority to make a special report on the bill, especially with a view to recommending a general revision of the Immigration Act. The bill as introduced was agreed to be insufficient to make the necessary amendments.

"I do not have much sympathy with laws which penalize a man for expressing opinions, good or bad," said Hon. A. B. Hudson, when the Woodsworth bill on sedition was called up.

If sedition is to be talked,' he added, "it is better that it should be talked openly."

L. H. Martell of Harts moved to kill the bill, but on request of Mr. Hudson for further time to study the measure, it was laid over and the committee adjourned.

BANKERS' COMMITTEE HAS BEEN ADJOURNED

PARIS, June 2. — (Canadian Press.) —The Bankers' committee, which is considering the project of a Germany international loan, after taking official cognizance yesterday of the approval given by the Reparations Commission to the German reply to the Commission's ultimatum, adjourned until Wednesday, June 7, for the Whitsuntide holidays.

No communique was issued by the Bankers, and their deliberations continue to be surrounded by the deepest secrecy, but it is understood that they consider the situation favorable for going ahead with the plans for the loan. They have appointed a sub-committee of three, one of the members of which is reported to be J. P. Morgan, to draw up a plan for a loan, for presentation to the full committee when it reconvenes next week.

CHANGES IN O. T. A. PASS SECOND READING IN HOUSE

Attorney-General Raney Meets Opposition in His Discussion of the Temperance Act.

LENNOX CHARGES.

TORONTO, June 2. Canadian Press. — The Ontario Temperance Act featured another lively sitting of the Legislature yesterday afternoon when Attorney-General Raney discussed the charges launched by Colonel Lennox. The report of the Public Accounts Committee in connection with these charges had not yet been received by the House, and Mr. Raney discussed them in moving the second reading of the Act to prevent liquor being carried on a public highway. He said that these charges had not been substantiated, and implied that they were along the line forecasted by the Liberty League when it announced in a circular that it planned to attack the Ontario Temperance Act in the provincial legislature. He started to take up the Conservative leader's speeches when points of order were raised by W. F. Nickle, (Kingston), and H. P. Hill, (West Ottawa) that Mr. Raney was not within the rules of the House in carrying on such a discussion on a second reading of the bill. After many exciting passages, and several rulings by Speaker Parliament insisting that the mover must stick to the principle of the bill he is supporting, the Attorney-General threatened to challenge this ruling. It was smoothed out however and the second reading passed. The second reading of amendments to the O.T.A. which inflict penalties for the use of false labels, additional punishment for the sale of "swamp" whiskey, additional punishment for O.T.A. enforcement officers who themselves break the act, and lessening the penalty for a man caught with a bottle in a public place, was passed without opposition.

The Act incorporating the Ontario Co-operative Dairy Products Limited, passed the House in committee. Hon. Manning Doherty explained that it was planned that the company deal with grading and marketing butter and cheese. It was not intended to manufacture dairy products in competition with the small factories. The bill was amended to make this clear.

Lennox Charges.

The charges made by Col. Lennox (North York), were then taken up one by one. These took the form, Mr. Raney said, of a blanket charge that the Attorney-General knowingly had employed thugs and criminals to enforce the O.T.A. followed by a series of definite charges to support the blanket charge. He read the various claims of Mr. Lennox that employee after employee engaged in the enforcement of the O.T.A. had been convicted of serious cries and many of them had continued to be employed by the Attorney-General. Comparing the charges by Mr. Lennox with what was brought about in the evidence given before the Public Accounts Committee, Mr. Raney said, showed that not one had supported the blanket charge, many of them were exaggerated or partialy untrue and the remainder had no application to the charge.

When he began dealing with the list of charges Mr. Ferguson suggested that this whole thing would be discussed when the report of the Private Bills Committee was presented to the House, and it would be saving time for the Attorney-General to have postponed his remarks until then. However the Conservative leader said he did not propose to press his objection.

"I move the second reading of the bill," Mr. Raney concluded and sat down. Several members shouted 'carried,' and all the trouble was over.

It had been suggested by the Attorney General that there might not be another time to discuss the findings of the Public Accounts Committee and Major Tolmie said if such were so provision should be made to alow Mr. Raney to conclude his address. Colonel Lennox, who entered House a few minutes before, assured the members that there would be plenty of time to discuss it. "I propose to discuss it."

TRADE WITH U.S. SHOWS DECREASE.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—(Canadian Press.)—There was a big decrease in the trade of the United States with Canada during the month of April as compared with the same month last year. This was disclosed by the trade reports issued yesterday by the department of commerce.

United States exports to Canada amounted to $43,000,000 against $49,000,000 for last year, while imports were $21,000,000 against $31,000,000.

DERAILED CAR BLOCKED ROAD

Minor Mishap on G.T.R. Between Birdsall's and Hastings on Thursday Night.

Partial derailment east of Birdsall's station of a freight car near the end of a grain train bound from Midland to Belleville blocked the road at 6 p.m., Thursday evening, delaying for more than four hours the arrival of the passenger train from Belleville, due here at 8 p.m. The front wheels of the car, which was loaded with about 40 tons of wheat, bumped along and crunched the ties for a distance of about 400 yards before shooting off at a tangent just as the train was being brought to a stop. The rear truck of that car clung to the rails as did the rest of the train to the astonishment of those who observed the course of its passage over the ties.

The heavy train was coasting down the incline from Birdsall's to Hastings, and was just starting the curve to the route paralleling the river when the accident happened. It was stated that the trouble wasn't noticed or felt by the engine crew until the fireman happened to look back and saw the dust that was raised by the ramageous truck. The wheels on the inside of the curve had actually reached the outside of the ties and dropped off, plowing into the gravel roadbed for a short distance before its flight was cut short. The fact that the coupling held and that none of the other cars were dragged off the rails indicates that the front end of the fractious car did not get far from the track. The forward part of the train, comprising all but nine or ten cars and the caboose proceeded to Hastings and returned, but the first aid efforts with 'jacks' failed to get the wheels of the stranded freight car back on the rails. In the meantime section crews in the district were summoned to the scene and began the tedious task of rebuilding the road, replacing the chewed-up ties and relaying the rails.

The passenger train from Belleville was held at Hastings until 11 o'clock, and three quarters of an hour later it was sent on up the line to the obstruction, and the passengers were transferred at midnight to a special train from Peterboro. The crews and other employees of the G.T.R. did all they could for the comfort of the passengers.

NO BREACH OF THE TREATY TO BE PERMITTED

President Poincare Says France Will Act Alone If Germany Does Not Keep the Treaty.

TO SECURE PEACE.

PARIS, June 2. — (Canadian Press.)—France's desire to maintain an accord with the Allies is very earnest, but France cannot sacrifice her rights and will act alone in case of flagrant violation of the Versailles Treaty, Premier Poincare declared in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday afternoon in the course of his exposition of the Government's foreign policy. This was greeted with great applause by the members, excepting the Socialists and Communists, with some radicals, about 120 deputies in all dissenting.

France wants nothing but the execution of the Versailles Treaty and desires resumption of normal relations with Germany, but cannot overlook the ferment of hatred against France in Germany added the Premier. He gave a pledge that France would not attend a political conference at The Hague, but said the Government was willing to assist the Allies, neutrals and former enemies by sending French experts to the conference on June 15.

The reconstruction of Europe was impossible without the United States, in the opinion of M. Poincare, and the Genoa Conference was a failure politically, but a success from the financial and economic viewpoint.

"Germany only understands the argument of force," said the Premier in conclusion. "The best way to secure peace is to keep up our vigilance and strength."

Nine Bursaries, One For Each Province, Will Be Offered Annually For Eighteen Years.

BY I.O.D.E.

VANCOUVER, June 2. Canadian Press. — In memory of the men and women who gave their lives in the defence of the empire in the great war, the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire plan a war memorial in the form of bursaries in Canadian universities overseas, graduate scholarships and the placing of pictures of historical themes in school libraries, according to the report of the war memorial committee presented by Constance B. Lang, convenor to the convention this afternoon.

Nine bursaries, one for each province, will be offered annually for a period of 18 years. For these only the children of deceased and permanently disabled soldiers and sailors and the men of the air force are eligible. These bursaries will be of the value of $250 per annum, tenable for four years.

The choice of the university is left to the scholar and the Royal Military College may be substituted for a university.

In 1921-22, said Miss Lang, Canadian bursaries were awarded to Earle Price, Coleman, Alta.; Miss Kathleen Dodds, Vernon, V.C.; Jas. Kellett, Winnipeg; Miss Florence Tuver, Kentville, N.S.; Gordon Maybe, Napanee, Ont.; Edward Steacie, Westmount, Que.; Edward White, Arcola, Sask; Joshua Summer, Winnipeg; William Blackburn, Weyburn, Sask. The latter two were made as there were applications from New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island.

Memoranda has been sent to every high school in Canada and one would think that every principal would be anxious to inform his students about this gift of $1000 which the order offered, but judging from the small number of applicants this does not seem to be the case, she continued.

Overseas scholarships were awarded to Miss Bertha Lawrence, of Alberta, Morley Scott of British Columbia; George Meyers of New Brunswick; Frederick H. Jones of Nova Scotia and George M. Campbell of Prince Edward Island.

FAMILY LIVED IN A FENCE CORNER

Discovery By Children's Aid Officer, Lindsay.

LINDSAY, June 2.—A family living in a fence corner on a blind road west of town were found by Mrs. E. E. Sharpe of the Children's Aid.

Complaints from farmers in the vicinity had reached the ears of the authorities and accompanied by a photographer and a Salvation Army officer, Mrs Sharpe visited the spot. A baby in a most deplorable condition was found on the road and the "home" was located in a fence corner. The angle of and old-fashioned snake fence had been utilized. A third wall consisted of the foot of a wooden bedstead. The fourth wall was made of bags and served as a front door. On the roof were some branches. The officials did not enter the place but took a photo of it and carried the child away to the Shelter.

These people have been in police court in the past and are likely to make another appearance although no charge has been laid as yet. They were living in town until a month or so ago when they were rejected from their abode.

THE BODY OF ROY CHERRETT FOUND TODAY

Discovered Floating in the Lower Locks at 6.30 in a Similar Position to His Drowned Mother.

WORE SIGNET RING.

The mystery surrounding the disappearance of Roy Cherrett, Central Ontario ball player, was cleared up to day when at 6.30 a.m. Lockmaster W. D. Edwards, found the body of the young man floating against the eastern lock gate, at the lower locks, on the opposite side from where his mother was found, Monday morning.

The police were called and the body removed to Comstock's undertaking parlours. The young man was floating in a similar manner to the mother. He was fully clothed and on his right hand wore a signet ring inscribed R. C. by which Lockmaster Edwards identified the body as that of Roy Cherrett.

The body had evidently floated down into the upper reach in the night. Diver Fred Kiff of the Trent Canal covered the upper reach yesterday but was unable to find any trace of the body.

NEW SCHEME TO SMUGGLE HOOCH

SASKATOON, Sask., June 2.—(Canadian Press.) — A cream can with a copper partition across the shoulder which keeps the cream on top from spoiling the moonshine below, is the latest device discovered by Inspector Danis, of the Inland Revenue Department. Mike Hagel was yesterday morning fined $200, with the alternative of two months in jail for having the container in his possession, together with a large quantity of squirrel whiskey. On a complaint laid by the Saskatchewan Liquor Commission, Hagel had the punishment repealed for violation of the Saskatchewan Temperance Act. He told the police that he had been making his brew at Seelma and shipping it into town in the milk can. The latter only afforded space for a small quantity of cream, a plug being let in to the plate that divided cream from liquor.

EXAMINING IMMIGRANTS.

West Australia is considering the advisability of adopting a system by which intending immigrants from the British Isles shall be medically examined in Britain. That method is so plainly sensible that it is to be wondered at that it has not been adopted long since, not only by Australia, but by the other Dominions of the British Empire. Canada has so far only seen fit to extend the special examination system to immigrants from the Continent, but there seems no sound reason why it should not be applied similarly to Britishers who want to come to Canada. If they are not physically fit to be allowed to enter the Dominion, it would more merciful, as well as more businesslike, to establish that fact on the other, rather than on this, side of the Atlantic. To allow them to cross the ocean under the impression that they will have no difficulty in entering Canada and then to have them medically examined and perhaps rejected when they reach a Canadian port, is unnecessary. The examination can be easily carried out in Britain, and by having immigrants inspected there and given a certificate of fitness the hardships that often occur under the antiquated system used by Canada will be eliminated. The Australian plan should be brought to the attention of the Hon. Mr. Stewart, who might find it profitable to study the merits of the suggestion with a view to having it adopted for this country.

IMPRACTICABLE AT PRESENT.

The people of Canada do not want to appear inhospitable or churlish in so far as their kinsfolk in the British Isles are concerned. They would rather have them come to this country than any other people on the face of the earth. But, nevertheless, the suggestion that the Governments of the various Dominions comprising the British Empire should co-operate with the British Government in carrying out a comprehensive schmeme of immigration by which thousands of unemployed Britishers would be sent to the overseas Dominions, is one that Canadians will not be anxious to hastily adopt in view of the present industrial situation. Under normal conditions the absorbing of large numbers of workers from Britain would be an easy matter, but at present there is not work enough in our Canadian cities to go round. To bring to this country a horde of industrial workers would be to seriously aggravate a situation that is serious enough as it is, and instead of taking steps to increase the influx of immigrants it would be good business to advertise the fact extensively throughout Britain that for the man who is unwilling or who is untrained to go on the land Canada can offer nothing at present. The relief dolcs and bread lines have been costly enough as it is, and there should be nothing undertaken just now that will tend to increase the number of the unemployed. These conditions, of course, are but temporary. Before long, it is hoped, Canadian industries will be in full stride again, and when that stage is reached Britishers who want to make their homes in our Canadian cities will find themselves warmly welcomed.

SISTER MOSQUITO.

These are the days when after nightfall we hide ourselves behind wire screens, and watch our less fortunate brethren and sistern viciously slapping their own faces and other exposed or partially exposed parts of their anatomy. These are the days when we avoid swampy places and heavy underbrush—and still the pesky little insects get us. These are the days when our wives and sisters must surely long for a temporary return to the long skirts of the nineteenth century. Short skirts and openwork stockings—what a rich feast for Sister Mosquito! One would expect her to show a little fellow-feeling for her sex; to recognize that short skirts and openwork stockings are not only picturesque, but extremely comfortable in warm weather; but she doesn't. She goes for 'em with fiendish gusto. Can you blame her?

Do not forget that it is Sister Mosquito—the Female of the Species—that gives us such an uncomfortable time between the middle of May and the end of June. Listen to the dictionary: "A dipterous insect having (in the female) a long proboscis, capable of puncturing the skin of man and other animals and extracting blood." Capable of puncturing—we'll say it is!

One does not wish to appear to forget the consideration due the sex, but really there is something so viciously blood-thirsty about this slender young creature that a certain amount of profanity is almost pardonable. Yet, after all, we natives have comparatively speaking no very great cause to complain. We have become so ioculated with the virus of Culex pungens that the young lady's bark is almost, though not quite, worse than her bite. On the other hand, if we consider our amour proper rather than our epidermis, we have too much cause to complain, for it is abundantly clear that the North American mosquito feeds upon us only when or because she can find nothing better. We are poor stuff, the stale bread in the mosquito pantry, to be bolted to satisfy the insistent demands of the flesh, but avoided when fortune sends along something really worth while. What Sister Mosquito really revels in is a nice, juicy, full-blooded Englishman, fresh from the other side of the water. If you doubt it, go out into the woods with such a one, and watch the young ladies pass you by with a scornful glance and alight in eager swarms on the Englishman. It may hurt your pride, but there are compensations.

Once upon a time we had the curiosity to note the comments of travellers in various parts of Canada on the mosquito. Brought together it made up a sort of commination service, a wealth of savage denunciation directed against this inoffensive-looking little insect. One feature of these comments that should bring a glow of pride to one's Canadian brow is the admission, sometimes expressed in very forcible terms, that the Canadian mosquito, in the vulgar language of the street, "has 'em all skinned." "I thought," says Sir William Butler, "that my experiences of mosquitoes in Indian jungles and Irrawaddy swamps, to say nothing of my recent wanderings by Mississippi forests, had taught me something about these pests; but I was doomed to learn a lesson that night and the following, which will cause me never to doubt the possibility of anything, no matter how formidable or how unlikely it may appear, connected with mosquitoes." That was in Manitoba. Tollemache, in his "Reminiscences of the Yukon," says: "I have experienced mosquitoes in India, Burmah and the Malay Peninsula, but in the tropics they do not compare in number to the masses that are encountered in these Arctic regions." Bonnycastle, writing of Upper Canada as it was in 1841, warns travellers on no account to stop at Holland's Landing, north of Toronto. He says he was so intolerably stung there, although he thought himself mosquito proof, that he had to have a gauze veil made before proceeding on his journey. Howard Palmer, the mountain-climber, says of the upper Columbia in British Columbia, that the mosquitoes there are renowned for their numbers and ferocity. "I have been told," he says, "that they appear there in the spring before the snow is off the ground. One could multiply proof, from unprejudiced travellers, as to the superior efficiency and enterprise of the Canadian mosquito, but this is surely enough. Our American friends boast of the New Jersey mosquito, but then our American friends are given to thinking that their geese are swans.—Ottawa Journal.

THE SALARY "GRAB."

The Examiner's views on the $600 bonus "grab" in the Legislature are shared by the majority of Ontario newspapers. We quote today from The London Advertiser, one of the best known Liberal journals in the Province, and from the Conservative Kingston Standard.

The voice of London shall be heard first. Here it is:

"The Ontario Legislature has made a present of a $600 bonus to its members on the ground that the session is an unusually long one, and the expenses of the members great in proportion.

"The way to have avoided this condition would be to shorten up the session, and that is the one thing there does not seem to be much chance of doing.

"The Ontario Legislature has been a hornets' nest for months past, and the length of the discussions and the number of scandals and alleged scandals that have been discussed on the floor of the House have all run into valuable hours and days.

"A vote of $67,000 is something that should be seriously considered.

"The Legislature was elected on the basis of $1,400 for the work of the year. We are not arguing that such a figure is sufficient or insufficient, because that is apart entirely from the question. The understanding between the people and the members was such that each member in the House should receive $1,400 for the year's work, and the people have sanctioned nothing since that can in any way change that understanding.

"The Province of Ontario simply must get away from the idea of spending money.

"The spectacle of an added $67,000 for the members because they are taking a longer time than usual to get through with their affairs at Toronto is not going to encourage the idea of close financing and thrift in the Province.

"The impression is at once given that the Province has lots of money, whereas the Province has not got lots of money. It is so hard up it has to borrow.

"It would be much better to take the whole matter up in a more thorough manner. If the members are not paid enough let it be discussed as a business proposition. Such a course would put the whole matter in a much more favorable light before the electors."

And now listen to Kingston:

"If anyone will tell us what the Legislature of the Province of Ontario has done this year to warrant the jacking up of its sessional indemnity from $1,400 to $2,000, we will be glad to send him, free of charge, a year's subscription to The Standard.

"To be sure, there has been a good deal of talk and some of it—principally from the Opposition side, which resulted in the killing of a number of objectionable measures—has been decidedly beneficial. But as for any real constructive legislation that has been brought in by the Government we have failed to see it. The Government has merely dawdled along, and when it has not had the courage of its own convictions (which has been often) it has let its followers introduce 'private' measures and try to get away with them under that guise. Thus it is that we have had talk and little action—so little action, indeed, that the whole results of the session could be compressed into a week of real effort.

"And yet in spite of this the Government has deliberately voted a six hundred dollar increase to the sessional indemnity and brought it up to $2,000. Estimating the session at four months, or thereabouts, this means $500 a month or $125 a week. With all due deference to the members of the Legislature, one could almost count on the fingers of the two hands the members who are worth that much money—and only a few of those would be on the Government side.

"The increase is all the more shameful in view of the fact that everywhere else wages and rewards are coming down instead of going up. However, the Legislature, as we now learn, is a law unto itself, apparently superior even to the courts, and so we must bow to its wonderful wisdom.

"Nevertheless, to the man on the street the extra $600 is strikingly suggestive of a steal."

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The Federal House may yet wind up its session before the Legislature is through—although they talk a lot at Ottawa, too.

The increasing number of shooting cases once more calls attention to the necessity of further restrictions on the sale of fire-arms.

"House Is Disturbed By a False Alarm" read a newspaper heading. You'd have thought the Legislature was used to such things by this time.

Some newspapers go so far as to call the $600 bonus for members of the Ontario House a steal. At least it must be admitted that the legislators have treated themselves very generously.

The Budget debate affords a lot of members of Parliament an opportunity to say some things they forgot in their campaign speeches, and to repeat many more things that they did say during the contest.

"The prettiest town in Canada" has been discovered. Port Hope modestly admits the description fits her, but in Cobourg, however, they refuse to credit the news.

If the talkers of the Legislature continue to display their wonted loquacity, the Dominion Parliament may reach prorogation before the Legislature. Perhaps there is a feeling in Queen's Park that the bonus has not yet been fully earned, says The Globe.

THE VICIOUS CIRCLE

Chicago Journal of Commerce: If the manufacturer cannot sell at a profit he cannot continue to manufacture and, consequently, cannot continue to employ labor: if labor cannot find employment, it cannot continue to buy. Hence we have what is commonly called a vicious circle, which can be made healthy and successful only when profits are permitted to capital and labor alike.

ROYAL YEAST CAKES

Product of Canada

It was known many years ago that yeast is an excellent thing for the many ills that result from disordered stomach or run down blood condition. Lately eminent scientists have been investigating the matter thoroughly and their conclusions point to the fact that the beneficial effect of yeast has not been overrated. The yeast treatment is very simple and economical - and altogether harmless.

Before each meal eat a Royal Yeast Cake, or take a cake dissolved in water or fruit juices. The scientific investigators say that the curative elements in Royal Yeast are the vitamines and nuclein which it contains. It is certainly well worth a fair trial by those who suffer from any of the ailments mentioned above.

Canadian Woman Recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Winnipeg, Manitoba.—"I can not speak too highly of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was a nervous wreck and I just had to force myself to do my work. Life was a misery and work was a burden. Even the sound of my own children playing made me feel as if I must scream if they did not get away from me. I could not even speak right to my husband. The doctor said that he could do nothing for me owing to my condition, but told me to expect another miscarriage. My husband's grandmother advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I started it right away and everyone noticed what a different woman I was in a short time. I went and engaged my doctor and he did not know me, I was so well. I was able to do my work once more and it was a pleasure, not a burden. Now I have a 'fine bouncing baby' to use the doctor's own words. I am able to nurse her and enjoy doing my work. I can not help recommending such a medicine, and anyone seeing me before I took it and seeing me now, can see what it has done for me. It can do the same for anyone in my condition. I am only too pleased for you to use my testimonial."—Mrs. Emily Davis, 721 McGee St., Winnipeg, Manitoba.

DEFERS JUDGMENT IN MURDER CHARGE AGAINST ABE FILION

Magistrate Langley Will Study the Evidence Before Rendering His Decision on Monday—Says Crown's Case Based Largely on Suspicion.

CROWN'S THEORY.

Judgment in the preliminary against Abraham Filion in connection with the death of Ernest Edwards in Dummer township, the second week in April, will be given by Magistrate O. A. Langley in Police Court on Monday morning at 10 a.m. This was the decision of His Worship after hearing a lengthly review of the case by J. F. Strickland, representing the Crown, when the case closed late yesterday afternoon. The magistrate said he wisher to study the evidence, and he felt, although he would like to make his decision early, the case justified a thorough study and he would not therefore commit accused for trial or dismiss him until Monday morning.

Bricks Out Of Straw.

In his address to the magistrate F. D. Kerr, K.C., counsel for accused, commended the diligence of the Crown in connection with the case, but maintained that, like the ancient Israelites, he was attempting to make bricks out of straw. There was not a scintilla of evidence to support the charge, he said He moved for a dismissal, pointing out, as he said the magistrate knew, that this did not mean that the case could not be re-opened if other facts came out in the course of time. Mr. Kerr declared that to the Edwards, Filion did not comment on the case as he did not feel called upon to do so, not an unnatural position to take, as the Crown tried to make out, when he knew full well that the people were hostile to him.

Mainly Suspicion.

J. F. Strickland, when the magistrate pointed out that the Crown's case was largely based on suspicion, and the direct evidence was not strong, said that Inspector A. B. Boyd was in Norwood digging up certain facts, and the proceedings were held up until he could be located on the telephone to see what the results of his flying trip were. In the meantime he arrived, and Mr. Strickland reported that the evidence in regard to the movements of Filion Monday night preceding the finding of the body on Wednesday it was hoped to secure was not obtained. The evidence the inspector was after, it was stated, was as to where Filion went after he left Brown's. Mr. Strickland emphasized on the suspicion that the body had been placed in the yard sometime Monday night, which theory was borne out, he said, by the position of the body, the discoloration of the grass afterwards and by Dr. McPherson's statement that signs of a death struggle would have been expected. Mrs. Edwards could not have carried the body alone and the suspicion was that if there had been foul play she would look to Filion, who was closer to her than her own children. Mr. Strickland placed considerable importance on Filion not commenting on the remarkable statement of Mrs. Edwards that the knocks on the door attributed to supernatural agencies were a "token" of the approaching tragedy.

John Williamson, owner of the farm on which the Edwards lived, repeated the story of the finding of the body of Ernest Edwards at 2 p.m. Wednesday, April 12th. At first he thought it was some one sleeping on the ground.

William Buck, 8th line of Dummer, said he was talking to Filion at about 10 o'clock on Monday, while he was going through his place with a horse and buggy and bicycle tied behind. His horse was lame and he asked witness to look at it. They talked about horses.

Filion said that Mrs. Edwards and Ernest had jangled over the horse he was driving.

Verna Martin, a rather attractive young girl with bobbed hair, admitted without hesitation that Edwards had paid attentions to her. She told Mr. Strickland she was at Mrs. Bessie Chard's Thursday, Friday and Saturday after Ernest was found dead and she saw Filion there. She heard Mrs. Chard say that there had been foul play and it lay between Fillion and Mrs. Edwards.

Put Abe Out.

On March 24th Ernest told her that he had put Abe out. Objection was made to this evidence and Magistrate Langley ruled it was not admissible. At one time the girl said she stayed with the Edwards family from Tuesday until Saturday. There was no jangling at that time except once following a late visit in the night by Filion. "Ernest said he did not think Abe should stay so late. Mrs. Edwards said he had as much right there as I had." Ernest was worried over the relations between his mother and Filion, witness said, and spoke of it as being "a disgrace." She never knew from Ernest there had been strychnine in the room.

Arrested in Same House.

The story of the arrest of Filion and Mrs. Edwards at the home of George Brown, Mrs. Edwards' father, was told by Chief S. Newhall. The arrest was at midnight of May 5th. P. C. Gordon Puffer, Detective George Cookman and he made the arrest. They found prisoner and Mrs. Edwards occupying the one bed, he said. A midnight lunch was had in Norwood and they were back in the station here by 3 or 4 p.m. In the presence of Inspector A. B. Boyd Abe Filion made a written statement and this statement was submitted as Exhibit 5.

Objection to Statement.

Chief Newhall said he gave him the usual warning that whatever he stated might be used against him. Mr. Kerr cross-examined Chief Newhall who denied that either he or Boyd said Mrs. Edwards had made a statement. The statement was made up of replies to questions. Mr. Kerr objected to the statement going in on the grounds that while the formal warning was given it was not sufficiently brought home to accused and a statement in answer to questions was not a voluntary one. Mr. Strickland submitted that the law had been fully complied with and the statement should go in. "I cannot see that there was any inducement or threat, but on the other hand that he was duly warned. I think my proper duty is to let the statement go in subject to objection.

The Statement.

The statement did not prove to be such a damaging article after all. Filion declared therein that he and Ernest had had no quarrel as alleged. He last saw him at 7.30 a.m. on Friday. He had heard indirectly that he was annoyed at him for not lending him his horse to go and see his girl, "Verna Greaves." Jennie brought the word of her brother's death to Russell Hill's where he and Mrs. Edawrds were on the day the body was found. On the way over home in the buggy Mrs. Edwards said her son might have been injured and fell unless he took some of the strychnine that was in the trunk. Filion said he stopped at George Brown's and Mrs. Edwards went on home.

WAS TROUBLED WITH HER LIVER FOR OVER 4 MONTHS

When the liver becomes slow, sluggish and torpid it is not working properly and does not supply sufficient bile to thoroughly act on the bowels and carry off the waste products of the system, hence the bowels become clogged up, the bile gets into the blood, constipation sets in and liver troubles follow among which are, sick or billious headaches, heartburn, water brash, jaundice, floating specks before the eyes, pain under the right shoulder, coated tongue, bad breath, yellow eyes, etc.

MILBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

quickly remove the secretions, clear away the effete and waste matter by acting directly on the liver, and making the bile pass through the bowels instead of allowing it to get into the blood.

Mrs. Alice Meikil, Napanee, Ont. writes:—"I was very badly run down for over four months. I tried several remedies, but got no relief. One day my husband brought me home a vial of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, and before I had used half of it I was much better. I only used two vials and I am a different person today.

CAMPBELLFORD APPREHENSIVE OF WATER FLOW

Appoint Tax Collector.

CAMPBELLFORD, June 2.—Mr. J. D. Cummings was reappointed collector of taxes and the Separate School rate at a salary of $400 a year at the special meeting of the Council on Monday night. Mayor Meyers presided with Reeve Davidson and Councillors Dorie, Meiklejohn, Cole and Moore present.

A letter from Miss Blanche Pearce secretary of the Norwood Re-union Association asked for information as to the date which Campbellford intended to celebrate Dominion Day. This matter was left to Mayor Meyers with authority to issue a proclamation declaring Monday, July 3rd as the public holiday.

A. E. Caddy, the town's engineer, submitted an estimate of $5,000 for a water main and a sewer to be laid on Front street a distance of 800 feet from the present end of the sewer to the intersection of Ranney and Front streets. This figure was the basis of laying both pipe lines in the one trench.

Councillor Dorie introduced a by-law providing for the construction of these services as local improvements and the frontage charge was fixed at $2.27 per lineal foot. Because three-fourths of the Council were not present, Councillor Southworth was communicated with and gave his assent to the by-law. Mr. Caddy was appointed engineer to supervise this construction.

Anticipate Trouble.

Town Solicitor Ira A. Humphries informed the Council that he had interviewed representatives of the Hydro-Electric Commission in Toronto and had written the federal department of Railways and Canals in regard to the maintenance of a proper outlet for the sewer at dam No. 12. No definite understanding had yet been arrived at he said. When the new power plant at Rainey Falls is put into operation it may require so much water that the diversion from the main flow of the river over the dam will be so great that the river may be reduced comparatively to a trickle. In that event it is feared that the flow of water may not be heavy enough to carry off the sewage. Residents of that section of the town are anxious that prompt action shall be taken to prevent the development of a nuisance, and representatives are being made to the Hydro Commission and the Canals department urging the protection of Campbellford's interests when the new power house starts operations.

The Measure of Life

CUT this rule measure out and paste it on your mirror, or some place where you will see it frequently. It represents the normal span of seventy years of life for men and women, narrowing towards the top because expectation of life narrows from year to year, and each year seems to pass more quickly than the last. The scale breaks off suddenly at the end because the final parting comes as "in the twinkling of an eye".

Take a pencil and place it upon the exact point in the scale which represents your age. Look ahead and count up the years. Think seriously whether you have sufficient time ahead of you to permit of procrastinating the carrying out of any plan of life you may have decided upon.

You have always intended to take on adequate insurance. With this scale measure before you, decide now whether you have taken on sufficient insurance. Every year you delay increases the risk and the cost of carrying that risk.

CHAPTER LII

RECONCILIATION RUINED

We knew we were acting absurdly but neither of us would give in. We had reached our second Sunday since the situation developed, and I had resolved to capitulate before dinner. After breakfast Jack went over to see his mother, so he said. In an hour he came back, smiling, minus his mustache.

And then I felt terribly repentant for my part. I cried in my husband's arms, and told him I was ashamed of my method of coercion, and Jack owned up that he was disgusted because he had held out so long.

The more we talked about it, the sillier the subject looked.

And we were both too happy for words to describe, because we were in complete harmony once more. Not meaning to be contrary, but just because the idea had been lurking in my subconscious mind, I couldn't keep from saying:

"Jack, I was wrong to fuss so about your mustache. You ought not to have shaved it! Doubtless Mrs. Herrod approves of it!"

"What? Oh—I don't know!"

"Well, I do! She told me she thought it made you looks years older!"

"Oh—she told you! I see! But is it important to us—what Mrs. Herrod thinks?"

"Not to me!" I announced in a tone which distinctly implied that what Mrs. Herrod thought was probably very important to Jack.

"Oh, darling! Don't! Please don't spoil our nice day!" pleaded Jack.

"All right! I won't!" I agreed. But I had a good deal on my mind—things I'd been collecting for days, and I wanted to get rid of the burden I wanted "to talk over" a lot of our troubles. Jack wanted to park them all in the past—and forget them. So, of course, I'd have to keep still.

Mrs. Herrod had been to see me quite often. I wanted to tell Jack, to ask him why she came.

I had grown to like her, and to lean upon her judgment in a way. Sometimes I think we humans are a lot shallower than we appear. We talk a good deal about our emotions, about love and hate, but we soon calm down and forget.

So it was with my jealousy of Mrs. Herrod. I ought to have resented her visits, her invitations, the way she had of making me do things about my own house.

I don't see how she managed it. She never spoke of the dust on my table, nor the finger prints on my windows. But, somehow, as soon as Mrs. Herrod arrived I always saw every little bit of carelessness in my housekeeping.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI

"Meyers is bankrupt! Bankrupt! Bankrupt!"

"Mrs. Travers, I am very ill. Don't jest with me."

"Meyers is bankrupt and his cheque—waste paper."

Disraeli stood up, weakly.

"Let me gather my wits," he urged. "It is easy enough for you to say it, but why should I believe it?"

Mrs. Travers dropped her mask completely.

"Because it was my invention." She laughed aloud. Disraeli fell back on the sofa. She continued: "You thought to circumvent me with your apple-faced boy? What do you say now?" Rising and snapping her finger at him, she walked slightly off.

"You can't expect me to say much. I'm a child in your hands!"

At this moment Lady Beaconsfield, Sir Michael Probert and Clarissa entered the study.

XXVII.

Lady Beaconsfield and Clarissa stopped just inside the door. Sir Michael walked across the room to where Disraeli was sitting on the sofa. Taking Disraeli's hand, Probert said:

"Now, Mr. Disraeli. I'm very sorry to hear you are ill."

"I am so much better," replied Disraeli. "Mrs. Travers is such stimulating company."

"Sir Michael Probert?" Mrs. Travers queried sweetly.

"How do you do?" asked Sir Michael.

"But he's not——" Mrs. Travers began speaking, but stopped. Disraeli's movement silenced her. The Prime Minister's face assumed its natural expression, and he rose and vigorously walked to the writing desk. The woman stared at him, and Sir Michael was speechless.

"What's going on?" Sir Michael asked. "If you're not ill, why did you send for me?"

"Sit down, Probert," Disraeli urged. "I want to tell you a little story."

Mrs. Travers started to go.

"Pray remain, Mrs. Travers. This will interest you!" Disraeli spoke with finality. The lady paused.

"I repeat, why have you sent for me?" bellowed Sir Michael.

"I told you, Sir Michael, I might send for you."

"What? When?"

"When we had that delightful interview at Glastonbury Towers."

"Ah. I thought as much. Your harebrained scheme. Moses has failed you and you had to give it up. Well, it's no use appealing to me."

"Moses has not failed me. I have carried the scheme through."

"What?—Do you mean to tell me you have purchased the Suez Canal?"

"I do. The power and glory of my country were at stake. I had to act quickly and I had to act on my own responsibility."

"Then let me tell you, sir! You have committed a crime."

"As Parliament was not sitting to vote the money, I had to seek it elsewhere. Five million sterling. You refused."

"I did. And I am proud of it."

"So I went to the wealthiest private firm—to Hugh Meyers."

"Ha."

"Meyers, not being a party man, but a patriot, saw the greatness of the idea and stood by me. I sent Deeford to Ismail. Spies had got wind of what I was doing, and Russia knew; so Deeford had to go in a hurry;—a race for an empire! He has succeeded! Understand me. I put the matter quite simply. Deeford has bought the canal, and has paid for it, with Meyers' cheque drawn on the Bank of England."

Probert started but Disraeli went on.

"Wait! Meanwhile, Russia has been at work through an intermediary—he bowed to Mrs. Travers—one of the most fascinating women of my acquaintance. —Meyers is bankrupt!"

"What?"

"Russia has ruined him!"

"Mr. Disraeli, I have warned you of this. I foresaw it. Your high-handed actions have landed you just where I said they would. You must get out of it as best you can. It is no use appealing to me!"

As he spoke, Probert arose, and turned to go.

"No? Then I will not appeal. I will command!"

"What?"

Taking the note he had written from the desk, Disraeli held it up, and addressing Sir Michael, he said:

"You will sign this note giving Meyers unlimited credit."

"I—Are you mad?"

"I was never so sane in my life. Meyers' position is saved if we can gain time. The Bank of England must give him unlimited credit, today. Now!"

"You don't know what you are saying. You don't know to whom you are speaking. I refuse!"

"You can't!"

"I refuse—emphatically!—You have mistaken your man. I am an Englishman; the head of a gerat national institution. I am not to be ordered about an—by an alien Jew."

Lady Beaconsfield arose, but Disraeli calmly went on:

"Ah, but the alien Jew happens to be the better citizen; moreover, he happens to be Prime Minister."

"Do you threaten me?"

"Yes, if you force me to."

"Empty threats."

"Do you think so? You say the bank is a national institution. What becomes of that title if it refuses to save the nation?—What becomes of you?"

"Mr. Disraeli—!"

"When it is known that the lack of patriotism of one man has placed our country in the position of a person who is trying to pass a fraudulent cheque; exposes the nation to the ridicule of the world; lost the canal; lost India; baffled England: beaten her, disgraced her, dragged her through the mud, what becomes of the bank?"

"You cannot touch the bank."

"I'll smash the bank!"

Mrs. Travers and Clarissa arose. The room was tense with the voices raised in dispute. Disraeli continued. There was suppressed thunder in his tone.

"Parliament granted the bank its charter; Parliament can withdraw it!"

"Good God!". Probert was white to his lips.

"And shall withdraw it at my bidding! Your Board of Directors will be swept away; your shareholders bankrupt, the bank ruined, and you disgraced. I am Prime Minister! I can do this, and if you don't sign, by God, I will!"

Disraeli held out his quill pen, and pointed imperiously at the note that lay on the table.

"Now!" commanded Disraeli.

A NEW TAILORING BUSINESS OPENS.

F. N. Hourigan Manager of Up-to-Date Premises, Hunter Street.

The premises at 161 Hunter Street, formerly occupied by the Tartan Tailor Shop, have been renovated and the interior re-modelled, converting it into a modern, up-to-date tailoring establishment patterned on those of larger cities. With the slogan of the Peterborough Tailoring Company, "No Fit, No Pay," confronting prospective customers on the bright sign outside the window, and Mr. F. N. Hourigan as manger of the attractively-arranged store, there is every assurance of complete satisfaction here to intending purchasers of masculine attire.

A new hardwood window has been installed, with fresh, glistening paint and varnish on the white side wall and the panelled sides, done in grained oak, the latter effect carried out also in the novel alcove salesmen which have been installed along both sides of the store, their ornamental oak-finished pillars and overhead lighting offering a splendid opportunity for instant inspection of the cloths on view on the long rods and the special open compartments for different-priced goods. On forms above these alcoves, will be displayed dressed models. Two central tables are used for displayed purposes.

At the rear is a newly-installed office, with lattice-work overhead and pebbled glass windows, and the back of the store holds a completely-equipped repair department.

A cordial invitation is extended to the general public to call and inspect the new premises, with the novel arrangements for displaying goods.

COUNTRY BAGS.

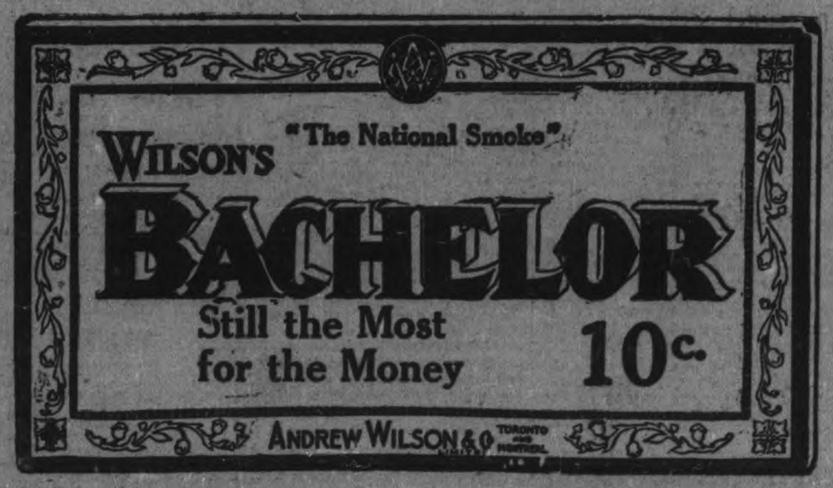
Some very gay country bags to hold the knitting and needlework iwth which women employ their idle hours are being shown in the shops. Some are of raffia trimmed with flowers of wool. Others are coarse straw with pompons of wool and silk that look much like milkweed pods.

VANITY CASES.

Small wooden boxes are now mounted on legs and made to look like tables. Inside they contain all the lotion and creams Milady uses in making up her face. With a hand dle such a convenience may easily be carried about and placed just where desired.

INEXPENSIVE RUGS

If you are furnishing a summer home you will be glad to know rag rugs are being developed that are highly decorative and low in price. The come in straw and fiber with much color and with regular carpet designs One large enough for a good sized room can be had for less than $10.



HEM LINES.

The hem line is leading a much more regular life than it did during the winter. However, draperies have a way of hanging off at one side, and sometimes they reach the floor.

WHEN YOU WAKE UP DRINK GLASS OF HOT WATER

Wash yours If on the inside before breakfast like you do on the outside. This is vastly more important because the skin pores do not absorb impurities in the blood, causing illness, while the bowel pores do.

For every ounce of food taken into the stomach nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out of the body. If this waste is not eliminated day by day it quickly ferments and generates poisons, gases and toxins, which are absorbed or sucked in the blood stream, through the lymph ducts which suck only nourishment.

A splendid health measure is to drink before breakfast each day, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless way to wash these poisons from the stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowels; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the alimentary canal before eating more food.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs but very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on inside bathing.

New and Interesting Facts from Science and Life

Would Man Be Healthier Going on ALL FOURS?

The Upright Position of the Body Is Said to Produce a Sagging Stomach.

Eating in a Reclining Position Is Suggested as a Cure for Chronic Indigestion Caused by Incorrect Posture.

Normal Position of the Stomach When Man Walked on All Fours.

WHEN primitive man, who, according to anthropologists, went about on all fours, he enjoyed a perfect digestion. But later when he became ambitious and assumed an upright position, his troubles began—just how Dr. Harry Campbell sets forth in the London Lancet in explaining the disadvantages of the upright posture of human beings.

"It is interesting to find," says Dr. Campbell, "that charwomen seem actually to enjoy the all-four position adopted in scrubbing the floor, and I am told that young girls in cookery schools delight in the same occupation; they sometimes actually spill water as an excuse for going on all-fours to wipe it up.

"In considering the influence of the upright position on the circulation, it is necessary to distinguish clearly between standing, walking and running. Standing is less favorable to the circulation than the latter two, inasmuch as rhythmical muscular contractions are an important aid to the circulation, and in this connection it is worthy of note that under natural conditions man spends little of his time in standing still; he either moves about or lies down. Such considerations emphasize the fact, universally admitted, that it is bad for humans—whether school children, shop assistants, cooks or what not—to remain standing for any length of time; and they further point to the advantage of reclining after the Oriental fashion over sitting down. Many women derive great benefit from lying down an hour or so during the day."

As further evidence that some persons get indigestion as a result of bad postural habits, Dr. Joel E. Goldthwaite of the Harvard Medical school says that just as there are two distinct types of horse—the race horse and the Percheron—so there are two distinct types of human being—the slender and the stocky. And the diseases to which they are subject depend largely upon which type they belong to.

In a recent address before the New York Academy of Medicine and printed in the Medical Record, Dr. Goldthwaite discussed these different types, which, he said, were built on absolutely different anatomical lines. The slender type of human being had, like the race horse, slim, light bones, fine, small muscles and quick action. This was the type that had been pioneers. Their skeletons weighed ten or fifteen pounds lighter than normal. Their bones were different in shape and they often had six lumbar vertebrae.

To this type belonged the contortionists, acrobats and fancy dancers. No amount of training could turn them into Sandows. They had only about ten feet of intestines, instead of the normal twenty feet. Therefore, they could never be fattened because their intestines are not long enough to absorb all their food. Their livers were smaller and their kidneys subject to displacement because lacking in supporting fat.

The Percheron type was rarely seen nowadays. Instead the stocky, heavy type had taken its place. In these the chest was shorter and thicker, the skeleton weighed ten or fifteen pounds more than normal, and sometimes there were only four lumbar vertebrae. Their intestines might be as much as from twenty-five to thirty feet long. Consequently they grew fat because practically all their food was absorbed.

The slender type is the most sensitive, most commonly tuberculous, and the stocky type most liable to joint diseases. Slender children easily acquire bad postural habits and incorrect methods of breathing. When standing relaxed they allow their ribs to droop. Their diaphragm often becomes concave downward instead of upward. This results in only thoracic breathing, in impeding the return circulation and in displacement of the digestive organs.

Growing children who have chronic digestive troubles due to this can be cured, Dr. Goldthwaite said, by correcting their posture. One such case he cited was that of a young girl whose chronic indigestion was cured by making her eat her meals lying flat on her stomach, her head and chest supported on her elbows. She also had to sleep flat on her back without pillows.

Dr. Goldthwaite said that fifty years ago only 20 per cent. of the people were of the slender type; today 60 per cent. are of this type. As the slender type was so rapidly increasing he urged the great importance of preparatory schools insisting upon correct posture.

A CLOCK THAT NEVER HAS TO BE WOUND

IF you are one of those who chronically forget to wind the clock in the kitchen or on the mantel in the living-room or on your car, you will welcome a clock that never needs winding.

A clock that will never run down, a clock you never have to wind, has been invented and is as perfect a timekeeper as any piece of mechanism yet devised. One reason why the clock is so accurate is that it does not have a mainspring, for the mainspring is the temperamental part of a watch or a clock. A high-grade watch or clock that draws its power from a mainspring will vary, laboratory tests show, about fifteen seconds in twenty-four hours for each degree of temperature change.

Another trouble with mainsprings is due to the high temper required. A mainspring that is not highly tempered is sluggish, and one that is properly treated is extremely susceptible to crystallization from vibration, with resulting breakage or an irregular supply of power. The mainspring also requires an adjustment so that the watch will keep time in spite of the fact that a stronger force is supplied when the spring is fully wound than when it is nearly unwound.

"Eliminate the mainspring with its required winding and other troubles and you eliminate the principal cause of inaccuracy in time-keeping," reasoned A. E. Keith, the inventor of the automatic telephone and a noted electrical genius. So he invented this clock that eliminates both mainspring and winding, a clock that is driven by electricity and will run a whole year on one small dry battery. At the end of that time the battery is replaced in a few seconds.

The clock, as a writer in the Illustrated World describes it, has a jeweled movement like a watch, except that it has no mainspring. Instead, a long arm attached to a small, untempered spiral spring pulls on a ratchet wheel. This furnishes power identical with that of the mainspring, except that climate cannot affect it and the amount of power supplied is always the same. For fifty-nine seconds this arm pulls the ratchet wheel, thus turning it through the length of one tooth. When the arm reaches the bottom of that tooth an electric connection is made and a magnetic coil pulls the arm back again, permitting it to grip another tooth and repeat the action. The spring that operates the arm pulling the sprocket wheel is so constructed that the pull on the arm is always the same. One of these clocks stood on the desk of the superintendent of accuracy tests in the watch factory for two weeks and three days and kept absolutely accurate time. In a laboratory, one of these clocks kept perfect time through oven and refrigerator tests of one hundred and twenty hours.

The Working Principle of the New Non-Wind Clock Is an Arm Run by a Spring and an Electric Magnetic Coil. This Arm Revolves the Wheel and Eliminates Mainspring.

FINDING HEIGHT of AIRPLANES

WHENEVER you hear a loud humming sound overhead you invariably look upward to see the airplane you know is somewhere above you. And after spotting the plane you naturally wonder at what height the aviator is flying. Thus, through curiosity, cases of dispute, or just for general knowledge, it often happens that it is desired to know fairly accurately the height at which an airplane is flying. Although there are in use, at present, several complicated accurate methods, none of these are readily acceptable to the ordinary person or easily figured.

There is, described in The Illustrated World, a simple method for accomplishing this result. Although no delicate apparatus is used, the method is said to be accurate to within a few feet. The method is shown in the accompanying diagram.

When the airplane is seen approaching, two observers station themselves on either side of where the plane will come, and almost at right-angles to the plane so that it will pass between them. Each carries a graduated scale which has graduations in feet. The observers each hold a scale directly in front of them, facing each other. When the machine cuts the plane between them, each observer reads on the scale the length in feet the plane appears to be.

Knowing the distance between the two observers, the distance they held the scale away from them, and their readings, it is easy to find the height of the plane. For example, in the figure, A and B are observers; the distance between them, BA; the distance they held the scales, BC and EA, and the readings EF and CD. Then, to find GH, or the height of the plane, use the equation given.

The "TURKEN" NEW Barnyard FOWL

UNDER the direction of poultry experts of the universities of Washington and Oregon, Z. T. Spencer, of Santa Cruz, Cal., has developed in the past two years a hybrid fowl which he calls the "turken." The turken, which is a cross between a chicken and turkey, has done well for him and he now has a flock of 58. Concerning the origin and development of this new fowl Mr. Spencer gives the Pathfinder this information:

In 1918 a baby chick and a baby turkey were given to a little girl as pets. The birds became great friends and inseparable companions. In due time the chick developed into a full-fledged hen and the little turkey became a lusty gobbler. The hen then laid 13 eggs, fertilized by the gobbler. From these eggs five males and four females were hatched. One of the females of this original flock is still laying five eggs weekly.

The "Turken" Is a Hybrid of the Turkey and the Chicken.

Turkens multiply as other fowl; Mr. Spencer has the third generation now. The eggs hatch in 21 days. None of the roving nature of the turkey is manifested by the hybrid birds; they are gentle and as easily handled in pens as chickens. The eggs are brown in color, of about the same size as an ordinary hen's egg and the same in flavor. The birds are hardy and rapid growers, weighing at maturity about 10 pounds. The flesh is the same as that of the turkey, the legs and breast being much meatier than that of a chicken. The original four hens laid in a year an average of 281 eggs apiece. As market fowls and as egg producers Mr. Spencer considers the turken superior to all other domestic fowl. His flock was a triple prize winner at Watsonville, Calif., fair last fall.

What Becomes of Golf Balls

A SCANDINAVIAN fisherman recently gave a well-known English golfer a bag of 250 golf-balls that he had collected off the coast of Jutland. In all cases they were British-made balls. It is thought that these balls were played at Seaford and North Berwick. At the time the prevailing winds were westerly. The balls were blown out to sea, and curious cross-currents washed them over to the Danish coast.

A tricky problem was set the players on a golf course a short while ago. One of them had driven off and had the satisfaction of seeing his ball drop near the green. Just then a seagull appeared on the scene and swooped down on the ball, picking it up in his beak.

On being chased, the bird dropped the ball, but at once swooped and caught it again, giving the players a further chase of 150 yards. Finally, the ball was rescued and the point arose as to where the player must play from. After a hot discussion, the ball was dropped as near as possible to where it had first fallen.

A golfer of repute put on record that he once found 17 golf balls in a heap of fresh sand outside a warren on a Scots course; and, on another occasion, came across four in a crow's nest. Noticing that his ball seemed a long time in coming down, he told his caddie to climb one of the trees, and the four balls were found.

This record is beaten, however, by that made by an American squirrel when the golf players on a New Jersey course found no fewer than 100 balls in a squirrel's nest at the foot of an old tree.

Getting Gossip With a Garter

GETTING gossip via the garter—that's the latest marvel of the radio whereby any member of the fair sex can acquire a "sixth sense" and pluck secrets from the air.

This "sixth sense" comes in the form of a dainty beribboned garter, to be worn by its owner just below the knee. Around this garter, under the silk of ribbon and rosette, wire is coiled and connections are made by a "ground" of wire on a snap coil held under the foot and an aerial subtly concealed in the crown of the hat. When not in use the receiver, which hooks on the hat over the ear, hangs on a tiny bent wire concealed on the garter.

How the Radio Garter Is Worn and the Method of Receiving Wireless Messages. In the Oval Is a Close-up View.

The radio garter is the invention of Walter P. Miller, a newspaper photographer. Mr. Miller first wound wire around a piece of stiff cardboard covered with silk to give the appearance of a lady's garter. He attached to this two ordinary eyeglass snap chains, one of which is held under the foot to make a ground, and the other connected to a coil of wire in the wearer's hat, forming the antenna. The crystal detector is in a glass tube attached to the garter. To complete the "hello garter" there are two little binding posts for the ear telephones.

Working Subconscious Mind

A SUGGESTION repeated to yourself with emphasis and concentration the last thing before you sleep, will work in your subconscious mind while you sleep, motivating to a remarkable degree your waking actions. Consequently auto-suggestion or a constructive statement of desirable facts or conditions at this time are surprisingly effective. Psychologists explain that it is a simple law of the way the mind works and there is nothing occult about it.

SMALLEST ANIMAL in the WORLD

THE smallest speck which can be detected by the average unaided eye, is a bit of opaque, white substance, about 50 microns (.002 in.) in diameter, seen against a black background. The smallest creature in the world, however, is only 1-25th of this size. A graphic idea of the extreme smallness of this microscopic bit of life to which scientists have given the long name of pleuromonas jaculans, can be had by comparing it with the ordinary human hair, as shown in Fig. 2 of the accompanying drawing. A human hair ordinarily averages 50 microns in diameter. The body of this diminutive creature, however, in diameter, along the longest axis, rarely reaches a length of eight or nine microns (about 1-3000 of an inch), and individual creatures have been found as small as two microns (1-12,000 of an inch).

In Fig. 1 are shown three typical individuals. The body, as described in Popular Mechanics by Leon Augustus Hausman, Ph. D., is somewhat the shape of a kidney bean, with two long whip-like threads extending from a depression in one side. With these whips, known as flagellums, the creature makes its rather jerky way through the water in search of food, for it lives in pools and ponds amid decaying vegetation, where an ample supply of bacteria and juices from the disintegrating plant tissue is always present. These serve as its food, which is absorbed into the soft jellylike area at the base of the flagellums. The life of a single individual is usually but a few hours. At the end of that time the creature simply divides into two new individuals, both of which swim away, feed, and increase in size, and then themselves divide, and so on.

The capture of pleuromonas, while not involving any of the risk to life and limb which attends the capture of the largest living animal forms, the whales, still involves as great time, patience and perseverance on the part of the "hunter." Dr. Hausman has devised a special apparatus for the capture of the protozoa (the first great division of animals to which pleuromonas belongs), under the microscope.

"By skilful manipulation of the tip of the pipette under the objective of the microscope," says Dr. Hausman, "it is possible to secure single individuals of pleuromonas, and to transfer them either to glass microscope slides or to sterilized culture jars, to breed a new race. And many failures, either to capture or to transfer these tiny animals from one place to another, is the lot of the hunter after the smallest animal in existence.

"Pleuromonas claims our interest, not only because it is the most minute form of animal life known to exist on our earth today, but because it is of actual economic value to us as well. Often bodies of water filled with putrefying plant remains will be colored a milky hue by the immense numbers of these tiny creatures, each one of which is a valuable scavenger, helping to transform decaying vegetable tissue into animal substance. The pleuromonas are devoured, in their turn, by larger forms of the protozoa, or single-celled animals, which again are eaten by minute crustacea and insects. And these last constitute one of the most important supplies of fish food. In many cases, therefore, these tiniest of nature's children are the ones to take the first step in the great work of making many of our waterways sweet and pure."

EGG MARKETS.

OTTAWA, June 2.—(Canadian Press.)—The market is inclined to be firmer for the better grades and somewhat weaker for the lower grades. Dealers are now quoting the more attractive differential in price for the grade of extras over firsts and seconds, but shippers claim it is not sufficient to compensate for the difference in quality.

Toronto firm, unchanged.

Montreal best grades in greater demand and higher in price, under grades weak and moving slowly. Dealers report Ontario track shippers offering graded firsts freely at 32 f.o.b. and car lots; shippers from the prairie provinces of regular graded firsts at 28, second 24 f.o.b. MRS. WILSON SEEKS HEALTH IN LONG TOUR

Gets No Better, However, Until She Returns Home, When She Takes Tanlac and is Completely Relieved of Stubborn Stomach Trouble.

"What Tanlac has done for my wife convinces me that it is the greatest medicine in the world" said John Wilson, 499 Main East, Hamilton, Ont., well-know employee in the post office.

"My wife hadn't been well in three years. She could hardly eat or sleep or do anything about the house. Her nerves were unstrung, she seemed restless all the time and had no appetite. I took her on a trip through the west thinking that the change would do her good but when we got back she was as bad off as ever, if not worse.

"On our trip we heard Tanlac praised everywhere, and so I got her a bottle on our return. Four bottles restored her completely. Now she looks fine and her appetite is excellent. She sleeps soundly and her housework is no trouble at all. We are always telling our friends about Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

MANY BUILDINGS THAT ARE LOCAL LANDMARKS

Interesting Early History of Town's Old Residences and Business Places—Buildings Erected Twenty Years Before Incorporation Still in Use.

(BY F. H. DOBBIN)

This municipality (Peterborough), has just recently passed its hundredth anniversary of the first settlement. And of that coming in and settlement we have a few vestiges left. The city of to-day is too young to have in its environs what are referred to as ancestral halls and much of historic edifices. Largely from the fact, which is true of all Canadian localities that have grown from inception or planting in the virgin forest, that the habitations of its people were first of a class growing out of the necessities of the times, then of a gradual betterment and lastly of a recognition of the claims of appearance and the essentials of comfort.

Those who were early on the ground had little of time or indeed inclination, to consider appearances. What they needed was a shelter and materials at hand were utilized. The primitive dwelling was the house of logs, stout, warm, durable and inexpensive. Meeting as required the the extremes of heat and cold as incidental to the climate of Canada. But so soon as lumber became fairly plentiful, the log house ceased to be constructed, within the civic limits, at any rate. Then followed that most at any rate. Then followed that most durable of all, stone. To be supplemented with brick, though the clap boarded house was a favorite for many years. And the "strip" house, further on described, was made use of and stood in favor.

What is here written is something of a running relation of the housing problem of the early and later days: who built, who occupied, what is left to recognize, together with some personal relation of the people who occupied and were of the citizens of years as noted. All have gone to their rest as the span of life covers not the multitude of years that have passed.

The First Wooden House

In erecting the first (not log) wooden houses, the builders with the English idea of permancy carried into the construction the "frame" idea. This formed a skeleton, a very substantial one in fact, of hewn or sawn timbers mortised and braced, the outside covered with sheeting and clapboards, the inside with lath and plaster. Many such houses so built are to-day in use, and highly respected. They seem to defy the winds and elements, and nothing but fire can them lay low. A modification of the build was the "rough cast," the outer walls covered with plaster. The forerunner of the now esteemed stucco. The outside was first covered with a split lath, viz. a thin board split with an axe and nailed on the frame, the split boards being separated as nailed, forming interstices in which the mortar took hold. The finishing coat was a thick mixture of thin mortar and small pebbles, thrown or "cast" against the wall. When lumber was real plentiful, and as the narrow boards turned out from the mills were not esteemed for export, the narrowest, about six inches in width, were made use of. These placed on the foundation timbers were securely nailed, one on top of another, the edges of alternate boards projecting so as to form a groove into which the mortar was pressed. The whole formed a very substantial style of building. A fairly large number are in service as yet after an interval of sixty years.

Among those who came into the district following the earliest settlements were a number of English military men, officers retired on half-pay. Several located within the town limits, and built homes of stone, and several fine examples of this form of house are now in use as yet. In general, these houses are low, roomy, well lighted and had ample verandahs. The reason assigned for not building houses of some height was concerned with the heating. This was by means of wide and deep fire-places, of generous width in which four-foot sticks of maple hardwood were piled and made a glorious fire. Stoves as we afterwards knew them, had come into use.

Oldest of Buildings in the City

It may be of interest to place on record some facts with regard to the oldest of buildings in the city, before those who are still living and know of the incidents have passed away. Of all the original buildings erected on George Street, between Murray Street and the corner of Charlotte Street, only one remains, the brick building, the south half of which is now occupied by Edward's Meat Market, and the north half by the barber shop of Gainey Bros. This building is not so ancient as many others in the city, but is the dean of the street, so to speak. It was built by Robert Rowe, and shows the thorough way in which he, as a contractor, did his work. After its erection, it was occupied for several years by James Best, as a general store, and by William Haffey in clothing and tailoring. In the upper story, reached by a staircase outside the building, was the office of the Weekly Review newspaper, at the time of its establishment in 1853. In a few rooms at the rear, several legal lights had offices. Truly, a Hall of Learning. The date of erection is given as in 1847.

Another old timer, still doing service, is that known for many years as the Commercial Hotel, corner of George and Brock streets. This building is one of the frame style, and was put up by Henry Lawson, for use as a fanning mill factory, the frame being sheeted with boards. At that time it stood about nine feet above the now street level, perched on the bank, for the street had been cut through the hill. In fact, all the buildings on that side of the street, from the corner of Brock Street down to what was known as the "Crystal Block," —though the name has been dropped— were hoisted up high and dry. Behind these buildings was a deep hole, (some of it is there as yet), known as "Hawthorn's Yard," where the drainings of the street collected, and made things bad for the sanitary influences of the vicinity. When the making of fanning mills became almost a lost art, the building stood idle for many years. Afterwards it was shored up, the ground beneath taken away and a foundation built in, as we see it to-day.

The First Home of Otonabee Lodge

Of old stone buildings, one with a history, is that so long the residence of late Robert Nicholls, and now of W. H. Hamilton, in the block adjoining that on which St. Peter's Cathedral now stands. In 1845, P. M. Grover began its erection, proposing to make it his residence. He had the walls up and something done to the roof, when he failed in business, and the unfinished building passed out of his hands. At that time, Otonabee Lodge, No. 13, of the Oddfellows, was a flourishing and popular institution, quite as much in the public eye as either Rotary or Kiwanis, and having some such identity in social service work. Its membership held all the professional men of the town and prominent business men, as well, and the Lodge was ambitious to attempt things. It needed an all, and after some negotiations the Grover building was bought. The walls were raised, the roof completed, the large pillars that lend distinction to the front erected. Some years after, the affairs of the Lodge became involved and it became dormant. With its spacious grounds and admirable site the building has been a notable landmark.

A Stone Hotel was a Bank

Another old building of stone that is still unmarked by the hand of Time, is that known for so many years as the Phelan Hotel, on Simcoe Street. It was built as a notable piece of enterprise by Richard Winch, Sen., father of our venerable citizen, Richard Winch, of Stewart Street; William Yates was the contractor. As these lines are written, the old and the original contract for erection is before us. In the precise language used by Elias Burnham, Peterborough's first lawyer and solicitor, the terms of erection are specified. Under date of June 23, 1849. So many cords of stone were required at fourteen shillings the cord, and the lime at sixpence the bushel. There were no profiteers in building materials in those days. An item is also specified as seven stone thresholds.

This building was, when erected, (the eastern half), the home of the old Commercial Bank, first in the district. J. H. Roper, as a very young man was manager. In the western half, Mr. Winch had his meats market and did a thriving trade.

This old building was the centre of attraction on a certain 17th of March, 1865. Growing out of some expressed intention of one of the Catholic societies of the town to march out. This proposed action was resented by the belligerent society known as the "Cavan Blazers," of which we may write further on. There was a lot of marching and counter-marching, and much of painless demonstration, culminating by the Blazers bringing in an old cannon, mounted on a venerable bob-sleigh and planting it opposite the door of the hotel, threatening to blow the insides out ofe the place," as one briefly declared intention. On the ground that several choice spirits of the opposing faction were inside. But the matter blew over, and that same evening both sides sat down to a luxurious supper at the Caisse House, and speeches were made eulogistic of St. George and the Dragon and Ould Ireland and Saint Patrick.

The bank was afterwards moved to the brick building at the corner of Water and Hunter streets, built by John Gilmour, where the bank presently ceased to exist, W. A. Harper being at that time the manager. The building as the "Crown" or Sun Life Building.

On George Street, opposite Comstock's stands an old stone and plaster building, built by William McBurney, and in which he had for several years his saddlery shop. It is now known as the Grand Hotel. For years a dispute existed as to whether this building did or did not stand, on a foot in width of the ground to the south, and over this foot of ground, one of the bitterest law suits that ever vexed the community was waged, until the value of the building and lot, was eaten up in costs.

Other Stone Houses of Merit

For buildings with a fine flavor of antiquity about them or a respectably long pedigree it is of no use to look north of McDonnel Street. The reason assigned for this is that in the early years the only means of crossing the river was a ford, and afterwards the bridge at Hunter Street. The first bridge at Nassau was not built until after Charles Perry had built the first Red Mill, at that point on the river. So north of McDonnel Street was not in much favor and houses were grouped together lower down. It is true that there were exceptions to this rule, as in the case of the large stone residence so long occupied by John Belcher, civil engineer, on the top of "Smithtown Hill." This house was erected by Henry Cowing in 1843-44, and afterwards became the property of late Mossom Boyd. Mr. Cowing owned the quarry, opposite the entrance to Jackson Park, and from this quarry was taken the stone to erect the county buildings, old St. Andrew's Church, St. Peter's Cathedral, and many of the stone dwellings in the town.

Rev. J. M. Roger, built in 1840, the house in which he lived for many years, afterwards the home of his son, late Judge G. M. Roger, of Coburg. The stone for the house was quarried from his own lot, just north of Bonaccord St. The house was purchased by late G. Walter Greene, and afterwards sold, to become the home of Dr. N. H. Sutton, of this city.

The stone for the erection of St. John's Church, was taken from the glebe lot, north of McDonnel Street and west of the creek. In the main quarry the quality of the stone deteriorated as the quarry was worked into, and the arrival of brick, its convenience and popularity put an end to the use of stone as a building material. Among the older and most substantial stone buildings as yet in use is the fine house just outside the city—end of Charlotte Street—and the residence for many years of late R. A. Morrow. It was built by Stafford Kirkpatrick, in 1842, and about the same time were built several others of the same pattern. One of these was erected by Capt. Chas. Rubidge, a very early settler. It stood in a large block of lands, south of Weller Street and west of Part St reet, at the time the western boundary of Peterborough. This house was plastered on the outside, over the stone. It became the property of late Judge Weller and afterwards the residence of late Senator Geo. A. Cox, before his removal to Toronto. In his care the building was much enlarged and improved. The cutting up of the land into building lots has resulted in the demolition of the old house.

Other stone houses, yet in use, were erected about the time indicated. Dr. Ridley built the house at the corner of Hunter and Rubidge Streets, a comfortable old place, occupied for some years by Hazen Ritchie. William Eastland in 1849 built the stone house at corner of Hunter and Stewart Streets. This is now the city residence of successive managers of the Bank of Montreal, its hospitable doors ever ready to welcome the new manager to the city. The Haggart house at corner of Brock and Chambers Streets is another substantial house of stone.

Of stone buildings used for manufactures, several remain, and all have chequered histories. The old, low building, perched on the side of the bluff and overlooking the rails of the Midland branch of the G.T.R. and the creek and crossing on Bethune Street, has had a varied existence. It was built in 1837-38 for a distillery by Edmund Chamberlain in 1852; afterwards altered to the uses of a brewery; put to this use for many years and passed into the hands of Ogilvie & Hood, who used it as a soap factory until the making of soap received a chill. For many years it was known a the "Ship Brewery," from thefigure of a ship that did duty as a weathercock on top of a staff projecting through the roof. Then to the recent use of a shelter for many years to the old people in the care of the Protestant Home in their declining years. Now it has been tuened into apartments. Such is the durability of stone in construction.

Within a stone's throw of the old Home is a stone building that has been a notable landmark for over eighty years. The structure now occupied by Fitzgerald's coal and wood business. It was put up by a man named Smith, as a venture in the line of distilleries, and to head off the competition from Cobourg, at that time (1834-36) the centre of the production of whiskey. When finished, a man named Pat Hamon came in from Cavan and made whiskey galore. He took a pride in his profession, did Hamon, and he was not bothered with such trifles as excise, or taxes or other impediments. He had a fine commercial instinct, and sent out a handbill to extol his wares, saying that he had the best home-distilled, one price to all, four nence the quart and one shilling the gallon. And adding the bibulous information that it held not a head-ache in a quart. Gentlemen who now inveitle the physician for a four-ounce shot at two dollars for the potion, may regret that they did not live in the good old days. In after years, William Lundy took over the place and made good leathers where the alleged good whiskey had spent its aroma on the neighbourhood.

Tucked in behind the buildings on Simcoe Street, adjoining the creek crossing, and next to the Lock Works, is an old stone place with a tragic finale to its long activities. Used as a tannery, the owner, crazed with liquor, met his wife in the doorway, on a day in October, 1875, and killed her with an axe. The crime was a matter of public concern and the circumstances so deplorable that following the trial and conviction it required very strenuous efforts of many of the community to secure a mitigation of the sentence from hanging to imprisonment for life. It is understood that after serving ten years, he was released on condition that he leave the country.

The Coming in of Brick Buildings

The first brick available in this neighbourhood was made by hand out at a clay bed in North Monaghan. Dr. William Bell, who had a penchant for giving everything a lift where he could, fathered the idea and gained fair results The first brick house to be erected, was built by Thomas Leonard, at the corner of Simcoe and Queen streets in 1847, using the home-made brick. LLOYD GEORGE AWAY.

Gives Encouragement to Belief That Irish Situation is Improving.

LONDON, June 2. — (Canadian Press). — It was announced to-day that Lloyd George would leave for Criccieth to-night, and would probably be away for a week.

This fact gives encouragement to the belief that there is some improvement in the Irish situation. Premier Craig of Ulster interviewed Lord Balfour this morning at the Foreign Office, and later the Earl attended a Cabinet meeting under the presidency of Lloyd George.

Some 426,500,000 fewer postcards were posted in England in 1921 than in 1913.

LOS ANGELES, June 2 (Canadian Press). — Constance Talmadge, screen actress, was granted an interlocutory decree of divorce yesterday from John Pialoglou, tobacco manufacturer, of New York, on grounds of mental cruelty. No answer to the suit was filed by Pialoglou.

SPLENDID EXHIBIT OF ART WORK BY SCHOOL CHILDREN

PRIZE-WINNERS.

An affair that was well patronized by members and friends was the exhibit of children's work held at the Central School, Monday afternoon and evening, when examples of pupils' work in the different grades was on view, with tea and musical program provided by the Central School Home and School Association.

This exhibit, which is probably a fair example of work by children in the other schools of the city, to be exhibited from time to time in the near future, was a revelation to those unacquainted with the dexterity and skill of small fingers in the work of the art, sewing and manual training sections of our schools.

The exhibition by pupils of the Central School yesterday was splendid, lining the four walls of the large kindergarten room, which was decorated with the school colors of red, green and white, and covering several large tables. There were water-colors in soft, warm tints, small scenes from nature, and some very pretty flowers and fruit picture; decorative calendars with trees standing out against verbal backgrounds; wash drawings in faint, pastel tints, of blue and green; pen and ink sketches; silhouette effects; pussy willows and flowers and fruits in colored chalks; plenty of action in the charcoal reproductions of small running and skating figures; and the free-hand drawings exhibited some quaint little scenes, including the jaunty rear view of a small maiden hanging out clothes on a Monday wash-line.

Plasticine

The plasticine figurines were very good; little, stiff men, Teddy Bears and leaf-topped gourds; there was cut-paper work from the kindergarten; an exhibit of carefully-done posters and printed alphabets, and a particularly attractive corner was the one devoted to books made by the small men and women, to contain leaves of their own gathering, each variety pressed and attached to its own leaf, labelled and dated. "Weeds" also occupied another volume, samples of familiar garden pests gathered from far and near being listed in order, with their stiffly-pressed leaves attaining an attractive appearance. The habitat was carefully marked on each; whether from "California," in one instance, or the more commonly-met "by the creek," or "back yard," as in the case of the catnip, the dandelion, and the toad-flax.

The manual training corner had pretty book racks, well made, and colored reproductions of "Jiggs" and "Happy Hooligan" in furious reds and blues.

The needlework had excellent examples of the careful training of small future housewifes, in tiny, dainty aprons, towels, embroidered and initialled; dolls' clothes; hemming in tiny fine stitches; small cushions done in the carpet stitch; and socks beautifully darned.

Prizes for winners in the different rooms were colored, printed ribbons, presented by the Home and School Association, and were won as follows:—

Steer, who were assisted in the afternoon by members of the Association, and in the evenings by Mrs. R. Denne and the Misses Bennet, Buck and Dick. Executive members of the different Home and School Associations of the city were entertained by the ladies on this occasion. Mrs. F. Miller, Mrs. G. J. Johnson and Mrs. E. H. Bartlett received the guests.

Music was provided in the afternoon by Miss Margaret Denne, with a programme in the evening, presided over by Mr. R. F. Downey, in which vocal solos were rendered by Miss Grace Todd, who sang "Little Rose Among the Roses," and "The Fairy Children," and by Mr. J. Anderson, who responded to an encore for the "Old Brigade" by singing "Auld Lang Syne," in good voice. Miss Josephine McGill gave two readings: "A-hum" and "Out to Grandma's"; Mr. Leslie Chew played a selection on his Hawaiian guitar, and Master Arnold Spencer a violin solo.

Address also-

Addresses were given by Mrs. W. R. Morris and Mr. R. F. Downey, the former speaking particularly of the splendid exhibit of art work by the children, and the latter referring to the advancement made by the scholars in this branch of the work, and to the good work of the Home and School Association in supplying milk to undernourished children and providing prizes and "At Homes."

BED BUG POISON

There are dozens of preparations recommended to destroy bed bugs. But the preparation that gives the best results is POST'S BED BUG POISON.

A few applications of this Poison will soon wipe out the pest. It is composed of Corrosive Sublimate, methyl-hydrate, and carbolic acid, and as it is very poisonous it should be kept out of the reach of children.

Post's Bed Bug Poison is sold at Lynch's Drug Store, 168 Hunter St. 3d-29-31-2

He was urged to withhold it until the Parliament convenes at Peking. If a vacancy occurs before a new President takes office, Acting Premier Chow Tsu-Chi will act.

PLEASANT TALENT TEA AT ART SHOW

Exhibit of Children's Work Reflects Much Credit.

There was a splendid attendance yesterday afternoon at the art exhibit of children's work in the King Edward School, in connection with which the Home and School Association of the school held a pleasant talent tea. The exhibit of work in the different grades includes some fine examples of the work carried on in the art section, including the charcoal, crayon and water-color efforts of the pupils, many of which show promising talent. The sewing is daintily done by girls of the various classes, in embroidery, hemming and fine darning work. Ribbons for prize winners were presented by the association.

A short enjoyable musical programme was rendered, with instrumental solos by Miss Letitia Elliott and Miss Cole, May Pollock, Muriel Rooke, Mary Wood and Margaret Andrews. Miss Marguerite gave a reading and Mr. Bert Cutmore sang.

Ladies of the Association who helped in the service of light refreshments were Mrs. W. G. Howden, convenor, with Mesdames Pollock, Fife, Heal, Girard, Rooke and Andrews, assisted by teachers on the staff.

RETURNED FROM WINTER SPENT IN CALIFORNIA.

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Huffman Describe Frequent Motor Trips.

(Contributed).

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. H. Huffman have returned after spending the winter at Long Beach, California, with Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Pearson. While there they made frequent motor trips to all parts of Southern California, where the automobile club has built some wonderful roads, and one can travel for days and never leave the paved boulevard. One passes through one orange grove after another; also lemon, grapefruit and walnut groves. The different Beach resorts along the coast were also visited as well as the inland towns, the most attractive of these being Pasadena, where is held a tournament of roses every New Year's Day, and where are situated the famous Busche Gardens.

The drive up the Santa Anna Canyon to Riverside at the foot of the snow-capped mountains was one to be remembered. One here had a view of rugged snow-capped mountains, and fertile valleys beneath. The famous Mission Inn at Riverside was visited—a relict of the old Spanish Missions. The museum and the furnishings, some of which are centuries old, are very interesting.

Along the Hollywood Boulevard from Los Angeles to Santa Monica one gets a wonderful view of the city of Los Angeles, with the Pacific Ocean in the distance. The Japanese Gardens in the Beverly Hills were like a glimpse of fairyland.

A trip on the Pacific to the Catalina Island on the glass-bottomed boat, with the view of the submarine gardens, one of Nature's wonders, will never be forgotten.

An interesting incident of their homeward trip was the sight of oil being pumped out of the ocean between Los Angeles and San Francisco.

After covering some 7,800 miles by rail, they are both glad to be back in their home town once more — "East, West—Home's best."

FAVORS OPEN DOOR FOR IMMIGRATION.

Declares Such Policy Has Built Up U. S.

Referring to the movement started by President Cohen of the Canadian Jewish Congress, Montreal, in which he urges Jews and Gentiles alike to bring to the attention of members of Parliament the necessity for freer immigration into Canada, Mr. M. Fine, the George Street merchant, is of the opinion that the public mind is not fully informed on the reason for this request. In Mr. Fines, opinion, the policy of freer immigration into any country is fully justified by the success attained by the "open door," system of the United States of America, in receiving and converting into America citizens, the ploy glot population which has built up the wonderful nation to the south of us, and it seems to him like a short-sighted national outlook to place restrictions on immigration into a young country. However, this is not the point that the Jewish people in particular wish to emphasize. Their desire for admittance to the United States and Canada, according to Mr. Fine, is not based on pecuniary motives at the present time, because they can make just as good a living, and sometimes better, in their own native land. What they want is safety from persecution and the freedom and liberty of our democratic continent. Reminded that immigration restrictions were not placed alone on the Jewish race, Mr. Fine agreed, but said that the authorities forgot that the Jews are "the most suffering race," of all, especially in the Old Country, where every man's hand is against the Hebrew, and where safety and liberty are nowhere to be found. Referring to the case of a Jewish merchant and his daughter, news of which had recently come to him in a letter from his own home in Poland, an instance in which the two, venturing forth from their own village, were immediately waylaid and killed, and to the example of his own old father, who must be brought out to this country to save him from a probable similar fate, Mr. Fine remarked with passionate emphasis; "Are you going to say here, let them be killed, we do not care!"

To the Jews, then, used to centuries of persecution in the Old Land, this continent is the Mecca to which they turn in hope and longing, for the safety, the liberty and the pursuit of happiness which are supposed to be man's rightful heritage, denied him in his native land, and they look on the gradually-closing doors on this side of the ocean with a fear and despair which can not be comprehended by more fortunately-placed dwellers in a country which has always stood for the right of every human being to peace of mind and freedom from persecution and cruelty.

"We do not hurt them, here," said Mr. Fine, harking back to the days, some fourteen years ago, when there were few business establishments in the block directly below Charlotte Street on George, where he himself first settled in business, making the pioneer in a district that now holds many thriving stores, and occupying a building at that time which rented for eighteen dollars per month, and later increased in value sufficiently to bring in its owner a rental of $60 for the same period.

A Grateful Mother Speaks in Favor of Dr. Henderson's Herb Tablets

Mrs. C. E. Earl, Toronto, says:

I am pleased to inform you that our boy, Eddie, has been completely cured of Bladder Trouble through using Dr. Henderson's Herb Tablets. He is now 14 years old and has not been able to retain his urine which caused us a great deal of worry and trouble. We tried different doctors and medicines but never received any help until advised to try your Tablets. After treating with them for a few weeks they have completely cured him. I would advise mothers who have children afflicted in this way to give them a trial. I will consider it a pleasure to explain his case more fully on request.

Should you or any of your children be afflicted in a similar way we are confident they would produce similar results. Don't fail to give them a trial.

This Season's Sleeve Styles

A gown may have much or nothing up its sleeve—the important thing is the sleeve. Sometimes it hides in ambush, as in the gown in the sketch, pretending to be part of the irregularly draped tunic. Sometimes it is slashed and filled in with tucked material or cloth of another color. Sometimes it is tucked in points to match the skirt.

Or it is ruffled and extremely wide. Then again, it may be very full indeed and yet gathered in to a tight little cuff at the wrist.

Material, purpose, color have nothing to do with the matter. Any new sleeve is fashionable. To each gown its own sleeve—there is no excuse for duplication.

TRUE DETECTIVE STORIES

OUT OF THE AIR

(Copyright, 1921, By The Eheeler Syndicate, Inc.)

Somewhere, somehow, the Germans were getting messages through from the United States to the Fatherland. That much was certain. Washington knew it beyond the shadow of a doubt, but the way in which these messages were transmitted was a mystery—dark, and apparently unfathomable.

This was in the days before America entered the war, in the days when the United States was, theoretically at least, a neutral nation. But Von Bernstorff, Von Papen and the rest of the Embassy at Washington were doing everything they could to further their schemes from this side of the Atlantic. That these schemes were directed against the peace and well-being of a friendly nation, that by them they were plotting in direct defiance of the laws of diplomacy and the rules of warfare, meant nothing to the Germans.

"The end," they argued, "justifies all the means necessary to bring it about."

Therefore the Embassy continued to lay its fire-treps and bomb-plots, its plans for the wholesale destruction of neutral property and the sinking of scores of ships—worried, not by conscience, but by the far-reaching all-seeing eye of the United States Secret Service.

But not even the Secret Service could penetrate the mystery of the messages. That these were flashed from the huge wireless towers on this side of the Atlantic, or relayed from the German radio stations, seemed fairly obvious. But how?

"They must be sending the stuff through the air," argued the Chief of the Secret Service to Talbott, one of his best men, "for the simple reason that we've closed all their other channels. But, try as we can, we don't seem to be able to nail them at it. And, until we get hold of something tangible, we can't remove the German operators at the commercial stations."

"Any idea as to the code they are using?" asked Talbott.

"None at all, but it's probably concealed somewhere in the messages which they send out to the ships at sea—press bulletins, stock quotations and the like. We've studied them carefully, but haven't been able to find a thing."

"How about that outburst from Nauen every morning?"

"The only explanation for that, seems to be that it's an attempt to 'fog the air'" so that ships and other towers can't get anything through."

"Yes, but in that case would the Germans send it for an hour early every morning? Why not all day long? And why that hash of language that doesn't mean a thing? If they were trying to fog things they'd wireless the Bible or Neitsche or excerpts from some other long book instead of that mess of meaningless rot."

"All right," retorted the Chief, "if you think there's a clue there, go to it. If you can discover anything you'll be doing more than the rest of the code and cipher experts have been able to do.

But Talbott didn't begin his investigations with a study of the Nauen "hash." He made his way at first to the laboratory of a man named Charles E. Apgar, a deep student of wireless telegraphy. It was to Apgar that he told his troubles and, when he had finished, the expert leaned forward and picked up something from the table in front of him.

"See that?" Apgar asked. Talbott nodded.

"Looks like an old-fashioned cylindrical phonograph record," he said.

"Just what it is," admitted the expert, "only you use it in connection with a wireless phonograph."

"A wireless phonograph?" and the Government operative's voice showed that he had never heard of such a contrivance.!

"Yes—a phonograph attached to the receiving end of a radio station. I just finished working on it a few days ago and I think it's just what you need for this job. It will record and keep track of every sound that comes into the station, enabling you to 'listen in' on messages months after they have been sent. With a supply of these records and the necessary patience you ought to be able to figure out the system the Huns are using, without their being any the wiser. It may take weeks or even months, but it's just a question of keeping everlastingly at it."

Apgar was right. Talbott found that it took him nearly four months to get on to the system—four months of ceaseless listening-in at the end of a De Forest audion detector which picks up sound waves from thousands of miles away, and even when he would never have located the secret had it not been for the wax cylinders. But with the aid of these automatic detectives he was able to repeat each message until he had it almost by heart, trying out the various combinations and symbols until he stumbled across the right one.

Then, one morning when the Chief of the Secret Service least expected him, he burst into the office with the exclamation:

"I've got it—the fifth, tenth and fifteenth flashes! See?" and he held out a sheet of paper on which were row upon row of figures and letters, commencing with "5—8—K—14—B."

"Looks interesting," admitted the Chief, "but what does it mean?"

"Got a German dictionary here? No—well I have. Luckily it's an old edition—just the one they're using for the code. The letters give the numbers of the page and the figures designate the words, the big ones in bold type. Five and eight K means the fifth and eighth words on page Eleven, 14 B means the fourteenth word on page Two and so on. By spacing 'em so far apart in the meaningless wireless messages—or even in the press bulletins sent out from this side—they are able to fill in with lots of stuff to throw you off the scent. But the code's simple enough—that's what makes it such a wonder!"

And it wasn't until Von Bernstorff received his sailing orders that he knew the Secret Service had been plucking his messages and his instructions out of the air, through the ingenious use of a wax phonograph cylinder.

CROFT LAUGHS AT CHARGE OF NOEL'S MURDER

Considers Imprisonment a Joke and Says That He Has Nothing to Confess.

TRIAL POSTPONED

CHATHAM, Ont., June 2 (Special to The Examiner). — The postponement of the trial of Clayton Croft, the young Raliegh Township farmer held by the Crown in connection with the murder of Gus Noel, about the middle of May, was announced by Hight Constable Peters to-day.

Croft will not be arraigned to answer the charge until Tuesday.

The inquest instead will begin at Charing Cross.

Croft, at the jail, shows the utmost unconcern, denying all knowledge of how Noel's disfigured body came to be under the stable floor at Noel's farm.

"It's no use of me confessing when I didn't do anything," he replied to Constable Peters.

A typical, slim, young farmer, of medium height and fair hair, he laughs when told of new evidences which point suspiciously at him. He refuses to consider his imprisonment as anything except a huge joke.

Different in the extreme is Croft's present attitude to that of the afternoon of 16th May when, according to Mrs. David Walker, a neighbour of Croft's at Charing Cross, he came to her place to use the telephone, speaking vaguely of some accident that had occurred, he excitedly pleaded with his wife, who was visiting, not to come home that day.

Two of the principal witnesses of the Crown, Mr. and Mrs. Walker, will be present at the inquest to-night.

Among the eighteen witnesses subpoenaed by the Crown is the brother of Croft. He it was who discovered Noel's body under the stable floor on 25th May.

In the absence of R. L. Brackin, M.P.P., counsel for Croft, who is not expected from Toronto till to-morrow, his partner, W. C. Lamarsh, will represent the prisoner at Charing Cross to-night.

Crown Attorney H. D. Smith, K.C., has charge of the case for the Crown.

An adjournment is expected early this evening, and a change of venue to Chatham, where the prosecution will proceed at the Court House at the jail.

REACHES OTTAWA AHEAD OF HIKERS

McDonald the Deposed Leader Outmanoeuvres Riley's Ranks at Prescott.

KEMPTVILLE, Ont., June 2 — (Special to The Examiner).— Surprise and perhaps disappointment awaits the veterans at Ottawa.

McDonald, their deposed general, as the lone reprsentative of McDonald's Army, by a master stroke, has arranged for the big interview this afternoon, while the tired hikers will be sweltering along the road to Manotick.

Such is fortune of war, after Riley turned down the trucks at Spencerville which would have landed them there last night.

McDonald left the Army at Prescott yesterday morning on learning that they had decided to reduce him to the rank of private in his absence in hospital.

Instead of returning to Toronto with the money they gave him for his fare, he proceeded to the capital, where, according to his own statement over the telephone this morning, he met T. L. Church, who championed his cause.

"If the veterans have broken faith with their General, they have broken it with me," Mr. Church told the late General, according to the latter.

The North Toronto member has refused to have anything to do with the hikers, McDonald claims.

It is now a question of dealing with the one-man Army which represented the four hundred and fifty thousand returned soldiers.

Mr. Church denied the rumour that he would act as spokesman for the veterans.

The term McDonald's Army has evidently caught on, in spite of Riley's declaration yesterday that they could never hope to gain their objective under that name.

McDonald will present the claims of the returned men before H. M. Marler, M.P., chairman of the Committee of Soldiers' Grievances, this afternoon. He is also seeing Beland this morning.

Blissfuly ignorant of the conditions at the capital, the hikers have decided to lay over at Manotick, 15 miles from Ottawa, to celebrate the King's birthday—a celebration which will likely end with fireworks when they learn what will have happened this afternoon.

They say they have sufficient rations on hand to last them two days.

They intend to arrive in Ottawa in time for church parade.

Kemptville Women's Institute are supplying a feed of pies for lunch before they leave for Manotick at noon.

According to some reports, L. T. Coxwell, an Army and Navy Veteran, had aranged to meet the hikers with the bands. After hearing McDonald's story he cancelled this programme, and will refuse to receive them. He told the latter that the men were working to their own detriment in dismissing him after he had won the country's respect.

Health posters made by Ohio State University co-eds are being used throughout the country to increase interest in personal hygiene.

PRETTY COOL, THIS

Grafton's Window With Immense Ice Block Again Attracts Crowd.

The Grafton Co. window dressers have again given space to one of Peterborough's manufacturing concerns. The Sanitary Ice Co. have placed an immense block of their manufactured ice, in the centre of which is frozen a Grafton straw hat. The idea of the window this time is a combination of ice and hats. The ice man says, "Keep your food cool and sweet," while Grafton's say, "Wear a straw hat and keep cool." The size of the ice block attracts attention at once, and there is a constant crowd guessing the riddle of "straw hats and ice."

WEDDING BELLS

WELBOURN—MASTERS

The wedding took place at 2.30 yesterday afternoon, at St. James' Methodist church of Mary, daughter of the late Frank Masters and Mrs. Masters, of Centreton, Ont., to Herschel Fife Welbourn, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Welbourn, 218 Reid street, the pastor of the church, Rev. J. F. Chapman, performing the ceremony.

The bride entered the church, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion, on the arm of her grandfather, Charles Wilton, of Grafton, Ont., to the strains of the wedding march, played by A. Nicholls, organist. She was charmingly attired in a travelling suit of sand tricolette, with a hat to match, and carried sweetheart roses. Mrs. Masters, the brides' mother, and J. V. Fife, uncle of the bridegroom, acted as witnesses.

Mr. and Mrs. Welbourne left on the 4.50 train for a trip to Niagara. They will reside on Stewart street.

THE MARKETS

TORONTO STOCK MARKET

TORONTO, June 2. Canadian Press. — The strength displayed by Toronto Railway and the weakness of Can. Gen. Elec. were the outstanding features of this morning's session on the local stock exchange.

Toronto rails advanced to 69 1-2, with close at 69 1-4, a gain of 1 3-4 points. Can. Gen. Elec. continuing yesterday's decline, sold down to 75 1-2 with noon close at 77, a net loss of 5 1-2 points.

There is no apparent reason for the strength displayed for Toronto Rails Brazilian was off 1-2 at 47 1-2 but MacKay gained a full point on sales of 25 shares, closing at 94 1-4.

MONTREAL MARKET.

MONTREAL, June 2. Canadian Press. — Can. Gen. Elec. was the feature of the early trading on the local stock exchange during the first half hour this morning, registering a decline of 4 1-8 points to 79 7-8. Bell Tel. was up 1-4 at 110. Brazilian was down 3-8 at 47 1-2, and Canada Steamships 1-2 to 22. Other leaders were unchanged.

NEW YORK MARKETS

NEW YORK, June 2. Canadian Press. — Speculative or selected issues continued to feature the stock market at the dull opening of to-day's session. General Asphalt, Cal. Petroleum, Texas Co., and Producers and Refiners, made fractional gains; independent steels ignored prospective combination of Republic Midvale and Inland, only noteworthy movement in that group being 1 point advance in Republic preferred. Fractional advances among rails embraced Chesapeake & Ohio, Lehigh Valley, Southern Pacific and Rutland preferred. Foreign exchanges were irregular.

EXCHANGE HIGH

NEW YORK, June 2.—(Canadian Press).—Exchange on London made new high record for over three years in this market to-day demand bills selling at 4.47 1-8 against yesterday's high $4.45 3-4.

STERLING IRREGULAR

NEW YORK, June 2.—(Canadian Press.)—Sterling Exchange irregular demand rates. Great Britain 4.47 1-2 Canadian dollars 29-32 of one per cent. discount.

CHICAGO GRAINS

CHICAGO, June 2.—(Canadian Press). — Opening wheat prices which varied from unchanged figures to 1-4c lower with July 1.18 3-4 to 1.19 1-8 and Sept. 1.17 3-8 to 1.17 3-4 was followed by slight rally and then by moderate decline all around. Corn and Oats were easier with Wheat. After opening unchanged, to 1-4 to 3-8 higher July 62 62 3-8 corn market sagged. Oats started unchanged to 1-8c lower July 38 1-8 to 38 1-4 and later showed slight set back.

HIGH RECORD FOR STEEL

NEW YORK, June 2.—(Canadian Press).—Reductions in the call money rate to 4 1-2 per cent. buoyancy of sterling and creation of a new high record for the year in United States steel at 103, a rise of 2 1-2 points, influenced active buying of a wide assortment of stocks. Early weak features such as Republic and Midvale Steels and American Sumatra Tobacco rallied vigorously. Cluett Peabody, American Can Allis Chalmers, Owens Bottle, Martin Parry, Pierce Arrow preferred, Hendec Manufacturing, Dupont, Lake Eric and Western Common and preferred and Studebaker were marked up one to 2 1-2, these shares reflecting varied character of buying.

DISCUSSION ON THE ENFORCEMENT OF O.T.A.

Took Up Time of Provincial Legislature This Morning.

TORONTO, June 2.— (Canadian Press.)—At the morning session of the Ontario Legislature there was much discussion on enforcement of the Ontario Temperance Act. The clause in the proposed amendments which held that a man who counsels or aids in breach of O.T.A. is in the same class with men who actually commit the offence, was dropped. Other amendments which carried, provide penalties for false labels on liquor makes, the maximum penalty for having liquor in a public place a $100 fine instead of $200, a penalty of three months for selling unlawfully manufactured or adulterated liquor, and extra penalties for law enforcement officers convicted themselves of charges under the Act.

The bill to prevent transportation of liquor on highways of the province was also carried. The object of the bill is to curtail illegal importation of liquor into the United States.

INSPECTION TRIP LOCAL ENGINEERS.

Will Inspect New Power House at Raney Falls Saturday Afternoon.

The Peterborough branch of the Engineering Institute motor to Raney Falls to-morrow afternoon for the first out-of-town inspection trip of the season. The party will leave the Empress Hotel shortly after noon. So far, about 30 cars are expected to go, and the trip promises to be unusually successful.

The Hydro-Electric Power Commission will entertain the engineers to dinner in Campbellford, and there will also be present Mayor Meyers and the Council. The affair is assuming more auspicious proportions, and the courtesy of the Hydro is appreciated by the Peterborough branch. The party expects to leave shortly after noon so that the drive through the beautiful Trent country can be performed in a leisurely manner.

A police raid on a fashionable gambling house in London disclosed the fact that a young woman was regularly employed as croupier.

"Here Come the Elephants!"

DO you remember how you used to be on the job bright and early to see the circus parade? Remember how you thrilled as the lions, tigers and the big, lumbering elephants passed in review? How the horses, the blare of the bands, the antics of the clowns, and the glitter of it all inspired you with a fervid determination to see the real show—the big performance in the tent?

You didn't realize it then, but you were getting a lot out of an attractive advertisement.

Perhaps you don't realize it now, but other advertisements, just as attractive, just as interesting and far more valuable to you, parade daily before you in the columns of this paper.

The merchants and makers of everything you want or need, here display before you their most attractive wares. It is truly "the greatest show on earth."

The whole purpose of any advertisement is to excite your curiosity, gain your interest, arouse your desire, to tell you something you don't know; to remind you of something you have forgotton; to convince you of something over which you have been hesitating.

In short, the purpose of an advertisement is, in one way or another, to make you happier.

Read the advertisements and see if that isn't so ?

A Good Game in Junior City League Played at Riverside Last Evening.

BOWMANVILLE HERE TOMORROW

Rubber Town Team Meet Petes in Central League Fixture at Riverside.

The visit of the Bowmanville team to Peterboro for a Central Ontario League game with the Petes is the first appearence of a Bowmanville ball club here since the days of the old Midland League. Bowmanville has always been a good ball town and has turned out a crop of clever players. Their Central League outfit this year has a number of promising recruits and with Moise and Stark to steady their infield and four pitchers to select from the Rubber town crew is going to make a lot of trouble in the league race despite the fact that they dropped their first three games Mineguad who held Port Hope to two hits and two runs during the six innings he worked against the Ontarios may be on the rubber for Bowmanville tomorrow. The game is called for 3 o'clock.

Football

Two league games are scheduled for tomorrow, they are Comrades vs C.G.E. and Quakers vs Woolens.

The Comrades game will be played at King Edward Park with Frank McKinley as referee. The home team are endeavoring to obtain a change of uniform to make the distinction in colours more pronounced.

At the Oval the Quakers should give the Woolens a hard battle for points. Both teams played stiff matches during the week and so have had plenty of practice. J. Clark will be in charge.

The C.P.C. are taking a strong team to Lindsay. This will be the first Peterboro football aggregation to visit Lindsay this year and a big crowd is expected to witness the match.

Efforts are being made to reorganize the Comrades Junior club. They had a likely looking lot last year but couldn't manage to get any games. The result was that they disbanded.

There is a very balanced look about the Comrades place in the League table. Three points for three games. One won, one lost and one drawn and the same number (seven) in the goals scored for and against.

MANY BUILDINGS

took the eye of Robert Nicholls, and he rented it from Thomas Leonard, and occupied the house until he took over the Grover-Oddfellows house, as previously mentioned in this relation. The old Globe Hotel, still in use as a dwelling, on Charlotte Street (opposite the entrance to Louis Street), was of the first, and built by Thomas Harper. The arch over the high double doorway was at the time considered quite a well finished work. The house of Marcello Mowery, still inhabited and now in the environs of Riverside Park, was built in 1849. As Mowry came from Cobourg, and had large faith in the excellence of things made at that town, he had the brick for the house drawn in during the winter, from Cobourg. This house and several of others among the early ones were built by a brick-layer named Old John Thorn, a Cavan man, and a Blazer as well. His specialty was the Flemish bond way of laying brick, the courses being alternately crossed, making a very durable wall, and without the air space as we have it to-day. For purposes of record it may be stated that the first brick building on George Street was one erected by William Snyder, and stood, as near as may be located, on the ground covered by the Peterborough Hardware Co building. Mr. Snyder engaged in business as a genreal store. His advertisement appears in the local paper as early as 1845. Alex Donnolly afterwards kept store in the same building, and named his store "The Long Arm Chop," from a particular and much esteemed brand of tea. The town hall, also of brick, was erected on the Market Square, in 1851.

Just to Mention a Few

Large claim is made by many builders that, save for the outside appearance, the house constructed of wood is as serviceable and durable as brick. In support, there are many examples. The house standing on the Nicholls Oval, on the bluff facing the river, long known to children as the "Ghost House," was built by Capt. Bray, a retired naval officer, who had fought under Nelson and at Aboukir Bay and Trafalgar and who located here and built the house, of wood, in 1833. After his death, it was used by Mossom Boyd before he took over the stone house on Smithtown Hill. The old rough-cast house, on Aylmer Street, north of the Creamery, dates back to 1836, and survived the wear and tear of hotel life for thirty years or longer. The now fine appearing dwelling at the corner of Aylmer and Dalhousie Streets has eighty-eight years of service to its credit. It was built by Col. Madge, an English officer, in 1834. He had previously settled in township of Harvey, but came out of the forest after a few years experience and stayed on the town site. The house for several, indeed many years, was the home of J. R. Ormond. Then of J. R. Stratton. Afterwards of H. P. Kennedy. It is true that the building has had much of alteration and improvement but the timber frame inside will endure for another fifty years.

A wooden house, comely in its old age and full of quiet service is that built by James Lince, corner of Aylmer and London Streets in the year 1835. He was a veteran of Waterloo, came to Canada that year and settled. The cottage has been turned around on the lot and is good for another half-century of service. The English house, on Charlotte Street, now No. 173, next to the creek, is all that is left of the original buildings on that side of the street for blocks to the west. Built by Thomas Leonard in 1835, the house has sheltered families for eighty years and still giving service. Of wood and rough-cast variety. The low cottage, adjoining the creek, (west side), on Hunter Street, was built by Samuel Albro, uncle of Sheriff Hall, before 1840. It was for many years the home of Dr. McNabb, and afterwards that of Walter Patterson. On Brock Street across the lane from Dr. Eastwood's, (north side of the street), is the only dwelling left of the pioneer houses. Its age is not known, but has been there for over eighty years. I was the home of Col. Crawford, and for a time Dr. Crawford, the father of the noted Canadian poetess, Isabel Valency Crawford, lived there too, the men folk being distantly related. As a girl, the authoress lived in the house until the family moved on to Water Street, and lived in a house overlooking the river. One section of the row of brick dwellings that line the east side of the street.

Many old houses, landmarks at one time, and of some historical interest owing to the personal characteristics of the owners, have passed away within the last forty years. Four typical houses, or dwellings stood on the high bank of the river, opposite the now power house of the Hydraulic Co. The houses were of the cottage style, wide verandahs, French windows, opening down to the floors, big fireplaces, the whole arreangement admirably unsuited to the rigors of a Canadian winter. Each had been painted a different color. The white house was built by Col. Brown, and officer of the Kentish Fusiliers, who located here in 1832. Typical retired military man. He turned out and raised a company that armed themselves with muskets, rifles and shot-guns and footed it to Toronto to assist in putting down the rebellion of 1837-38. The yellow house was built by Major Sharpe, or as he was familiarly known, as Sam Sharpe. He was of sporting proclivities, and he imbibed much of the current beverages, to his detriment. It was jocularly said that Bill Sharpe always carried in his pocket a piece of dried codfish, very salty and a thirst provoker.

Community Effort

Mention might be made of the building of the fine old stone house, so long the home of late Peter Connal. The house was actually built as a community effort for the purpose of retaining among the people the services of Dr. John Hutchison, a pioneer physician and well beloved for his unwearing kindness and helpfulness. The story of the effort made and the erection of this house has already been told in these columns.

Lest this writing run to excessive length many other houses must be left unmentioned. Numbers have attached something of historic interest, growing out of the personality of those who occupied and their connection with the affairs of the municinality. The home of Richard Hall (Water Street, north), had been occupied some years before the incorporation of the town, having been the property of the first Mayor of the town, Thomas Benson. It is indeed fitting that this fine residence of the early days of the town should be in the hands of the dean of the Merchant fraternity of the city, for it is an even guess that Mr. Hall had outlived all who were his contemporaries and carried on under his personal participation the business, taking up as a youth the interests of Nicholls & Hall, when other activities claimed the firm's attention. Mr. Hall has been identified with the business since 1858, when he entered as a lad of fifteen years of age.

WOMEN BROKERS!

THREE HELP THEIR SEX INVEST

Three Chicago women own, operate and control an investment company that caters exclusively to women.

"We felt thousands of women would like to invest their money, but were timid about entering the austere banking houses and asking innumerable questions of men" explains Mrs. Ralph D. Small, president.

"In our establishment we have tried to preserve the same atmosphere of social graciousness and good taste in furnishing and in receiving our clients that women exhibit in their homes."

Associated with Mrs. Small are Miss Agnes Foreman, business fanager, and Miss Jessie Burdeau, general manager.

TEACHES WIVES TO HOLD HUSBANDS!

That's One Daily Job of First Social Surgeon

BY MARIAN HALE.

Social surgery is a new profession for women. At the present time I know of but one practitioner —Mlle. Louise of New York.

To her thousands of women turn when they seem to be losing their hold on their husbands and their positions.

Mlle. Louise gives each patient a thorough examination by means of a searching questionnaire, which reveals the woman's character.

If she is selfish, self-centred, careless hypercritical or hypersensitive, the questionnaire will reveal it.

Then doctor and patient discuss the symptoms and by a process of social surgery and general toning up of the system get the woman in the social trim to win back her husband or to become a social leader or whatever she desires.

* * *

"If a woman is honest enough to face her shortcomings and remedy them she has the first element she needs for social success," says Mlle. Louise.

What Mlle. Louise really does is to teach personality, charm and poise. She believes these are a woman's greatest social asset and they may be taught just as geography or history.

"I begin to develop a personality by the process of elimination," she explains.

"The questionnaire reveals a woman's shortcomings. We go over the things that should be eliminated. That is the first step.

"Charm is developed by building up the fine qualities, which are revealed in the questionnaire also. It is the strengthening and developing of natural qualities that make a woman distinctive.

"Poise comes when a woman knows exactly what to do under all circumstances — that is, when she knows all the rules of etiquette. This is the easiest of the three to teach.

"When she is absolutely certain on these points she is never awkward or without poise."

* * *

In her charming apartment at the Mare Antoinette Hotel Mlle. Louise has a complete set of dishes, silverware, linen and service for all occasions from the family breakfast to the formal banquet.

The horror of using the wrong fork and the indecision that comes from unfamiliarity with the correct thing need never hamper her patients.

In her classes are also debutantes who come to her to take out insurance against social failure; business women who are eager to learn the social graces that go with the positions they are striving to reach and women who are trying to keep ahead of the social game.

PUBLIC SCHOOL LACROSSE.

Walter Small would like to have a full turn-out of the Public school lacrosse players Saturday morning at Central Park. The youngsters will have the field to themselves all morning. Boys who want to learn the game, but have no stick need not let that deter them for Walter Smaill has plenty to put out on loan. The practice starts at 9 a.m.

AT THE THEATRES

CAPITOL — "The Man From Home," srreen version of the novel that brought Booth Tarkintgon lasting fame. Also the balance of a Capitol premier programme, including comedy.

ROYAL — Mutt and Jeff in a "Tongue Sandwich"; Dustin Farnum in "Iron to Gold"; Sunshine comedy, "The Barnstormers," and other features.

REGENT—"The Guttersnipe," a tale of New York's "Irish Ghetto." Also a good snappy comedy and feature western drama.

Capitol Entertainment

The screening of Booth Tarkington's popular novel "The Man From Home", has been well done. It is an interesting picture, with some magnificent scenic effects achieved by backgrounds of the sea and sky and mountains of sunny Italy. The elements of the original story have been slightly enlarged on but "The Man From Home', Daniel Voorhees Pike, of Kokomo, U.S.A. looms large in the background. He butts righ in on the careful plans of the three artistocratic adventurers who are negotiating a half-million dollar marriage between the rascally young Prince and the snobbish American heiress. The firendly traveller the original nobleman of the story has been converted into a King on the screen, but the genial American hails him as "doc" and orders him around as blithely as if he were a plain citizen. There is an amusing scene when Dan descends to the kitchen of the ultra-fashionable Italian hotel, and instructs the chef in the gentle art of frying ham and eggs, "American style." The tale is complicated by the introduction of Faustina, a pretty Italian with whom the fickle-minded Prince becomes infatuated, and whom he later kills when she attempts to stab him, through jealousy. It is a vivacious, interesting picture, with plenty of amusing situations rising out of conflict between old-world modes of thought and the more democratic methods of the continent on this side of the water.

There is a splendid "Torchy" comedy, featuring Johnny Hines, an Aesop's Fable fantasy, screen snapshots, and any lady desiring to get rid of a few pounds of superfluous flesh has only to attend the Capitol Theatre this week to see just how she may do it, in the screening of Dr. Anderson's system, in which he gets rid of 40 pounds of extra material within the space of five months.

AT THE ROYAL.

Every moving picture cannot, of course, suit every person in an audience. Some want western, some want love stories, some want thrills, some want adventure and some, possibly the majority, want comedy. Tonight we have a well chosen assortment of subjects with comedy in the lead. The big feature is a stirring western romance full of thrills, love and seasoned by numerous bits of high-class comedy, by name, "Iron to Gold." The leading role of Tom Curtis is played by Dustin Farnum, who is too well known to every patron of the movies to need eulogy or comment. The scene is laid in and about a little mining town in the Colorado mountains. George Kirby and his wife visit the town as Kirby owns a rich mine nearby. Tom Curtis has been made an outlaw by his former friend and partner, Kirby. He is an honest man at heart, but driven from society by false testimony of Kirby. Kirby's wife is abducted by bandits and rescued by Curtis before he had learned her identity as Kirby's wife. During the rescue Mrs. Kirby nurses Curtis at the latter's shack as he had been wounded in her defence. The sheriff leads a possee in a hunt for Curtis. Kirby telegraphs for a professional gunman to New York to get Curtis done for. The plot is highly exciting and the mountain scenery something beautiful. Fox "News" is an interesting reel with scenes of current events which include, among other subjects, Lieut. Gov. Cockshut at the Toronto Parliament Buildings, a war dance of African warriors, the capture of a hundred pound turtle by bathers at Palm Beach, etc. It is not intended as comedy, but it is a fact that the big turtle draws in its head when a lady bather in a 1922 bath suit approaches it. Then there is that inimitable comedian, Jimmy Aubrey, in a comedy of the farm, called "Yaps and Yokels." This comedy is a scream. Mutt and Jeff appear in a Chinese comedy. The Sunshine comedy called "The Barnstormers" shows the adventures and trials of a cheap fly by night theatrical troupe. A well balanced programme.

UNIVERSAL STAR ENJOYS ACTION FILMS

The little Universal flapper star has a role with plenty of the afore-mentioned quality in "The Guttersnipe" at the Regent Theatre to-day.

She will be seen by you as a fighting, flirting firecat of the "Irish Ghetto" of New York, in the role of Mazie, a shop girl, in a story written directly for the star by Percival Wilde and well fitted to the talent for girlish impersonations which Miss Walton undoubtedly possesses. Dallas Fitzgerald directed the filming of the plot from a scenario by Wallace Clifton.

Gladys is only eighteen, but she has some very mature ideas about her art.

WEDDING BELLS

PUFFER—YOUNG.

A quiet but pretty wedding took place at 7 o'clock yesterday morning, at Knox Presbyterian Church, when Mabel, only daughter of Mrs. E. J. Young, 494 Patterson Street, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Gordon T. Puffer, son of Mr. and Mrs. I. Puffer, Norwood. Rev. J. A. McKenzie performed the ceremony.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her uncle, Mr. Harry Evans, to the strains of the Wedding March, played by Mrs J. H. Renwick. She was becomingly attired in suit dress of navy meteor crepe, the cape lined with shrimp pink satin, with navy hat to match, and carrying a bouquet of swetheart roses and lilies of the valley. Her attendant, Miss Florence Johnston, wore black meteor crepe with black hat, and carried ophelia roses. Mr. William Carey supported the groom. During the signing of the register, Mrs. Ida Lynn Clark sang very sweetly "Because."

Mr. and Mrs. Puffer left on the 7.35 C.P.R. train for Toronto and other points for a short honeymoon. The bridegroom, who is a member of the local Police Force, and the bride, who was on the office staff of the City Clerk's department, were the recipients of many useful and beautiful gifts. They will reside in Peterborough.

The funeral will take place on Sunday.

MRS. H. B. YALE.

On Thursday forenoon, June 1st, 1922, at her late residence, 477 Albert street, city, after a short illness, the death occurred of Mrs. H. B. Yale. She was a faithful member of Knox Presbyterian Church and a devoted worker in the Master's service. She leaves to mourn her loss four sisters and three brothers, and of the immediate family, Mrs. H. B. Jackson, Mrs. K. M. Denoon and Mr. Walter W. Yale, of Peterborough, and Mrs. P. B. MacQueen, of Paris, Ont., who mourn the loss of a loving, faithful mother.

HUGH CRUIKSHANK.

The death of Hugh Cruikshank, which took place on Tuesday, 30th May, at the age of 75 years, removes a most highly respected citizen of Fraserville, where he had resided for 43 years, having settled there, with his wife, on their coming to Canada from the County Cavan, Ireland. His wife, whose maiden name was Jane Thistle, predeceased him by five years at the age of 72.

The deceased was a member of the Methodist church and a staunch Liberal, and his kindly deeds made for him many warm friends.

Five sons, Robert, Hugh and James, of Peterborough, John and Hastings, and Wm. of Fraserville, and thre daughters, Mrs. A. Armstrong and Mrs. James Ballantyne, of Peterborough, and Mrs. R. J. Delehey of Fraserville, survive their parents.

The funeral service was held yesterday at 2 p.m., at the home of his son, William, at Fraserville, by Rev. R. M. Patterson.

MRS. MARGARET HENNESSEY

Mr. D. Hennessey, 24 Cricket Place, City, received word on Tuesday of the death of his mother, Mrs. Margaret Hennessey, who died on Tuesday morning May 30th 1922.

She was born in Ireland 97 years ago and was for sometime a resident of this city, but for the past 29 years has lived in New York. She is survived by five sons: Daniel of this city, Michael and John of New York City, Stephen and James of Chicago and two daughters: Mrs. Jos. Meagher of New York and Catherine of New York City.

The funeral took place on Thursday morning June 1st from her late residence.

ANNABELLE KIRKE GALLIVAN.

An announcement that proved a shock to the entire community was that of the death at six o'clock last evening, in St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, of Annabelle Regina Kirke, beloved wife of James V. Gallivan, M.D., of this city. The deceased, who was a native of Brooklyn, New York, and was married to Dr. Gallivan in January of 1911, was well-known throughout the city and surrounding district, and had made a host of friends during her residence here, by her outstanding qualities of cheerful, generous-hearted kindliness. Essentially charitable and broad-minded, Mrs. Gallivan was an exponent of Christian womanliness in the community in which she lived. Her charitable activities were unending, and she will long be remembered by many to whom she extended the secret mantle of charity, both material and mental, in their time of need. Always energetic, she was constantly active in all good works, both in her immediate neighborhood, abroad amongst the needy, and in the societies of her church. She was president of the Catholic Women's League during the first year of its inauguration here, and piloted it successfully through the most trying period in any society. A joyous-hearted, kindly, broad-minded woman, with never-ceasing springs of generous impulse ready for every call, from stranger and family alike, "the little lady," as she was affectionately termed, will not soon be forgotten by those who knew and loved her.

Mrs. Gallivan is survived by her sorrowing husband, her infant son, mother, five sisters and one brother. The remains arrived in the city this afternoon on the 5.35 G.T.R. train. Funeral announcement later.

HIKERS STILL PLAN PRESENT THEIR DEMAND

Leader Riley Would Like to Have "General" McDonald Arrested -- Pies Are Plentiful.

BACK ON CUSHIONS

MANOTICK, Ont., June 3. — (Special.) — McDonald's hostile activity would driv the hikers to open rioting, their leader, Riley, declared, when he asked for the former's arrest last night at North Gower.

When they heard that McDonald had preceded them to Ottawa, they thought they still had a chance. When they read that he had been calling their leader Riley a "Sinn Feiner," there was an immediate explosion.

This they declared was adding insult to injury.

When the news of their former General's success at Ottawa reached Riley at Kemptville, he said that McDonald was merely an individual, and could have nothing to say for the movement. He had resigned and his resignation accepted. The hikers would present their case as they had planned.

At North Gower Ric got in touch with one of the advance guards over the phone at Ottawa. Then he learned that the Examiner had published an interview in which McDonald was quoted as having called him a "Sinn Feiner." The air was electric with excitement when the news was broken to the men, who clamored for the deposed chief's arrest. Riley appealed to a provincial police inspector to have McDonald held in Ottawa until the column arrived. Unless that was done nothing could stop the men from rioting.

A Big "If."

The Inspector explained that the police could not arrest the ex-general without someone swearing out information that would justify a warrant being issued. With a warrant the Inspector said, McDonald would be behind the bars in five minutes. There was a pretty big "if" in the case, but the Inspector left it to Riley to get over it. It was up to the little Irishman to find a specific charge that would satisfy a Crown Attorney or a Magistrate that an arrest would be justified and Riley was so sure that he could deliver the goods that he proceeded at once to Ottawa by motor.

Meanwhile the men settled down to a little sing song in front of the town hall. The villagers turned out to hear the old Kentucky and Hawaiian melodies, and everybody was happy once more.

Everywhere the people received the veterans with real country hospitality. Yesterday morning the members of the Women's Institute at Kemptville got busy and by noon there was a feed of hot pies for all the men. However motors are very scarce and it looks as though the men have had their last lift on the way to Ottawa. But they have high hopes for a ride on the cushions from the Capital back to Toronto. The rumour that a train will be supplied they take for granted. The average hiker looks forward to getting a new suit of clothes and a pocketful of banknotes of indefinite denomination out of the march.

Road Adheres to Present Location

Mr. T. Tooms, M.P.P., has received the following letter from W. A. McLean, Deputy Minister of Highways, relative to the hill at Springville which is included in the new highway from Peterboro to Port Hope.

Thos. Tooms, Esq., M.P.P.
Legislative Assembly,
Ontario.

Dear Sir,—Your letter of the 17th instant to the Honourable Mr. Biggs has been referred to myself for attention.

As stated when inspecting the hill in question, my visit was made with a view to meeting the recommendation of residents of the locality, if at all possible.

In looking over the ground, however, and comparing it with our plans and profiles, it is evident that a casual inspection of the hill is deceptive; such as we used to term an "optical illusion".

The height of the hill is considerably greater than appears at first sight, and the grades are much steeper. This arises in part from a tendency to compare it with the lines of the old roadway which themselves carry a considerable grade.

To reduce the straight line road to a reasonable grade would involve a large amount of earth work; it would result in a long deep cut over the hill, and a long fill at the foot of the grade. It would be a disfigurement to the landscape, and would not be as easy a grade as the present road.

My inspection satisfied me that to carry out the necessary work on the straight line would be a disappointment to many of those who are now advocating it.

For these reasons, I am instructing our engineers to adhere to the present location; widen it on the east side, however, and relieve the existing curves so that the safety of the road will be much improved. Adequate drainage will be provided to prevent the breaking up of the road, which has characterized it in the past.

After a personal inspection of the location, I am fully satisfied that the decision which I have outlined is the right plan to follow.

Yours truly,
W. A. McLEAN,
Deputy Minister.

DRAW THE PURSE STRINGS TIGHTER

Council's Finance Com. Plan to Save War Tax

With a view to drawing the city's purse strings tighter, Council's Finance committee have a plan in mind by which they can avoid using war tax stamps on cheques as generously as heretofore. Ald. Phelan, Finance Minister, took the initial step in this connection last night, reminding the committee that the government's projected increase of war tax on cheques from 2 cents on "any" cheque to 2c. on every $50 would mean an increased expenditure for the city. Therefore he proposed that payments by the city treasurer to departments of municipal control such as the Utilities Commission, Charity Board, the Board of Education, be made by the specified amounts being debited by the bank against the city. Such payments, he said, could then be transferred from one city account to the other without the use of cheques. As some of these payments run into large figures, Ald. Phelan can see a saving of from $1200 to $1500 a year by resorting to the transference plan.

The committee concurred with their chairman's views, and should the project be found legal, it will be adopted.

The $2,500 grant to the Exhibition Board will be paid this month. Their grant last year was $3,000.

Plumbing Inspector Metheral will be paid the $75 a year allowed him for gas consumed by his car while on the city's business, in monthly installments. There is six months' allowance due him now, for which a cheque will be issued.

There were present at last night's meeting Chairman Ald. Phelan, Mayor Taylor, Ald. Crowe, Malcolm McIntyre, Jas. Hamilton and Walter Stocker.

THE WEATHER

There was another gentle shower early this morning, but more would be welcome. The total was but .05 of an inch. The Belleville Veterans are holding a celebration to-day and Monday, and have taken out "rain insurance." In other words should it rain to-day and Monday between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. to the depth of .10 they will receive $4,000, or on only one day $2,000. If it does not rain either day they receive nothing, and are out the amount of the premium.—W.P.

OFFICIAL FIGURES OF FAIR RECEIPTS

Prove Peterboro's Exhibition the Biggest in Eastern Ontario With the Exception of Ottawa.

In the annual report of the Agricultural Societies of Ontario for the year 1920 apepar the official returns of fairs in this district, which are rather interesting. At the Peterboro exhibition, two years ago, the total receipts were $20,165, of which $8,385 were gate receipts. The total receipts at Lindsay's fair that year were $12,969, of which $7,099 was taken at the gates. Peterboro's total actual expenditure including new buildings and other permanent improvements was $19,836 against Lindsay's $13,008, and the value of land and buildings here is quoted at $25,081 compared with Lindsay's plant, valued at $23,925.

For officers' salaries the Peterboro fair board paid out $205 and Lindsay $355, and for special attractions, Peterboro $4,257, and Lindsay, $3,014.

These are some of the official comparative figures that substantiate Peterboro's claim to be the biggest exhibition between Toronto and Ottawa.

Unemployment in City Has Been Relieved by Outside Construction

The unemployment situation in the city has been considerably relieved by outside construction work that is going on, according to Hugh Robertson, in charge of the Ontario Employmc... Agency here.

The building trades are active, and a large number of labourers are working on the roads.

Increased activity in draughting and patternmaking rooms indicate that there are prospects of considerable work ahead. The conditions industrially are not any worse. In several shops there has been a decided improvement.

A large number of machinists and toolmakers have gone to other centres, notably Oshawa and Windsor, where there is a boom on in the motor business. There has been a general trek of Old Country mechanics that came here in high hopes of getting steady work.

There is little unemployment noticed among women and girl workers. The offices of the Department are besieged for domestic help, and the supply never seems to quite meet the demand.

Summer resorts are now looking for girls, and locally the navigation companies are ready to sign up experienced cooks at $35.00 to $55.00 a month.

THE VETERANS OF 1866 MEET

Nine Answered the Roll Call --- Anniversary of Battle of Ridgeway.

Last evening the Peterborough members of the Veterans 1866 Association held their annual re-union in the Recreation Rooms of the Armouries.

The event commemorated the 56th anniversary of the Battle of Ridgeway.

Those present to answer the roll were Col. J. W. Miller, J. D. Collins, R. Tivey, H. Rush, W. C. Bourn, J. Kylie, A. Fitzgerald, G. Stenton, and R. J. Sanderson.

The following were guests of the evening: Rev. W. H. Young, of the George Street Methodist Church, J. Crane, M. H. Park, and John Smith.

The president, Col. J. W. Miller, opened the meeting with a very patriotic speech, and referred to the willing and hearty response of the men of '66 when called to arms.

The company listened with deep interest to an excellent and pleasing address by Rev. W. H. Young, while the musical numbers by Messrs. J. Crane, M. H. Park, and J. Smith were of a high order.

The Veterans and their guests made a happy group as they sat around the festive board to do justice to the god things provided by T. Hooper.

Conspicuous on the table was a beautiful bouquet of flowers, which, at the close of the entertainment, was presented to Mr. Crane by Comrade G. Stenton.

Mr. Crane, in reply, expressed his appreciation.

After supper, and while those who cared to smoke were enjoying a cigar, Mr. Tivey, the oldest member of the Association (eighty-five years of age), contributed two very amusing recitations, which were enjoyed by the entire company.

A vote of thanks was carried, with instructions to make public acknowledgment of the kindness of Mr. R. Reid, who placed one of his cars free of charge for the comfort and convenience of a few of the old men who were somewhat under the weather.

STATIC TROUBLE AT THE RADIO CONCERT

Music from Schenectady was heard faintly, but with fair clearness at the radio concert given at the G.W.V.A. Hall last evening. In tuning in for concerts from other sources great difficulty was experienced through static interference, and it was explained that the atmospheric conditions were not the best for radio work. A thunder storm was in progress in the vicinity, which also contributed greatly toward supplying interfering noises.

The music which was heard came from the apparatus but faintly, and it was necessary for the audience to leave their seats and gather around the apparatus in order to hear.

Scotch Dancing.

Between and after the radio numbers Miss Annie Logan gave an exhibition of dancing which pleased all who saw her. This young lassie has just arrived in this country from Scotland, where she captured seventy-nine medals and four cups in dancing contests. Last night was her first appearance in this country. Three Scotch dances, including the Highland fling and the sword dance comprised the first part of her programme, while in a later appearance she delighted her audience with an Irish jig. Bagpipe music was supplied for the dances by David Grant.

Harry Hotstone appeared in an excellent banjo solo, accompanied by his sister, Miss May Hotstone. A second appearance in which he rattled the bones, was also very well received.

The Rangers band was also on hand with an excellent supply of music.

HOW TO BEAT LANDLORDS

BERMONDSEY, Eng.—The Mayor has issued a notice to all tenants of Bermondsey that they are entitled to a reduction in rents owing to the fact that the taxes of the landlords have been decreased.

Protests Against Tax on Cheques

A special meeting of the Chamber of Commerce has been called for 1.30 p.m. on Monday, to consider the changes in taxation brought about by the Minister of Finance, and to make such recommendation as is considered expedient.

A recommendation from an outside Chamber of Commerce that intends sending a deputation to Ottawa next week, protesting against the 2-cent stamp tax on every $50.00 paid by cheque, will be considered, and in all probability given the stamp of approval.

The Toronto Chamber declares that the stamp tax is wrong in principle, detrimental to commerce, hinders banking, inflates currency by bringing about a large circulation of currency in the place of cheques, and is also considered a double tax on those who pay the sales tax.

The Toronto Chamber recommends the sales tax on wholesalers, jobbers, and retailers be increased to 2 1-2 and 5 per cent. and on imports 4 and 6 1-2 per cent.

PIONEER WORK OF TRENT WATERWAY

The Publicity Campaign Beginning to Show Results

The publicity campaign of the Trent Waterway Development Association has been proceeding quietly, but it is beginning to bear results. Prominent yachtsmen are being interested in the delightful Trent route and the pioneer work being carried on will be appreciated in the future if it is not now. Over 100 charts have been sent out to yacht and boat clubs in Canada and United States, and although only recently mailed replies have come from Commodore Aemilius Jarvis of the Royal Canadian, Toronto, and from N. R. Crawford, secretary, Bay City club thanking the association for the charts and advising that they will be framed and hung in the club rooms.

Commodore Jarvis asked that illustrated matter and maps be sent Henry L. Tiffany, Kilburn Mills, New Bedford, Mass. who is interested in motorboating. The suggestion was immediately acted on, in fact the policy of the association is to personally get in touch with all who might be interested, and acknowledgement of the maps is expected. By one enthusiast recommending another the Trent waterways are getting widely advertised. The Kiwanis Club is helping in the publicity work by sending out literature to 700 International Clubs, urging them to combine business and pleasure while they are attending the convention in Toronto next month by spending a few weeks in the seductive Trent district.

The date for the annual meeting which will be held in Lindsay sometime this month has not been set yet. A large attendance is looked for and the reports should be encouraging. The adversities encountered have only to encourage the officers and impress them with the fact that his section of the province is not getting the share of summer tourist trade it should, and if the word is permissible has not been sufficiently exploited.

CATTLE EMBARGO.

LONDON, June 3 (Canadian Press). — The National Federation of Meat Traders, in reply to the speech of Sir A. Griffith, between the Minister of Agriculture, defending his attitude in favour of the embargo on Canadian cattle, takes exception to the statement accusing butchers and breeders of "aiming at something akin to fraudulent proposal" by getting animals three-quarters finished, finishing them and selling them as English beef. "We cannot expect better than insinuations of fraud from an individual who argues that a pledge is not a pledge because circumstances prevailing at the time it was given have been allowed," says the Federation.

BUTTER STILL ON DOWNGRADE LOCAL MARKET

One Pound Could Be Purchased for 28 and 30c. This Morning---Today's Prices.

POTATOES LOWER

Butter was still coming down on the market this morning, with plenty of the product on hand, at prices ranging from 28 to 30 cents per pound. Large green rhubarb leaves formed the attractive wrapping for much of it, with ice in many baskets. Eggs were plentiful, too, selling from 27 to 30 cents a dozen, and there was a quantity of fowl, "well starved out," as one lady expressed it, at a prevailing price of 30 cents a pound.

On the open market, potatoes were much in evidence at, per bag, $1.40 and $1.25, and green-plant vendors were popular centres for purchasing crowds. Tomatoes, cauliflower and cabbage plants were 16 cents a box, or two for a quarter, and there were a couple of dealers in flower roots, one with asters, "all colors," at 10 cents apiece, another with the roots in boxes, at 15 cents a box. Purple columbine and cream iris formed a large cut bouquet. There were blossoming pansies in velvety shades at 15 cents a box, and one corner, in charge of a secretive little boy who murmured his prices in a hushed, downcast voice, held pansies and snapdragon at 20 cents per box. Rhubark at 5 cents a bunch, green onions 2 for five, and radish, three bunches for ten, were prominent. A gentleman who was evidently quite satisfied with his purchase, exhibited with pride two sleepy young porkers, which had cost him $9 apiece, "and they are worth ten."

The fish-man has abandoned his corner, and no longer dilates on the superior advantages of finnan haddie and speckled trout, but the auctioneer was holding forth in great style to a silent crowd on the merits of sundry articles, including a coat that he guaranteed "would keep out the heat or keep out the cold," and upstairs The Examiner representative was adjured to test the merits of a wonderful "external or internal" liniment, and a polish that was "the very best thing for caskets you can get."

THE FUNERAL OF ROY CHERRETT

Many Followed the Remains to Last Resting Place This Morning.

The funeral of Roy Cherrett, which took place this morning from the family residence, Rubidge St., to Little Lake Cemetery was a striking tribute to the popularity of the young athlete. In the funeral cortege were many of those who had been associated with him in work or play, the drafting department of the Canadian General Electric Company and the Peterboro Central League baseball Club being particularly well represented. The services at the house and at the cemetery were conducted by Rev. F. E. Malott of Trinity Methodist Church who in an impressive address in which he referred to the reputation enjoyed by Roy Cherrett as being a clean sport and white all through, suggested that the mantle of charity should be drawn over the sad affair which was so mysterious to everybody, save to Him to whom every thing was clear.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. McLeish, Bowness, Frank Convery, Walter Jackson, H. A. Cranfield, and Lawrence Soden.

The remains of Roy Cherrett were laid to rest along side those of his mother whose funeral took place on Wednesday.

The members of the Peterboro Baseball team out of respect to the memory of their former comrade wore a band of crepe on their arms this afternoon in the game with Bowmanville.

SOCIAL EVENING AT MARK STREET

Twenty-eight boys met last night at Mark Street Sunday School-room, and after the routine business and devotional exercises were over, an impromptu programme was rendered, consisting of readings, personal experiences and good, clean, healthy yarns. Three baseball teams were organized, viz., the "Giants," "White Socks," and the "Maple Leafs." A series of games will be played during the next three months, which promises to arouse interest in this branch of outside sports. This organization may grow into the "East City League." Who can tell? Let every boy be right on the job, both at the meetings and on the ball field.

BIG RAT STARTS A FIRE AT C.G.E.

Got Tangled Up in Switchboard, and Short-circuited Wires.

A monster rat investigating the interior of a switchboard in the C.G.E. power house at the rear of the main plant at 7 o'clock last night got tangled up in the wires. A short circuit was brought about that sent the rat to the happy hunting grounds in a hurry, but started a fire in the switchboard which caused $100 damage before the fire department arrived. The blaze was promptly squelched with extinguishers and the dead rat removed from the machine.

The fire department asked today that the thoughtfulness of A. Blade and Son in filling the window boxes at the Fire Hall be acknowledged. The boxes have been given every professional attention by the florists, and look particularly attractive this year.

POLICE SEEK HATS OF CHERRETT DEAD

Mother Reported to Have Expressed Wish to Die a Week Ago.

Diligent search by the police for the hats worn by Roy Cherrett and his mother last Sunday night has so far been fruitless. From the Peterborough lock upstream to the Little Lake Cemetery point every foot of the shore and bank has been examined but with no result. Roy Cherret is believed to have worn a light gray fedora hat with a black band, and if one is found answering to this description Chief Newhall requests that it be left at the police station. From information the police have gleaned it appears that the mother had on several occasions expressed a wish to die, and is reported to have told a friend last Saturday evening that "she would end it all in the river".

BUILDING BOOM MAY BE AT HAND

Comparative Figures With Last Year Encouraging.

The building boom that started this spring shows itself in the comparative figures with last year. To the end of May this year permits for building totalled in value $299,130, as compared with but $121,562 in the first five months of 1921. The $125,000 permit to the contractors of the new Western Clock factory sent the May total soaring but outside of this there was $50,00 worth of work representing 9 new dwellings started. The total figures for the month were $178,518, as against $98,802 in April. In May last year the months' total was only $31,960. In May 1913, in the so-called palmy days the total building started represented but $78,603, so Mays' boom looks quite encouraging.

The permit of Sullivan and Fried, contractors for the new factory on Armor's Hill, is signed by W. Halliday, contractor's superintendent. The total size of the building is given as 163 by 53 feet, to be of brick exterior construction, four stories high, finished on the interior with terra cotta blocks. The roof will be of concrete and tile. The job is to be completed October 1st. The firm of B. H. Prack is set down as the architects and engineers.

Nicholls Hospital have taken out a permit for general repairs to be carried out at a cost estimated at $1,200, by T. E. Ephgrave, contractor and W. R. L. Blackwell, architects. Dr. N. D. Buchanan is making extensive alterations to his home, Murary and Water street consisting of a new garage and the extension of the house. The cost is placed at $1,500. Other permits issued:

W. J. Moher, 238 Caddy street, alterations, $125.

H. A. Morrow, verandah, 339 Aylmer street, $150.

W. A. J. Giles, store alterations, 382 1-2 George street, $100.

UNIQUE CHAPTER IN HISTORY OF TRAGEDIES HERE

Mystery Surrounding the Cherretts' Deaths is Yet Unsolved — May Never Be Cleared Up.

INQUEST YESTERDAY.

Had Roy Cherrett not taken out an insurance policy within the last year it is not likely that an inquest would have been held into his death. This, Coroner Dr. T. N. Greer told the jury, empanelled yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock. In the case of two or more deaths in which the circumstances are similar only one inquest is usually held, he said, but in this case the insurance company was anxious to settle whether he died from suicide, which case, if it took place within the first year, the policy would become void. Cherrett had taken out a policy 11 months ago, and the Coroner said he thought it was only just to the company to proceed with the inquest. The jury was empanelled and the body viewed.

T. E. Curvin, Secretary of the Ball Club last year, identified the body as that of Roy Cherrett from his watch and signet ring, engraved with the letters "R. C." He remembered both the watch and the ring. He could not identify the body from its appearance, he said. Manson Comstock testified to removing the watch from Cherrett's pocket and, as described by the family, found him wearing two rings, a snake ring on the left hand and the signet ring on the right hand. Detective William Meagher stated that the clothes he was wearing when found tallied exactly with the description given of what he was wearing when last seen.

Adjourned Till June 9.

Coroner Dr. Greer adjourned the inquest until Friday evening, June 9th, the night following the inquest in connection with the death of the mother. The two inquests on mother and son, whose deaths are surrounded with a baffling mystery yet, which perhaps may never be cleared up, will form a chapter unique in the history of tragedies in this city.

The jury empanelled was as follows: David Fleming, foreman; Edward Wright, Joseph Picard, Fred. Jopling, Jack Primeau, Percy E. Rutherford, Harry Cressman, Finch Miller, Herbert Routley, Ernest Warne, Daniel Hickey and Gilbert Borland.

SECOND READING OF THE SEPARATE SCHOOL BILL

Bill Would Cause Protestants to Pay Taxes For Roman Catholic Schools.

SOME OPPOSITION.

TORONTO, June 3. Canadian Press. — Separate school issues were once more brought before the Ontario Legislature when Zotigue Mageau, the Liberal member for Sturgeon Falls, introduced his amendment to the Separate Snhool Act. Mr. Mageau in moving the second reading of his measure, pointed out that the bill was intended that in certain cases Protestant ratepayers may become liable for Separate school taxes on account of debentures initially chargeable to properties acquired by them. In short properties formerly owned by Roman Cathollcs and against which Separate school debentures have been issued, must carry the taxes until the debentures is paid regardless of the fact that the property may have changed hands and may be held by a Protestant owner.

The fact that the House was divided on the subject and the principle involved in the Bill led to rather a prolonged discussion. After some time however by a vote of 21 to 13, the Bill was given a second reading, and referred to the Legal Committee of the House for a determination of the law and the principle involved in the measure. The Minister of Education voted against the bill, while Hon. W. E. Raney, leading the Government while Premier Drury was out of the House, voted for it. Practically a solid Liberal vote was cast in the affirmative.

Principle Involved.

Premier Drury said that the object of the bill was commendable, to make it as easy as possible to market Separate school debentures but that it involved a principle contradictory to the provisions of the Public school act, which provides that no Protestant shall be obliged to pay Separate school taxes. He suggested that the bill be given a second reading and referred to the Legal Committee in order that it might be redrafted and that the main object might be obtained without illegal enactment.

Hon. Thomas Crawford stated there was very serious objection to the principle of the bill. "If this becomes law a very serious and outrageous principle will have been involved," he said. He objected to Protestants being forced to pay Separate School taxes. "At the bottom of it the system is, unjust and unfair," he added.

Hon. G. Howard Ferguson pointed out that the bill would entirely change the characteristic and fundamental basis of financing the provincial school system. He claimed the bill was dangerous.

A Dangerous Precedent.

"It would be a very dangerous precedent," stated Major Alex. Lewis, "and great care should be taken to not too readily alter the present statutes. I am prepared to stay here till midsummer to prevent this bill from becoming law."

Hon. R. H. Grant, the Minister of Education, said: "In sending this bill to the Legal Committee we are not approving of the principle of it as it now stands."

Mr. Mageau agreed to the measure being sent to the Legal Committee to have the phraseology altered, to secure not more but no less than equal justice for the supporters of each school system.

Sam Clarke, Liberal, advocated having the whole issue sent to the courts and review the entire school situation since Confederation with a view to securing equal rights for both factions. Rev. J. C. Tolmie (Windsor), said it appeared as though the Catholics were suffering an injustice in the sale of their debentures. He requested that the Department of Education bring in a remedial bill next session to take care of the difficulty.

The Universiy Bill.

While Premier Drury assured the Opposition leaders that the University Bill would not be considered this session in an endeavor to shorten the labor of the House, Hon. W. E. Raney was successful in passing one non-contentious clause of the bill. As the remainder of the bill is argumentive it will be left over for the next session. The clause passed vests all authority for the control of University property in the hands of the Board of Governors and was modelled to facilitate the handling of University property. Hon. Howard Ferguson and Hartley Dewart objected to the introduction of this one clause on account of the Premier's assurance that the entire bill was to be left over for the next session. When the Attorney General pointed out that it was a harmless measure their objections were withdrawn and the clause carried. The remainder of the bill will be considered next session.

Owing to the fact that there was a slim attendance the Friday evening session was cancelled, the majoriy of th M.L.A.'s having left for home over the week-end.

The Parliament Buildings were closed on Friday owing to the King's Birthday.

BALLOONIST FLIES FROM MILWAUKEE TO QUEBEC PROV.

Major Oscar Westover Sends in the Best Report Yet Received By the Aero Club.

OVER 1,000 MILES.

NEW YORK, June 3. — (Canadian Press.)—The Aero Club of America yesterday received a telegram from Major Oscar Westover, the army entrant in the Milwaukee balloon race, saying that he had landed at Metabetchpuan, Lake St. John, Province of Quebec, Thursday morning, and giving his time as 16 hours and 59 minutes. This is the best record that has yet ben reported to the Aero Club, officials estimating that the big bag travelled nearly 1,000 miles since leaving Milwaukee on Wednesday afternoon.

Major Westever's message said the landing was made at 9.15 o'clock Thursday morning and added that in addition to everything carried as ballast, his wireless set also was thrown overboard. The telegram gave no details of the journey from Milwaukee.

WELLAND WOMAN INJURED WHEN CAR RAN DOWN BANK.

WELLAND, June 2. — Mrs. John Doan, of Welland, was injured and four others had a narrow escape from injury or death, when a motor car toppled over the bank of the canal boulevard. John Doan, of 76 Oakland Avenue, Welland, was driving his touring car south towards Port Colborne, with Mrs. Doan in the front seat, while in the back seat were his two sons and two surveyors, O'Connor and Wm. Vanderberg. When nearing Dain City, just opposite the John Deere plant, he attempted to pass a horse and rig, and, swerving so as not to hit the rig, the car turned completely over, with the occupants pinned beneath.

KING AND QUEEN GUESTS OF NAVY

Dinner and Dance at Chesterfield House First to Be Given By Princess Mary.

LONDON, June 3 (Canadian Press). — Princess Mary and Viscount Lascelles entertained the King and Queen as honoured guests last night at their first large dinner party at Chesterfield House.

The dinner was followed by a dance, at which there was a brilliant company of about 350. Men in silken knee breeches, with coats bearing many decorations, and women in the latest creations in evening gowns, danced until a late hour in the famous Chesterfield ballroom, redecorated with white and gold, with gilt furniture upholstery in claret-coloured damask.

The room was illuminated with large cut-glass electroliers.

Princess Mary's favourite flowers, sweet peas, were used to decorate the dinner table, while the centrepiece was a large candelabra, the wedding gift of King George and Queen Mary.

EX-GENERAL HAS INTERVIEW WITH HERBERT MARLER

"General" MacDonald Makes Plea For the Returned Men — Plans For Marchers' Reception

HOME BY TRAIN.

OTTAWA, June 3 (Canadian Press). — E. C. McDonald, deposed "general" of the veterans' army marching on the capital, had a long interview yesterday afternoon with Herbert Marler, chairman of the Special Parliamentay Committee on Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment.

While it is understood Mr. McDonald did not place concrete proposals for re-establishment before Mr. Marler, he did make a general plea for the returned men.

Mr. Marler and members of the Committee will probably interview the leading members of the Army when it reaches here.

Just what proposals the men will make have not yet been ascertained, but it is understood that their grievances will be fully investigated.

Steps for the disposal of the Army after it has accomplished its mission have not been determined, but arrangements will be completed before the Army arrives. It is probable that the men will be returned to their homes by train.

"General" McDonald is still in the city, and will remain until "General" Riley and his marchers conclude their pilgrimage.

HENRY FORD SAILS ON THE HIGH SEAS.

Challenger For the International Fishermen's Cup Sets Out on First Fishing Trip.

(Canadian Press)

GLOUCESTER, June 3.—The schooner Henry Ford, built as a prospective United States challenger for the International Fisherman's Cup, sailed yesterday on her first fishing trip. The schooner, which was nearly wrecked at her launching was stuck in the mud several hours to-day but as she departed under full sail all harbor craft gave her a rousing sendoff.

Captain Clayson Morrissey, her owner and skipper, has been assured by the Nova Scotia trustees of the cup that his vessel would not lose her standing as a challenger because of the lateness of her start for the banks. The Henry Ford will sail first to Sydney, C. B., for bait and for boats.

GOOSE IN COURT

Farmers Charged With Using Crippled Bird as Decoy

WINDSOR, June 2.—What disposition will be made of a one-legged wild goose which was seized by members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police will be decided Monday by Magistrate Gundy, who will hold court at Belle River to settle the knotty problem.

The bird had been used by Belle River farmers, it is alleged as a live decoy for spring shooting. The farmers, by so doing, violated the Migratory Birds Act. The act empowers Magistrates or Justices of the ePace to say what shall be done with birds which must be brought into court.

THE DELORMA TRIAL

MONTREAL, June 3.—(Canadian Press.)—Trial of Adelard Delorme, on charge of murdering half brother Roul Delorme has been set for Friday next. On being arraigned yesterday accused attempted to seat himself in dock but was sternly told by Justice Monet to "stand up straight".

Refusing request by defence counsel for delay Judge said, accused was being considered as layman, not as priest and was not entitled to more consideration than any other prisoner.

GAME COCKS MADE INTO CHICKEN PIE.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., June 3 (Canadian Press). — Eighty-two gamecocks, some of them valued at several hundred dollars, were guillotined at the City Pound yesterday morning, and are being distributed to charitable institutions to be converted into checken pie and other delicacies.

The birds were confiscated by State troopers and Humane Society agents in a raid last Tuesday on a cocking main in the town of Ogden, in which 132 arrests were made.

BIRTHDAY HONORS FOR PREMIER KING

Mackenzie King Will Be Made Privy Councillor. Other Honors to Other Men.

LONDON, June 3.—(Canadian Press). — Comprised in the usual list of birthday honors are the following made on the recommendation of Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, secretary of State for the Colonies:

Privy Councillor—Premier W. L. Mackenzie King of Canada;

Knight Commander of St. Michael and St. George—Premier H. N. Barwell of South Australia;

Seven new Dominion Companions of St. Michael and St. George are created. The solitary appointment to the Order of the British Empire is given to a representative of the New Zealand native races, Dr. M. Pomare, C. M. G., who is the New Zealand minister in charge of Cook Islands.

In honors' list for the United Kingdom nowadays is so freely can vassed in advance by newspaper gossip writers who "understand" that this man will "probably" be made a per and that individual will be created a baronet that there is rarely any element of surprise when the list finally appears.

It was so with the King's birthday list issued last night. Five new coronets will probably be deemed to have fallen upon honorable foreheads though opponents of the present government may attempt some criticism on the premier being fearful of creating bye-elections seeing that only one member of the House of Commons goes to the Upper House. Sir Archibald Williamson who goes to the House of Lords certainly was unopposed in Moray and Nairn in the last general election so the party managers probably have reason to thing his successor may likewise be allowed a walk-over.

The Privy Councillorship for Col L. C. Amery secretary to the Board of Admiralty was certain to have come sooner or later.

Nowadays it is customary for brief particulars of the service of each recipient to be officially supplied with the honors list.

Last night's fifteen new baronets include Hildebrand Harmsworth, one of the least prominent of Lord Northcliffe's five brothers. His public services as officially presented are: "He contested Gravesend in 1900 and Wellington in 1906 and for many years was the sole proprietor of the Globe newspaper".

Harry Mallaby-Deeley, M.P. receives a Baronetcy because when the last war loan was raised he "duplicated subscriptions in many places with considerable loss to himself". It is said unofficially also that Mr. Deeley did an undoubted public service by opening tailor shops after the war when clothes were practically at prohibitive prices. He was snowed under with orders.

The baronetcy for Sir Norton Griffith Empire Jack as he used to be known), is given for "His valuable war services."

New Knighthoods number 42 and include Col. Alan Burgoyne, naval writer and parliamentarian and Dan Godfrey the famous musical conductor.

CARPENTIER FOR STAGE.

IMMENSE CARGO WILD ANIMALS

Thirteen Baby Elephants, 200 Monkeys, With 60 "in Arms," Two Hippos on Ship.

NEW YORK, June 2.—When the United American liner Mount Carroll docked with one of the largest cargoes of wild animals ever brought to this port, she became the centre of interest to boys along the water front. The happiest man to step ashore was Jurgen Johannsen, owner of the menagerie, who told of bringing the animals and birds from India. He avowed that in the future he would confine his efforts to capturing wild beasts and rare birds and leave to others the task of delivering them.

Johannsen brought 13 baby elephants, 200 monkeys, with 60 monkey babies in arms; 2 Bengal tigers, sloth bears, 3 black panthers, 2 hippopotami and about 900 miscellaneous birds. Johannsen also brought 56 snakes, among them the rare temple snake, and a python 20 feet long and 16 inches in daimeter.

By way of introduction he exhibited records to show that he was the world's champion elephant catcher. In 1909 he bagged 318 elephants in ten weeks for the British Government in India. He said his cargo of birds, animals and snakes was consigned to the Hagenbeck representative in this country. They are to be sold to circuses.

"I brought my pets out of the jungle by way of Calcutta about Christmas," he said. "Some of the baby elephants had been handled roughly by the natives, others had sore feet from being tied and all were homesick for their mothers. They usually cried at night, and to pacify them I had to rig up bottles with nipples. The little orphans finally took a liking to me and that made things a little easier.

"I loaded the animals on a cargo steamer and started for Hamburg. We put into Rangoon for 20 days to load rice and my troubles were increased by the hot climate which made the hold where the elephants and the hippos were quartered almost unbearable. I had to give all the animals hourly shower baths. At Hamburg we transferred the menagerie to the Mount Carroll.

"The trip on the Mount Carroll was much easier because of the valuable assistance given by eight educated dogs I added to the group. The baby hippos were the most lonesome; so to amuse them I let the trained dogs frolic in the hold. The hippos and the elephants appeared amused by the dogs' antics, and by the time night came the beasts were ready to go to sleep."

The Mount Carroll brought 113 passengers among them Walter Kurze, a German sailor, who said he was here to interest American capital in a device to raise sunken vessels. He brought letters which he said were from H. W. Adams, representative of the Department of Commerce at Berlin and from several German, French and English engineers.

Kurze said that he had lifted 18 ships ,the largest of which was five thousand tons.

LEON TROTZKY NOW OFFICER, RED ARMY.

Recently Perfected Himself in Military Technique.

MOSCOW, June 3.—(Associated Press).—Leon Trotzky, the Bolshevik War Minister, desirous of perfecting himself in military technique, has completed a course in the staff college of the Red Army. He has passed the standard examinations and is now qualified as an officer. The examinations were given him by officers of the old Russian Army.

How Trotzky, who is one of the busiest men in Russia, found time to do this, has been a surprise to his more easy-going associates in the Soviet Government. He works from early morning until the evening, but takes time for regular exercise, the study of languages and voice culture. He has developed the vocal abilities of a field marshal, and when called upon to address thousands of troops in the open air, his strident voice is heard even by the rear ranks.

Leon Trotzky has developed great executive ability and he never concerns himself with petty details. He exacts from his subordinates the most meticulous precision. He keeps appointments promptly, thereby differing from other Soviet officials, and he confines his business dealings to reasonable day-time or early evening hours. Sometimes he sets appointments for, say, 4.27 p.m., to last three minutes, and insists that this does not mean 4.25, or 4.30.

Indian Chief Asks For Red and White Equality

Chief Cornelius of Oneida Would Eliminate All Racial Distinctions — White Man's Conduct.

GREAT IDEALS.

LONDON, June 3. — (Canadian Press.)— Elimination of all radical distinctions between the Indians and the white men was asked by Chief William H. Cornelius of Oneida in addressing the London Methodist Conference general session yesterday afternoon. The chief repudiated the charge that his people were leading the white men astray and stated that many of the so-called respectable white men should be in prison for their conduct toward Indian girls. Resolutions were unanimously passed by the conference asking for an investigation into the social and moral conditions on the reserves and re-adjustment of the attitude of the Methodist church toward the Indians.

"One of the greatest ideals we hold is to educate our people," stated Chief Cornelius in his address. "Nothing elevates a community more than the instruction given by schools and similar institutions. On such education is founded the hopes of the Indians; for who needs it more than they, You owe it to the Indians to give them the best. What have your foreign mission fields brought to you? I don't think they have increased your possession, but the natives of this country have ceded to you this beautiful land with its vast prairies and incxhaustible stores of treasures. They should be given first consideration."

The most interesting development of the morning session was the report from a Presbyterian and Methodist congregation in the Exeter district that they had agreed to a basis of organic union. This is the first case that has actually come before the conference. In the afternoon the business session was ended with an impressive memorial service for the five pastors of the conference who had died during the last year.

At 5.30 p.m. the laymen's association held a banquet in Dundas Centre church which was addressed by Dr. Elliott in the unavoidable absence of Premier Drury who was scheduled to speak.

Greater education and religious facilities were cited by Chief Cornelius as one of the most urgent needs of the Indians in the bounds of the London Conference and he asked that highly qualified men be sent to the reserves to spread the gospel and raise the intellectual standards of the people. His address was loudly applauded, particularly when he pleaded for the same status for the Red Man as the White Man now enjoys.

LONDON, Ont., June 3 (Canadian Press). — Gordon Dibsdale, who on Wednesday shot and killed Christina Near, when she refused to marry him, and then attempted suicide, was sufficiently recovered last evening to be removed from Victoria Hospital to the County Jail.

The funeral of Miss Near will be held this afternoon.

LARGE TRADING IN GERMAN PAPERS.

Buying and Re-selling For Waste Paper.

BERLIN, June 3.—(Associated Press)—It was observed recently in a small station on the German-Polish border that the people were buying very large quantities of German newspapers. This was attributed at first to a desire to absorb the German point of view on the part of the Poles, but some sceptics insisted upon an investigation.

The fact was brought to light that a group of ingenious Poles was purchasing German newspapers at current prices and reselling them at waste paper with early 100 percent profit. The paper pulped and resold in Russia where it is again used as news print. It is said the originators of the idea have made much money.

PHYSICIANS SUBJECT TO PROFITEER LAW.

Can Be Imprisoned in Hungary for Overcharging.

BUDAPEST, June 3.—(Associated Press)—Physicians can be profiteers and sentenced to imprisonment according to a decision by the Supreme Court of Hungary. This opinion was reached in a case where a doctor charged his patient 6,000 kronen (about $3) for a night call, the usual fee being 500 kronen(about 25 cents.)

The lower courts found that the law against profiteers is restricted to trade and commerce and cannot be applied to the learned professions. But the Supreme Court has given a new interpretation to the law, extending it not only to physicians, lawyers, engineers, etc., but to artists and members of the professions generally. Under the new ruling even an a tress can be fined and punished for exacting "extravagant remuneration evidently not in proportion with the value of the service."

SUNDAY CONCERTS.

It is noted that in the list of concerts arranged by the band of the Peterborough Rangers for the summer are seven Sunday concerts. This will be welcome news to many citizens, who find in the Sunday programmes an opportunity that is denied them at other times to hear good music. There has been some objection in other cities to band concerts being held on the Sabbath, but Peterborough's experience has failed to reveal anything to find fault with in such events, and there has been no attempt here to prevent them being held. Public opinion is strongly in favour of Sunday concerts, and it is pleasing to see that the band is to provide a they are arranged at such an hour as to not interfere they are arranged at such an hour as to note interfere with church attendance, they will meet with general approval.

THE CHEMONG SPEEDERS.

The Provincial constable on duty in this district is to be commended for his efforts to eliminate speeding on the Chemong Road, and those who know the conditions will hope that his campaign will prove a success. There has been far too much wild driving on that section of roadway, and as the protests of sane motorists and public warnings have not succeeded in checking the evil, there is no other course than to try the effect of stiff fines upon the worst offenders. It has been miraculous that the speeding tendencies of some of the car owners who travel on the Chemong Road have not resulted in a tragedy. There have been narrow escapes enough, it would be imagined, to force the drivers responsible to call a halt, but so far, no improvement has been shown. Possibly the knowledge that the authorities are on the look-out for those who regard the speed regulations as a scrap of paper, may have the desired effect. If not, the maximum fine in such cases should be inflicted; the conditions have got so bad that half measures are useless.

A SPLENDID MEMORIAL.

The war memorial plan adopted by the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire to honour the memory of the men and women who gave their lives for the Empire by providing bursaries in Canadian Universities for the children of deceased or permanently disabled soldiers and sailors, is, it is interesting to note, the identical proposal made by the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association as the best method of disposing of Canada's share of the canteen profits. The plan will doubtless meet with general approval.

It is proposed to provide nine bursaries—one for each Province—offered annually for a period of eighteen years. The value of each bursary will be $250.00 a year, and they are to be held for four years, the successful candidate to select any Canadian university he may desire. As pointed out by the local War Veterans when they endorsed a similar plan, the providing of bursaries is a particularly appropriate memorial, inasmuch as it offers the children of departed heroes or of totally disabled veterans a chance to obtain a college education that otherwise would be most difficult for them to secure. The Daughters of the Empire are to be congratulated upon their vision and enterprise in offering this opening to all the sons and daughters of those who suffered most from the war.

THE GOD OF STATISTICS.

We are fairly into the open season for the gathering together of churchmen to receive reports of the year's work and take stock of the church's resources. Assemblies councils, conferences will all be in full swing during this month, and great will be the enthusiasm thereof.

In the midst of all these gatherings there stalks a subtle tempter, all unseen, but none the less real. His name is the God of Statistics, and a multitude of laymen and ministers fall victim to his attractions and fall down and worship him. Under his spell they believe that mere bigness is greatness, and that totals are marks of divinity. So many sermons have been preached, so many couples married, so many services held, so many calls made. The church membership has greatly increased, the contributions are away up, there are many more societies than there were last year, and so "we've had a great year." Blaring away on the trumpet of statistics the church marches out to conquer the world precisely as if it were a life insurance company announcing the number of policyholders as an evidence of strength or a baking powder concern advertising the number of satisfied customers.

While statistics are important and have their place, we need to remember that the measure of the church's success is only poorly found in numbers. A sermon is not necessarily great because it takes an hour to preach, nor is the work of the largest church in a community necessarily the most telling. It may be, but if it is there are other factors than mere size and number entering into its success. The success of a church or denomination is surely measured better by the extent to which it brings the spirit of Christ into the life of men. Its manifestation of sympathy and self-deniel and sacrifice, its hatred of evil, its ministrations to the tempted and the sinning and the sad, its strengthening of men for life's battle, its witness for the fact and Kings of God,—in these, and these alone, lies the true evidence of a church's greatness. Statistics never have and never can tell this story, and beyond them we must seek in the realm of the spiritual if we would rightly know a church's progress.

REPRESENTATION IN THE FEDERAL HOUSE.

In a pamphlet prepared by Mr. Ronald Hooper, the honorary secretary of the Proportional Representation Society of Canada, the strange anomalies of the last Dominion election are set forth in a striking manner. He contrasts the results of the election as they are seen in the House to-day with what they would have been under the proportional system of voting. The tables are designed to show, of course, the unrepresentative system of elections which the country has been using.

In Prince Edward Island, for instance, the Liberals with 23,950 votes out of 52,444, elected the four members from that Province. That is to say, 45 per cent. of the votes secured the whole representation. In Nova Scotia the Liberals won the sixteen seats, though by th number of votes which they polled they were entitled only to eight seats. The Conservatives, with 83,928 votes out of 259,793, obtained no representation at all, while under Proportional Representation they would have elected the five members to when their voting strength entitled them.

In the Province of Quebec the Liberals won every seat and have 65 members. Under the system of proportional representation the Liberals would have 45 members and the Conservatives would have secured thirteen members with their 161,134 votes. In Manitoba the results would have been different also. Outside Winnipeg the Progressives won everything, but they were entitled to only seven out of the twelve seats, and the Conservatives would have elected four members, while now they have none. In Manitoba two Liberals were elected, although Hon. A. B. Hudson ran as an independent. In the other Provinces the same condition of affairs is revealed.

In regard to the Dominion as a whole, Mr. Hooper's tables show that while the Liberals elected 117 members, which is 20 more than they would get under the proportional system, according to the number of Liberal votes, the Conservatives elected only 50 members, when, if they had secured representation according to the number of their votes, they would have elected 73.

It is very evident that it will be impossible in the future to force the voters of Canada into two parties. The group system has come to stay, and, since this is the case, the adoption of the proportional system of representation would give all parties numerical representation according to their strength. It is worth while, considering the agitation for its adoption, to try the new system, wherever possible, in the next Federal election.—Brantford Expositor.

MORE CONDEMNATION.

As further proof that The Examiner's position in regard to the $600 salary "grab" in the Ontario Legislature is shared by the majority of Ontario newspapers we reproduce to-day two more articles on this subject, one from the London Free Press and the other from the Hamilton Spectator.

Under the heading, "It All Depends," the Spectator says:

The Ontario legislators demanded a bonus of $600 per member per session, and got it; the civil servants requested favorable consideration of their request for a much more modest bonus, and were refused. Both petitions were advanced on the same ground—the high cost of living, and it is hard to understand why, if the argument is accepted in the one case, it should be rejected in the other. Each member of the Provincial Legislature may conscientiously believe that he earns every cent of his $2,000 for the labors of the session; but if he does, he surely ought to look with a little more sympathy on his less fortunate brethren who, just like himself, happen to be public servants, though more dependent on the financial recognition of that service. Mr. Nickle's protest against the appropriation shines like a good deed in a selfish world.

Touching this question of civil servants' wages, in a statement recently submitted to the Federal Parliament it was asserted that there are 7,700 civil employees at the present time who receive less than $800 per annum for their services, and 13,500 who receive $960 or less. The high cost of living certainly hits these employees with sledge-hammer force, and it needs no elaborate scrutiny of family budget statistics, index numbers, etc., to come to the conclusion that they must be having a strenuous time of it to exist at all on such wages. "La Patrie, in commenting on these figures, says: "At Ottawa, the Civil Service Commission does not seem able to relieve the situation to any extent. The investigation which it conducted through foreign experts brought no remedy. Why should not a parliamentary committee interest itself this year with the fate of these public servants? They have a right to their share of justice, wherever it may came from!" It takes no special committee to concern itself with the fate of the parliamentarians, however, whenever they feel the pinch, however mildly. Their action is prompt and effective. They make the laws and are a law unto themselves. "Quis custodiet?"

Here is the opinion of the Free Press:

If the electors of Ontario had been told at the time that their members annually would vote themselves a bonus of $600, totalling in all $67,000 a year, it is safe guessing that few of the present supporters of Mr. Drury would have headed the poll.

The Free Press does not object to paying members of the Federal or Provincial Parliaments adequately. It is doubtful whether the present $1,400 a year is sufficient compensation. If it is not a high enough figure, let it be raised to come into effect after the next Provincial elections. But the present method looks too much like a dishonest way of accepting the cash and at the same time evading responsibility. The members can still say that the indemnity has not been raised.

It is not the indemnity, but the hypocrisy of the Drury Government and its supporters in regard to it, against which we protest.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Long live the King!

If the calendar didn't show that this was the King's birthday, the number of flags flying in Peterborough today wouldn't indicate the fact.

The old charge that everybody who doesn't like the way the Ontario Temperance Act is being administered is in sympathy with the liquor interests, is once more dragged forward in Mr. Raney's defence.

If the Ontario Legislature hadn't turned much of its work over to commissions, the members might have voted themselves a much greater increase than the $600 each they have presented themselves with.

Two lives have been cut off under circumstances that have cast a gloom over the community. Let not the evil tongue of gossip increase the harrowing nature of the tragedy.

Voice of the People

To the Mayor and Council of Peterboro'

Gentlemen:—

Permit an old citizen of this beautiful little City to address you on a matter that has frequently been discussed by citizens, but never seriously considered by the City authorities. I refer to the "Armour Hill."

Peterboro' is a City which, with people living in its suburbs, has a population close on, or attaining to, 25,000 inhabitants.

It is beautiful for situation. South, at a distance of 12 miles, the famous picturesque Rice Lake. In width, 3 miles, length 32 miles. On its sides, rising grounds largely in culture as farms, but broken with woods. There are numbers of fine islands in Rice Lake. It's beauty, rice fields, and fine fishing —bass and Maskinonge—have for nearly 100 years made Rice Lake famous. There are large steamers plying between Peterboro' and Rice Lake used for commerce and afternoon outings. Then on the north, we have famous, beautiful Kawartha Lakes, including the famous wondrously beautiful Stoney Lake with its hundreds of summer cottages.

The City of Peterboro' is surrounded with hills mostly wooded, and offering fine landscape effects. There is, however, a fly in the ointment. The east side is a high bare hillside, with a naked top, presenting neither landscape nor beauty. Only a place to be beautified, not with plants and gardens, but with abold forest to remove, a bald skull and present a rich, wooded vista of forest trees as a broken skyline.

This land, (32 acres), is in the market at a low price, and there are buyers who want to buy it at the low price asked; but the owners, representing the very early settlers—the Armour family—want the City to have it for park purposes, and the executors have refused a cash offer of $3000 for it. The representatives of the Estate are under necessity of treating the land as an asset of the Estate and turning it into cash, yet they offer it at a very low price to our City representatives who seem unable to realize that it is now or never. Our citizens are most anxious that for landscape effect and park purposes that this land should be purchased without delay.

I am an old man, I have seen Peterboro's growth and development and am anxious that the opportunity to secure this land should be taken advantage of at once, that it may not be lost forever.

I respectfully suggest to the Council that they secure this land at once. Let them put up enough money to secure it and also put up $1000 for planting. I would then at once take in hand to dig out holes for 1000 trees—white birch, black birch, maples, oaks, bass wood, Lombard poplar, for a sky line—and plant the government canal land at the same time; have all these holes ready dug, then during the winter season make arrangements with adjoining farmers for 1000 trees to be dug in spring (carefully), and then quickly put in place, after careful prunning, and, if possible, mulched. I would also sink a 3 or 4 inch pipe 2 or 3 feet under ground, to bring the canal water by a siphon over the hill. Once started, water would flow night and day, and be spread over the hill, thus automatically watering the land to secure the growth of the trees. In 5 years the entire hill-top and sides, and the government land would be green with foliage, and the citizens would be proud of their job and of their patriotic Councillors.

Don't leave it for the future citizens, to lament, saying people of Peterboro let the chance to embellish that hill go and now it is too late.

Now is our chance, fellow-citizens. Let us avail ourselves of it. Let a public meeting be called and give the people a chance to speak out.—Respectfully,

D. W. DUMBLE

42 COMMONERS ARE KNIGHTED

LONDON, June 3. — (Canadian Press.)—Sir Robert Hudson Berick, Sir Joseph Robinson, Sir William Vesty, Sir Samuel Waring and Sir Archibald Williamson are named as Peers in the King's Birthday list, Peerages were given for services during the war.

The list includes fifteen new Baronetcies, among them Lord Northcliffe's brother, Hildebrand Harmsworth, and other noted provincial magnets and public benefactors. Forty-two commoners become knights, among them Henry Fielding Dickens, son of the famous novelist, and William Mills, inventor of the hand grenade. With William Lyon Mackenzie King, Premier of Canada in the list of Privy Councillors, is Col. Leopold C.M.S. Amery, Parliamentary Secretary to the Admiralty.

East or West Eddy's Best --since 1851!

Back of every Eddy match!

On Canada's first birthday, Eddy's were already 16 years old. When the last spike was driven on the Canadian Pacific Railway in 1886, Eddy's had passed their 35th milestone. When Ottawa was still Bytown—seven years before it became Canada's capital—Eddy's were making matches for Canada's total population of 1,850,000 people.

Deep-rooted in Canadian soil before Confederation, Eddy's are more Canadian than the Dominion. The business romance of this great pioneer industry is the history of Upper and Lower Canada for three-quarters of a century—since 1851!

Eddy's have seen the number of match consumers grow from less than 1,850,000 to 9,000,000.

In the great Eddy family of 2,500 loyal Canadian workers are found many who have seen service for over 40 years—from father to son and daughter.

And never a strike since 1851!

With a payroll of over $2,500,000 a year, the gigantic Eddy plant spreading over 75 acres is now producing 120,000,000 matches a day of superlative quality—equal to 5,143 miles of matches end to end.

This long-continued supremacy is the result of unfaltering adherence to the Eddy ideal—the most for the money.

"Eddy's" is the Canadian word for matches!

CHEESE BOARDED AT CAMPBELLFORD SOLD FOR 16 3-8c.

But Only 105 Disposed of Out of 586 Offered — Delegates to the Ottawa Meeting Reported.

CAMPBELLFORD, June 3.—The Campbellford Cheese Board met here Thursday.

After some discussion concerning the grading of cheese, the report of Mr. J. N. Stone and Mr. George S. Van Volkenburg, the delegates to the meeting in Ottawa on Tuesday, May 30th, to discuss the Dairy Products Act with the Minister of Agriculture, Hon. W. R. Motherwell, was called for. Mr. J. N. Stone stated that the Minister would do all that he possibly could to make a satisfactory arrangement with all cheese boards; but he also made it plain that there must be Government grading or inspection of cheese, whether in the factory or at some central point. As there are a number of boards, including Campbellford Cheese Board, which are holding out for factory inspection, the Minister stated that, if factory inspection could be arranged in such a way as to eliminate a large army of inspectors, which would be a necessity—and, incidentally, a great expense—he would not object. However, a meeting of the dairymen will be held either in Brockville or Belleville, or both places, before anything definite is done regarding new regulations, in order to acquaint the men interested with the changes.

Mr. George S. Van Volkenburg gave a short address to supplement that of Mr. J. N. Stone, in which he referred to the fact that, even though the Minister had stated his intention of giving the boards in this section factory inspection, if possible, he did not at all commit himself to state this as a fact.

A vote of thanks was tendered to Messrs. J. N. Stone and George S. Van Volkenburg for the very able manner in which the reports, which were in every way satisfactory, had been presented.

The cheese boarded were as follows:

Brae, 60; Beaver, 40; Crowe Bay, 25; Empire, 60; Ideal, 40; Kimberley, 45; Meyersburg, 46; New Model, 20; Prince of Wales, 50; Rylstone, 75; Stanwood, 25; Trent Valley, 40; West Seymour, 30; Woodlands, 30. Of those boarded 405 boxes were white and 180 colored. The only sale made was 70 boxes of white and 35 boxes of colored to Mr. J. S. Cooke of Belleville at 16 3-8 cents.

The board adjourned, to meet again on Thursday, June 8th.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI

"Oh, yes! The Bank, as a grand patriotic institutio, couldn't let us drop!"

"How fortunate you saw it in that light!"

"Oh!—Glad to help you!—Glad to help you!" Probert spoke as a man utterly impervious to Meyers' irony.

Clarissa smiled, and took Meyers arm.

"Oh, Mr. Meyers," she whispered. "I am anxious about Lady Beaconsfield. I am afraid she is dreadfully ill!"

"Seriously ill?" asked Meyers, in surprise.

"I don't know!—And I daren't ask Mr. Disraeli. Her absence tonight is such a terrible disappointment to him!"

They were interrupted by a whisper that spread quickly about the great hall.

"Dizzy"—"Dizzy"—"Mr. Disraeli is coming!"

The Prime Minister, in full court dress, and wearing all his orders, entered the great hall through the huge arch draped in velvet, and as he walked toward the centre of the room he bowed to friends here and there in the throng. But he walked with his head bent low, and his hands behind his back. As he approached the Duchess, she stepped close to him in greeting.

"Dear Mr. Disraeli—" the Duchess said.

"Duchess —charmed—charmed!" Disraeli spoke as a man in a dream. He attempted to pass on, but the Duchess continued:

"So sorry Lady Beaconsfield is not here tonight!"

"So is she!—And so am I!—So—am —I!"

The Duke and Clarissa attempted to attract the attention of the Duchess, but she rambled on:

"But I am sure it is only a passing indisposition!"

"I trust so!—Indeed I trust so!"

Turning to Clarissa, Disraeli took her hand, and said: "Dear child!"

"How is she—really?" asked Clarissa.

"Don't ask me! I can't trust myself to speak. I am horribly anxious. Dr. Williams assured me, or—I would not be here! Not even to meet the Empress of India."

Disraeli pressed the young girl's hand, and walked on. A moment later there were calls of "Hear!—Here!—Mr. Disraeli is speaking!"

When the room was silent, the Prime Minister spoke slowly, and not loud, but all heard him.

"Her Majesty awaits us! But before we go, I want to thank the men who have so splendidly stood at my side and made our enterprise successful—"

There was a murmur about the hall.

"First, there is Mr. Hugh Meyers—" Disraeli turned to find Meyers, and those nearest to the banker urged him forward. Meyers, greatly embarrassed, walked to Disraeli. "—Concerning whose services I cannot speak too highly. Next, there is Sir Michael Probert." The Governor of the Bank of England went forward.

"It is my privilege to inform you," Disraeli said, addressing the two men, "that in recognition of your patriotic action, your Sovereign has bestowed a peerage on each of you."

The crowd applauded, and fell back.

"Lastly," Disraeli went on, "you will be glad to know that my young friend, who carried through the difficult and delicate negotiations with such consummate tact—I refer to Charles, Viscount Deeford—arrived in London half an hour ago."

At this moment a footman's voice was heard.

"Viscount Deeford!"

And Charles appeared in the great door.

Clarissa's face lighted up, and Disraeli turned to her for an instant, and as Charles walked quickly towards the principal group, the Duchess crossed to Clarissa.

"Deeford," Disraeli said, "Her Majesty desires to confer the ribbon of the Bath upon you with her own hands."

Charles bowed. He had eyes for only one face, ears for only one voice. A moment later he held the beloved hand in his.

"Clarissa—"

"Charles—!"

"My dear—"

Suddenly Clarissa changed color.

"Look!" she whispered, taking Charles by the arm and urging him back to a point near Disraeli. "Look!"

A gentleman had handed the Prime Minister a telegram.

"What has happened?" asked Charles

"Hush! Lady Beaconsfield has been very ill!"

"So Dizzy told me. But you don't mean—"

"It may be—news of her death!"

"God forbid!"

Disraeli stood rigid, holding the telegram. He did not dare to open it. The Duke of Glastonbury moved slightly back, and the others stepped aside. There was a burst of merry music from the inner room, but a shiver passed over the Prime Minister.

At this moment there was a movement among the group at the back, near the entrance. Lady Beaconsfield entered slowly. She was attired in court dress, a brilliant affair, and she wore many diamonds. She seemed to walk unsteadily, but smiled as she approached her husband.

Clarissa extended her hands, but Lady Beaconsfield warned her to be silent. The Duchess was about to speak, but he, too, divined Lady Beaconsfield's meaning.

All eyes were watching Disraeli. He stood, holding the telegram between trembling fingers. Finally he tore the envelope and extracted the message. He held it a moment, then lifted it slowly to read it.

Lady Beaconsfield placed her hand on his arm.

Disraeli started. That touch! Turning, he looked into the face of his wife!

"Mary!" he whispered the name. Long he looked into her eyes. Presently she smiled and extended her hand. He took it and bent low over it as he kissed her fingers reverently.

"Dizzy—!"

"I—didn't—know!"

"The doctor sent you a telegram, dear. It was against my wishes. I am well—perfectly well."

The band struck up "God Save The Queen!" and all eyes were turned towards the great doors which opened slowly.

"The Queen is ready to receive," came the Lord Chamberlain's voice.

Disraeli and Lady Beaconsfield looked at each other, and hand in hand they went forward.

Disraeli bowed low before his sovereign—and she bowed to him.

"Our First Year"

CHAPTER LIII

IMPORTANT PURCHASE

In preparation for the motor trip I invested in a darling new electrical sewing machine. It wasn't so very expensive because I only had to pay a small sum down and $5 a month. For the first payment I gave my check.

Jack agreed that I needed a sewing machine. All economical wives had sewing machines. And he was sorry that I had to use my allowance for the down payment.

Jack so often is worried nowadays when we discuss our finances that I have learned to make our conversations about money as short as possible.

I set out to make my dresses this summer because Mary Smith says she can make two for the price of one ready-made. I never learned to sew very well, my mother hadn't time to teach me. But todya's patterns are straight, there's not much fit to them, they're easy to put together, Mary says, and so I decided to try.

I bought some of the loveliest blue dotted swiss, fine imported material, that I never could find in a ready-made, and a French organdy, crisp and dainty. One was $2.50 a yard, the other $5. I had them charged.

The paper patterns looked easy to follow, and perhaps if I had had time to be industrious I could have finished one of the dresses. But I was interrupted daily by certain people of importance.

I've discovered that people of leisure who don't want to do things themselves are quite ingenious about getting me to do things for them.

Mrs. Dalemater was continually asking me to attend to her orphan proteges; and Mrs. Arnold thinks she is doing me a great favor when she asks me to give a week's time to her remade toy department of the children's summer camp. Certainly it's a splendid idea to reconstruct the discarded toys of fortunate babies, and sterilize them, and redistribute them where they will do the most good.

But sometimes I think the society women expect me to do far more than my share. More than once I've had to neglect my home to go somewhere to help Jessie Langdon, and because I had so many dolls to dress, I couldn't find time to make up my lovely organdie. In fact, I never expect to finish either of my dresses.

And what I honestly planned to be a real economy proved an awful extravagance.

Hot weather arrived suddenly and I simply had to go down town and buy some ready-made things. They were not nearly as nice as I wanted, but the best I could afford after I had put so much money into expensive materials. It seemed such a pity to keep that cloth parked in a closet drawer all summer, especially after I had shopped around two days to find just what was particularly becoming and after I had in consequence, opened accounts in two more places. These new accounts got me into a brand new and unexpected muddle. When I paid my bills I failed to fix up my stubs in my check book, I suppose.

One morning, Frank Brown, a friend of Jack's and a teller in the bank, called me up:

"You're overdrawn, Mrs. Madison," he said. "I thought you'd like to know about it."

Of course I was properly thankful. He siad he'd hold something, I wasn't clear what, until Jack fixed my account.

THIN-BLOODED PEOPLE

Need a Tonic to Enrich the Blood and Restore the Health.

Some people have a tendency to become thin-blooded, just as others have an inherited tendency to rheumatism, or to nervous disorders. The condition in which the blood becomes so thin that the whole body suffers, comes on so gradually that anyone with a natural disposition in that direction should watch the symptoms carefully. Bloodlessness, or anaemia, as the medical term is, can be corrected more easily in the earlier stages than later. It begins with a tired feeling that rest does not overcome, the complexion becomes pale, and breathlessness on slight exertion, such as going up stairs, is noticed.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a home remedy that has been most successful in the treatment of troubles due to thin blood. With pure air and good food these blood-enriching pills are the correct treatment when the symptoms described above are noticed. The value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in cases of this kind is shown by the statement of Mrs. M. Chase, of Trenton, Ont., who says:—"I can highly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to all who suffer from anaemia and nervous exhaustion. For three years I was nearly always troubled with headaches, and until I began taking these pills no treatment seemed to do more than give me temporary relief. I had read of what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were doing for others and finally decided to try them myself. I further decided to give them a fair trial and kept on taking them regularly for several months, and I am glad to say have derived permanent relief. I feel that I can safely and honestly recommend this wonderful medicine."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail, at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BIG EMMA FOUND DEAD WITH GAS TUBE IN MOUTH

CHICAGO, June 3.— (Canadian Press)—Mrs. Ema Weir—"Big Emma"—known by a score of aliases in police circles, was discovered dead recently with a gas tube in her mouth, in the attic of a drab cottage which had been her home since she "retired" twenty years ago.

"Big Emma" also known as the "Million Dollar Shoplifter" first introduced the "split skirt" to Chicago, but not for style. She used the split to reach the underskirt provided with ample pockets to store away her loot as she extracted it from store counters. In her palmier days, she was said to have driven up to State street stores with blooded horses and a driver in livery. After loading her voluminous skirts with picked articles she would rustle out to her waiting carriage and drive serenely away.

CANNOT BE WITHOUT THEM IN THE HOUSE

WHAT ALBERTA MAN SAYS OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

States he found sure Relief for Neuralgia, Backache and Rheumatism in Dodd's Kidney Pills

Red Water, Alta, June 2.—(Special)—"I cannot be without Dodd's Kidney Pills at home. I have found them a sure relief for neuralgia, backache and rheumatism."

That is the statement of Mr. M. Tkachuk, a well known resident here. No stronger recommendation of a standard remedy was ever penned or spoken.

Recommendations of Dodd's Kidney Pills come from the heart. They are the voluntary statements of men and women who have suffered and found relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

That Mr. Tkachuk found relief for his neuralgia backache and rheumatism, in Dodd's Kidney Pills is ony natural. All of them are caused by poison in the blood that defective kidneys have failed to strain out.

Ask your neighbors if Dodd's Kidney Pills do not make strong healthy kidneys.

A NEW GROUP OF HIGH FINANCIERS.

Hawking Austrian Paper Money in Wall St. District

NEW YORK, June 3.—(Canadian Press)—New York has a new group of high financiers. A score or more of street hawkers appeared in the Wall street district the other day with huge bundles of Austrian money which they offered at 25 cents for 1000 kronen. They received such a razzing from the messenger boys of the financial district, who are well aware that a thousand kronen note is valued at ten cents, that they moved the scene of their operations. They are doing a flourishing business further up-town, where the international exchange rates are not so well known.

DESCENDANTS OF NAPOLEON'S GUARDS.

Occupy British Island of Tristan da Cunha.

MONTEVDEO, June 3.—(Canadian Press).—The British island of Tristan da Cunha, in the middle of the South Atlantic, with its 120 odd souls, mostly descendants of Napoleon's St. Helena guards, who hardly hear from civilization more than once in two years, is at last to have a missionary and radio communication.

For more than 18 months an English clergyman named Rogers and his wife have been trying to reach the island from Cape Town, and finally induced the captain of the Japanese steamship Tacoma Maru, which left Cape Town on March 26 for the River Plate, to deviate from his regular course and land them at Tristan da Cunha.

W. Denis Myers, a passenger on the Tacoma Maru and a lawyer of Cape Town, who has just arrived here, tells of the vessel's call at the island with Mr. and Mrs. Rogers and thinks the population is truly in need of a missionary.

"The student of evotion, the psychologist as well as the missionary, would find much to interest him in this curious, forgotten community," says Mr. Myers. "The settlement originateo, it is said, when a detachment of soldiers who were guarding Napoleon at St. Helena, to the north, were despatched to Tristan da Cunha to forestall the remote possibility that Napoleon might attempt to escape thither. Two of the soldiers remained and, importing wives from St. Helena, laid the foundations of one of the strangest settlements in the world.

"From time to time shipwrecked mariners have added to the inhabitants on the island, who have married and inter-married till relationship after a century has become a hopeless tangle. Nearly all the present population were born on the island and have a colored strain in their blood. They speak English with a peculiar drawl, resembling West of England speech. There is one old Italian among them, shipwrecked from a sailing vessel, who appears to have forgotten his own name, and in fact his mother tongue.

"Continued inter-marriage has in this generation produced some pitiful children. Some of them are idiots, some lack limbs, some are deaf and dumb. The population does nothing agriculturally except to cultivate potatoes. On this food, together with fish and penguin eggs, they chiefly exist. There are few wild cattle and a few sheep, and out of the wool of the latter the women knit rough woollen stockings. That is their only manufacture. They wear old clothes, mostly seamen's, begged from the ships, usually wandering windjammers, that visit the island at rare intervals. There being no commerce, there is no need for money.

"The islander's attitude toward visitors is curious. As he stands before one his head droops, his arms fall listlessly to his side and he answers limply and uninterestedly questions as to his life and mode of existence. He seems to have no other interest than to trade a penguin, an albatross skin, or a seal's flapper for an old shirt; a little tobacco, or anything from civilization that would be useful. He articulates slowly and with difficulty as if he had almost forgotten speech. I did not see one smile.

"Tristan da Cunha is a mountain 4,000 feet high, rising out of the ocean wastes like an inverted pudding bowl, and as we saw it, was wreathed in swirling mists. The little colony lives in stone huts on a green strip of pasture land at the foot of the mountain.

"Having no commerce and no money, these people certainly cannot worship Mammon, but it is doubtful if they worship God. The two plucky missionaries who have exiled themselves among them for at least two years will try to teach them. They brought large quantities of supplies and civilized comforts and a radio set, so that henceforth Tristan da Cunha will not be cut off entirely from the outside world."

MARKED INSTANCE CHILD'S PRECOCITY.

Resulted in Frustration of Murder and Robbery.

LONDON, June 3.—(Canadian Press).—A remarkable instance of a child's precocity resulting in the frustration of a murder and robbery is given in a letter from a correspondent at Przemysl, Poland, published in The Daily News. The means which the child, an eight-year-old girl, took to prevent the commission of the crime was a letter to the Almighty. It was found in a pillar-box in a small town in Southern Poland, and attracted considerable attention on account of the strangeness of the address.

On the envelope, written in crude, childish characters, was the address, "To The Honorable Mr. God, in Heaven."

The letter was opened by the postmaster. In the envelope was found a small piece of paper torn from an exercise-book, and written on it the following message:

"Dear Mr. God,—Keep death from the Rogala family, and see that the danger which I know about does not take them."

The postmaster handed the letter to the police, who at once began to search for the writer. A police agent found that the envelope in which the letter was enclosed had been bought at a certain shop by a little girl eight or nine years of age, who had particularly asked for a nice envelope, and said she was writing to a very high person.

The little letter-writer was found by the police, to whom she told her story. She said that one night she was in bed, and could not sleep. In the same room was her father, a farm laborer for the Rogala family, talking with another man. The child was horrified to overhear the two men plan to rob and murder the farmer Rogala when he had received money for horses he was about to sell. The date was fixed by them for the commission of the crime.

The girl, mortally afraid of her father, could think of no other way to prevent it than by writing a letter to a higher power.

On the night fixed for the murder the police surrounded the house of the farmer, and the two would-be murderers were arrested. The little girl was adopted as his own daughter by the man whose life she had saved.

Today this company stands ready to reap the enormous profits which accrue to the pioneers in every great oil field. It has brought in its first two wells at Kerwood, and when pumping equipment, pipe lines and storage facilities are installed it will have the Kerwood field on a paying basis. HUNT FOR OLD BOYS.

Chicago Expedition in Search of Lizard Extinct for 40,000,000 Years.

CHICAGO, June 3. — A party of Chicagoans left last night for an exploration trip in Canada to search for the remains of "the terrible lizard," a beast of monstrous size, equipped with huge armour plates of bone and horns.

The expedition is being sent out by the Field Museum.

No museum in the country has yet acquired an entire skeleton of one of these prehistoric monsters, but the expedition from the Field Museum, headed by E. S. Riggs, Assistant Curator, hopes to return with a complete specimen.

Hunting for dinosaurs is very much like prospecting for minerals, according to J. B. Abbott, one of the party. Often fragments of bone are found in a wash which comes from some distance. These are traced back to the mother rock and digging is begun there.

Why 99 per cent Of People Are Constipated

Causes More Sickness In Spring Than Any Other Time Of Year.

You no doubt have taken all sorts of medicine with always the same results, only temporary relief. The reason you do not get any results is because none of the medicines you have taken acts upon the Liver. There is only one medicine known that acts upon the Liver, and that is Tanated Calomel. Doctors recommend that you take one of these tablets before meals or two at bedtime. This medicine acts upon the Liver, causing it to excrete ile into the intestines, giving a natural, easy movement of the bowels. A few hours after taking you will get almost instant relief from Headaches, Indigestion, Rheumatism, Constipation, Impure Blood, Kidney Pains, etc.

Tanated Calomel is harmless and easy to take. No salts or seidlitz are necessary after taking. It will be worth millions to people who have been sickly for years. It is also the best medicine for spring, when so many people are troubled with that tired, heavy, listless feeling. Get a few of these tablets from your druggist, F. C. Webber, Charlotte street, and you will be surprised how much better you will feel.

HALIFAX EXPLOSION WRECKED HER NERVES

The reader will, no doubt, remember when a few years ago there was a collision in the Halifax, N.S., Harbor and one of the munition ships was blown up, causing great loss of life and laying a large portion of the city in ruins, and causing a great deal of suffering and distress among the inhabitants.

Mrs. Winfield Dill, now of Windsor, N.S., was living in Halifax at that time and went through this trying experience and the shock wrecked her nerves. She writes as follows: "I was living in Halifax at the time of the explosion, and it wrecked my nerves so that I could not do my housework. I would take such nervous spells I would be under the doctor's care.

I saw Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills advertised, so I took two boxes and they helped me so much I took six more, and now I am completely relieved. I can recommend them to anyone suffering from heart and nerve trouble."

To all those who suffer from nervous shock we would recommend our

THE PUBLIC APPROVES OF ROYAL JAP BETHROTHAL

TOKIO, June 3.—(Candian Press) —Popular approval of the bethrothal of the Prince Regent and Princess Nagako Kuni will triumph over opposition to the match in certain high court circles, according to present indications and it is expected that the engagement will be nounced in a few weeks, with the marriage scheduled for December 1923.

When the home department announced plans for the engagement last year, a bitter controversy arose over the point that the princess is not a member of one of the nine "noble families." Baron Nakamura, minister of the imperial household who had sponsored the engagement resigned.

With appointment of Viscount Makino as minister of the household, the popular opinion is that the original bethrothal and marriage plans will be carried out, for the viscount is a Satsuma man and the Princess' father is married to a woman of the Shimazus, the ruling family of the Satsuma.

Almost Incredible Figures and Experiments of French Scientists Emphasize the Perils That Lurk Where Even One Fly Is Permitted to Live

Enormously Enlarged Micro-Photo of a House Fly's Eggs.

By DR. W. H. BALLOU.

YOU don't need a scientist to tell you that house flies increase rapidly in the Summer time.

But just exactly how rapidly they increase has never been known—until now.

A cablegram announces that French scientists have just concluded a series of experiments which give the exact "birth rate" of flies with precise mathematical accuracy—and what they found out surprised them quite as much as it will surprise you.

They were more than surprised—they were appalled at the fly's amazing reproductive powers. Why? Because the common house fly, with its universal habit of spreading infection and disease, is regarded by science to-day as mankind's deadliest enemy—as an ever-present menace to human life and health.

Professor E. Roubaud, of Paris, member of the French Academy of Sciences, is responsible for the "birth rate" experiments. They were of a nature that left no room for doubt. Great scientists have a way of approaching such subjects with the curious simplicity of small boys. Remember Ben Franklin with his kite—and Galileo dropping a croquet ball and a cannon ball from the Leaning Tower.

As for Professor Roubaud, he went to the hardware store and bought a quantity of wire fly-screening, which he trundled home, and with which he built a big cage—to the considerable annoyance of his wife, who felt that there were already enough flies in the world without starting a private scientific hatchery in her own sun parlor.

He annoyed madame still further by invading her pantry for a number of cans of condensed milk, which he dumped out into soup plates. And, what was worse, he lugged home a flower box filled with barnyard refuse. Then he caught six common female house flies, introduced them into the cage, and prudently escaped to his club.

When he felt that the domestic storm had sufficiently abated, he returned to madame's sun parlor and sat down placidly to study his flies and smoke his pipe.

He sat there, in fact, off and on, for four months.

And then he made his report to the French Academy of Science.

Here it is:

"At the end of the week, each of the six flies had averaged 105 eggs and by the end of the month, the total production was 2,693 eggs. At that time, too, several hundred of the direct descendants were busy egg laying. The figures show that at the end of four months, the six females had 3,985,969,387,755,100 descendants. The results show that reproduction is nearly mathematical, which is to say, that what is true of the six females experimented with is true of all female flies. Nor was any failing discovered in egg laying ability from one generation to another. It was only after the second month that the original six females began to get weary of the process."

In other words, the children and grandchildren of six ordinary house flies, in six months, if allowed to breed undisturbed, make a "family" of almost four million billion flies!

Further experiment showed that the "family" of one single female fly, in its free and natural state, might even exceed this appalling birth rate and total approximately one million billion flies.

Of course, the experiment of Professor Roubaud, as it progressed, became a little more complicated. It was necessary to make sure that there were no eggs in the refuse to begin with. It was necessary to count the first batches of eggs when they were laid. And it was further necessary to isolate the original six flies in a separate compartment of the cage before the first batches of new flies had hatched. But all these things were carefully done, and the results are accepted by science as of approximate mathematical accuracy.

The flies kept under observation in captivity by Professor Roubaud averaged 105 eggs each at a sitting. The general average, however, is believed by scientists to be even larger. American authorities place it at about 120. And every female fly, if she escapes the flypaper, swatter and traps, lives normally to deposit from two to four such batches of eggs. In other words, every female house fly which you do not kill may produce as many as 480 eggs—and most of these eggs, within ten days, will produce other full-grown flies, which will set about laying eggs in their turn.

So the thing goes on during the entire Spring, Summer and Fall, not in mere arithmetical, but in geometric progression. And this "geometrical progression" is one of the most amazing things in the whole realm of mathematics. You probably remember the story illustrating it in your old fashioned public school arithmetic. A farmer brought his horse to the blacksmith to be shod. The two had difficulty in agreeing about the price. The blacksmith said, "Pay me 1 cent for the first nail, 2 cents for the second, 4 cents for the third, and so on." The farmer agreed. There were eight nails in each shoe, making thirty-two nails in all. Before the blacksmith had reached the fifteenth nail, the figure was in the thousands, and at the end of the thirty-second nail he presented the farmer a bill in which the last nail alone came to more than $21,000,000.

And that's exactly the way it goes, in ever progressing upward leaps and bounds, when Mrs. Common House Fly begins laying her eggs. The eggs are deposited just below the surface of decayed material, several females often choosing the same spot, so that the investigator finds the eggs in large clusters. A high degree of heat is maintained by the fermentation of the nest material. The eggs usually hatch, in warm weather, within less than twenty-four hours, and in favorable heat and moisture within eight hours. The issuing maggots are very small and transparent.

These grow very rapidly, completing the larva stage within four or five days, although the larva stage may be prolonged by low temperature, by dryness or lack of food. Hence the ability of eggs laid in the Fall to germinate the following Spring. When the larvae attain full size they gradually assume a creamy white coloration. Just prior to "going to sleep" for their remarkable transformation into flies, they burrow into the soil or under the edges of waste material.

This is called the pupa stage. It usually lasts about four days, after which the adult fly emerges. On burrowing out and reaching the air, it crawls about for a little while as its wings expand and its body hardens. The female is ready within three or four days to deposit her own first eggs. And so the endless progression goes on.

The body of the house fly—as the remarkable photographs of enlarged models on this page show you—is covered thickly with hairs and bristles of various lengths. This is especially true of its legs. When it crawls over infected material, it becomes readily loaded with disease germs, and the subsequent visits to foods result in their contamination. Deadly disease germs also lurk frequently in the alimentary canal of the fly, so that when he drops his speck on food or plate or person, human illness may result.

Notwithstanding the number of species of noxious flies doing deadly work in their respective spheres, the house fly comprised 98.8 per cent of all the types captured by the investigators. The next largest numbers refer to the biting fly, also called stable fly, or dog fly, one of the greatest known torturers and blood suckers of man and beast. The house fly cannot bite, only tickle, so when you get a fly bite, it is the vicious dogfly, which sometimes appears in vast swarms in Autumn.

It is scientifically true that flies, because of their incredible breeding power and their habits of living in filth and spreading dangerous diseases, rank as the worst and most dangerous of all the enemies of mankind.

More human beings are killed every year by diseases caught directly or indirectly from flies than are slain by all the wild beasts, poisonous snakes, bandits and gunmen in the world.

Boards of Health, town, city, state and national, are calling everywhere for the co-operation of the individual in their fight against this ever present menace.

The weapons which you can use are principally four, the screen, the trap, the swatter and flypaper.

The chief efforts of the public health authorities are directed toward wiping out or rendering as nearly sanitary as possible the places in which flies breed.

It is well to remember that flies are not merely a nuisance, but constitute a real and dangerous menace to life and health and that consequently the individual housewife, the restaurant keeper, the storekeeper owe it to themselves as well as to the general welfare to co-operate in every possible way with the public health authorities in their campaigns to curb this too-familiar disease-breeding pest.

COMFORT AND WARMTH FOR LABRADOR NEEDY

Contents of Bale Exhibited Show Surprising Amount of Care and Thought Expended By Peterborough Women For Grenfell Mission.

Yesterday afternoon the Grafton Company, Limited, kindly loaned the rooms over their George street store to the ladies of the Grenfell Medical Mission for exhibit of the contents of the bale sent by them annually to the hospital in the Canadian Labrador. Outside of the consideration of the comfort and warmth of the articles exhibited, an outstanding factor in the examination of the different sections of the bale is the surprising amount of care and thought expended by the women who made and fashioned the useful and in many instances pretty garments. Leftovers of all sorts have been utilized in the most skilful way—small pieces of jersey cloth, warm and soft, fashioned into small petticoats, with flannelette waists, and crocheted edges in bright wools; ends of goods made up into dainty dresses, some with bright ribbon bindings at neck and wrist, and cross-stitch embroidery in gay silks; quilts, carefully tufted, made from small pieces of material; knitted sweaters and scarfs with contrasting borders; neat little suits for small men made from short lengths, strapped and buttoned in the nicest ways; warm underwear and hand-knit socks; leggings in scarlet wools—all bear the impress of thrifty and painstaking endeavor.

There is also plenty of good second-hand clothing in coats and suits, shoes, furs and gloves, warm, whole and comfortable, for men, women and children, and there is a section devoted to groceries — packaged goods of all sorts, mostly sick-room necessities, such as souvs and jellies, tea and coffee. Many kind friends outside of the society have contributed to this bale, with the Thursday Club and Mrs. R. Denne's Dorcas Committee doing splendid work, and one does not wonder when looking at the imposing array that the Peterborough bale is welcomed so warmly at the Harrington Hospital, which acknowledged its receipt last year with the remark [illegible] couldn't have got along without it.

In connection with the exhibit, the ladies served tea, the central table presided over by Mrs. Walsh, assisted by Mrs. F. M. Somerville and Macdonald as convenor. Decorations were prettily carried out in cream and mauve iris, the small tables centred with white lilac, crimson peonies and bridal wreath.

GOOD WORK BY BABIES' CLINICS.

Saving Children From Becoming Cripples.

Dr. Bruce Robertson, of the staff of the Sick Children's Hospital in Toronto, when speaking to the Rotary Club and its guests on the occasion of his visit here last Monday night, spoke of the preventable diseases which cause children to become cripples, sometimes for life. Rickets and tuberculosis were two of the diseases in this class, which the speaker declared were becoming less frequent, owing to the efforts of Well Baby Clinics in different places.

At the Well Babies' Clinic in Peterborough many such cases have been discovered, and pointed out to the mothers. Congenital diseases, such as club feet and wry neck, according to Dr. Robertson, might be very greatly reduced if taken in time, in infancy, whereas, if left until later in life, little or no cure could be effected. The future health, the peace of mind and happiness of many an infant is decided by the attendance of its mother at such a clinic, for advice and general instruction.

In her regular visits to the records at the City Hall, Mrs. G. McCartney, the clinic nurse, discovers an appalling number of still-born entries. To help to correct this condition in the city's birth rate, the clinic was desirous this year of obtaining a grant of $1,000 to enable a full-time nurse to give advice and practical instruction to mothers, both before and after birth, to bring down the rate of infant mortality. The grant of $500 accorded them by the Council is not sufficient to properly cover the work, which is, however, being carried on by the help of private contributions. Mrs. McCartney wishes to make public her desire to visit and help in any way possible mothers who might be helped by practical advice on how to feed bathe, dress and generally take care of their infants, and she would be glad to answer any calls in this connection. Her telephone number is 1641w.

At the meeting of the Home and School Association of the King George School on Tuesday next, June 6th, Mrs. A. Stevenson will give an address on subjects pertaining to the Well Babies' Clinic.

PENSIVENESS.

A thin lady in a light coat stood on Hunter street, on the south side, gazing pensively over the high wooden railing down at the little creek below. An observer approaching had a moment of panic. Was she about to throw herself in? Hadn't someone said that accounts of murders and suicides were so numerous in the papers as to cause a general disposition on the part of the morbid-minded to follow in the footsteps of the foolish ones who blazed the way? Was this woman contemplating suicide? At a nearer view, it was discovered that she was not alone in her contemplation of the water. A little, fair-haired girl clung to the side of the railing and gazed with whole-hearted interest at the rushing water. Had the epidemic extended to the juniors also And then a man with a grey suit came along, and joined the gloomy-minded ones who were absorbed in steadfast consideration of what might be an untimely grave The observer approached and craned his neck over the railing Two small youths with large straw hats and freckled, bare legs stood on a home-made raft, submerged in a foot of water, fishing for "minnies" with crooked pins at the end of long strings attached to sticks, and depositing their catch in a rusty tin can. Enquired if they had any success, they replied that "they weren't biting very well".

CLEVER SATIRE.

When the late Sir Charles Tupper filled the post of High Commissioner for the Dominion of Canada, one of his delegates in Canada was a Mr. Franklyn, who used to relate this experience:

One day, when interviewing a thrifty looking North West farmer's wife, he said, "Mrs. Langshan, your stock looks fine, but are there any drawbacks, owing to location, climate, etc" "Yes," replied the jocular dame, "the long days of summer when the sun doesn't set until all hours and it isn't really dark until ten o'clock." "Why is that an objection" queried Mr. Franklyn. "Because the habits of a hen—modesty or something,—will not permit her to retire until dark; then again, she seems to have an objection to laying eggs after 12—noon—so there you are—Biddy is kept up so late during the summer months that she can't possibly be down in the morning in time to lay her eggs; then again, in the winter months, the daylight comes so late in this part of the world, that noon has passed without giving the dear hen time to scratch out her breakfast." "Very sad, I wonder will any way presently be found in our northern latitudes to overcome these difficulties?" said Mr. Franklyn, as he left the humorous poultry woman's domain with a hearty laugh at her rather clever satire upon the geographical position of the Manitoba farmer.

Newest Evening Gown and What Goes Under It

This is the newest evening gown and what goes under it. What goes under it is of most importance.

It is a straight and severly plain slip of metal cloth—silver, gold, or shaded faintly with orchid, rose or blue.

Then over this glimmering sheath goes a draped tunic of lace. The lace may be either black or white or colored.

It will surely fall in gracefully draped points and folds.

Lancing frocks of this same style are made of moire, too, and of chiffon and georgette.

All evening gowns are much longer than they have been, many of them coming down to one's very ankles.

They make one look incredibly long—which, of course, is a step in the fashionable direction.

Household Suggestions

Colorful Furniture.

Chinese red is a color effectively used on willow and porch furniture. It must, of course, be distributed with some discretion in a room, and is most effectively combined with black or a certain shade of green.

Chintz for Children.

For the small daughter there seems to be no more popular fabric for smocks than chintz. Some of the patterns are large, though the most charming ones are not, and the colors are as gorgeous as can be dyed.

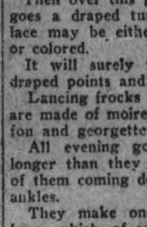
Terry Cloth.

Bathing caps of terry cloth are both practical and decorative. The material comes in large figured patterns as are used in cretonne. It also comes in plain colors.

Dustproof Bags.

Mothproof, dustproof bags may be bought for a very small sum, and they are invaluable for keeping in good condition the winter clothes you want to put away. Garments may hang in the closet all summer with impunity if they are thus covered.

RECIPES



WHILE the unprepared hostess may hesitate to serve plain vanilla cream from the corner drug store she need have no compunctions about this same cream with a delicious home-made sauce poured over it.

Strawberry Sauce.

Either canned or fresh fruits can be used for fruit sauces. If canned fruits are used substitute the juice on the fruit for the water called for in the recipe.

One cup sugar, ½ cup water, 2 cups strawberries.

Boil sugar and water until a heavy syrup is formed. This will take eight minutes. Do not stir after the sugar is dissolved. Let the syrup cool and add the berries slightly crushed.

Raspberry sauce is made just like strawberry sauce except that the berries are not crushed.

AN EVENING PRAYER.

We beseech Thee, Lord, to behold us with favor, folk of many families and nations, gathered together in the peace of this roof. Be patient still; suffer us awhile longer to endure, and (if it may be) help us to do better. Bless to us our extraordinary mercies.

Be with our friends; be with ourselves. Go with each of us to rest. If any awake, temper to them the dark hours of watching, and when the day returns to us call us up with morning faces and with morning hearts—eager to labor, eager to be happy, if happiness shall be our portion—and if the day be marked with sorrow, strong to endure it.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

There are 31 pounds of salt in each ton of water from the Atlantic ocean, while there are 187 pounds in each ton of the dead Sea water.

LOOK FORWARD.

Finish every day and be done with it. You have done what you could, some blunders and absurdities no doubt crept in; forget them as soon as you can. Tomorrow is a new day you shall begin it well and serenely and with too high a spirit to be cumbered with your old nonsense.

Organdie For Your Best Bib--or Dotted Swiss

For one's best bib and tucked tucker, organdie is recommended. Or dotted swiss, if you prefer.

Sea green with white or black dots, bright red with blue dots, blue with green dots are some of the variations of the dotted swiss fabrics this summer season.

They are trimmed with organdie—white or colored—or with bands of sheer net. The organdie dresses, too, use bands of net to excellent effect.

Most of them are very simply trimmed—with many rows or narrow tucks, a little lace or some ribbon flowers. The style illustrated lends itself to the airy stiffness of either material.

SALES ON FROM THE CALVES

The Progency of Tubercular Cows Fed Pasteurized Milk Successfully

As further evidence of the value of using PASTEURIZED MILK to prevent the dangers of infection from tuberculous cows, attention has recently been called to the methods adopted on "Bang" Farms to save the calves of infected cattle.

The "Bang" Farms originated in Denmark, and insists in the establishment of a separate stable or farm where all affected cattle are sent from the herd or local breed. The calves are removed at birth, housed in a separate stable and FED PASTEURIZED MILK. It is claimed that disease is largely transmitted to the calves through drinking unpasteurized milk.

The lesson to be learned from the above statement is: That if Pasteurized Milk is the safe remedy for raising healthy calves, it stands to reason that it should be EQUALLY SAFE IN PROTECTING THE HEALTH OF OUR CHILDREN.

Our Milk is not only PASTEURIZED, but CLARIFIED as well, safeguarding our patrons from all raw milk dangers.

Remove the element of chance and let us start your Milk supply tomorrow.

ROY CHERRETT, SHORTSTOP

In the passing of Roy Cherrett under circumstances that have shocked the whole community, Peterborough has lost one of her most prominent athletes. A good hockey player, a sprinter of no mean ability, but, above all, a clever baseball player. Cherrett, although not long out of his 'teens, had been before the sporting public for years, and he was widely known not only in Peterborough, but throughout Eastern Ontario.

For five seasons he was a member of the Peterborough Junior O.H.A. team, making his debut in the O.H.A. when barely fifteen years old, after proving a sensation in the Public School League as a member of the Central School team. He was a youngster in short trousers when he first played on the Peterborough team, but he had the graceful skating stride and the stick-handling ability of the finished hockeyist, and had no trouble in making good in O.H.A. company. He was the leading goal-getter of the juniors for several seasons, and would have developed into a star of the highest calibre had it not been for two things. In the first place, he was not passionately fond of hockey, and in the second, he lacked the robustness that is needed in Canada's great winter pastime.

Baseball, however, was Cherrett's game, the game he loved best of all and in which he most distinguished himself. Peterborough never produced a more finished infielder than Roy Cherrett, and when he was going at the top of his form his work was a delight to watch. Fast on his feet and possessing a good pair of hands and the ability to throw accurately from any position, Cherrett pulled off fielding plays that have never been duplicated on the Central League circuit. On the attack, he was equally valuable. A flash on the bases, he was one of the fastest men in amateur ball in Eastern Ontario in going down to first base, and he was able to bunt or hit it out with equal success.

Cherrett played many notable games for Peterborough in the three seasons he occupied the short-stop position on the Central League team, but in the memory of the writer he arose to his greatest heights in the game in which the Petes beat Lindsay on their own grounds in 1919 and in the Hamilton game here in the Ontario finals of 1920.

His fielding in the Lindsay fixture was the finest performance in that line in the history of the Peterborough club. He handled eight or nine difficult chances without a skip, and twice when a Lindsay rally threatened he saved the day by a running one-handed pick-up of a sizzling roller, marked all over a hit, and started a lightning double play. And on top of his great work in the field, he twice completely fooled the redoubtable "Cannonball" Scott by bunting safely with two strikes marked against him, Scott being too surprised to make an effort to field the ball.

The best individual feat performed by Cherrett, however, was the sensational base-running that resulted in an eleven-innings victory for Peterborough over the Plowites of Hamilton in the Ontario finals. With one out in the eleventh, he was on second base when Murray hit a slow roller to Rheaume, the Hamilton second baseman. Cherrett broke for third, rounded that bag and flashed in to the plate. Rheaume fielded the ball cleanly and had his arm drawn back to throw to first before he realized that the base-runner had not halted at third, but was on his way home. He shot the ball home to Redding, the Hamilton catcher, but as the latter swung to tag the runner Cherrett eluded him with a hook slide that enabled him to reach the plate untouched, and Umpire Burke's extended hands, palm downward, signalled to the wildly cheering crowd that the winning run had been registered.

A gentleman in uniform and out, popular with his fellow-players and the fans, Roy Cherrett was a credit to baseball and to Peterborough. He will be missed by no one more than by those who have been intimately associated with him in the world of sport.—F. D. C.

BOB GIFFORD IS NEW PRESIDENT OF CITY LEAGUE

Frank Convery Tenders His Resignation at Last Night's Meeting. Raybestos Protest Upheld.

WILL RE-PLAY.

At the meeting of the City Baseball League last night at the Chamber of Commerce, Raybestos won their protest against the C.G.E. win of last Tuesday evening, and the game will be replayed, probably on Saturday June 17. The vote was 5 to 2 in favor of allowing the protest The dispute arose over a runner not being advanced on a wild throw by the pitcher to first base. The runner started to steal with the pitch to the plate. The ball was hit and fielded by the pitcher who in throwing to first hurled the ball to the river grandstand. Under the ground rule at Riverside Park, the runner to second should have been advanced to third. He did not make any attempt to make the third sack and he was not moved by the umpire. C.G.E. won the game by 5 to 4.

The vote followed a verbal warfare that threatened to beat some of the records hung up in past baseball seasons.

A letter was read from President Frank Convery tendering his resignation from office in the league. Mr. Convery takes the stand that the best players in the city should be out there fighting with the Central Ontario team, and the city baseball League should encourage players to try for places on the senior Mr. Convery takes the stand that league is not in accord with him in his stand, and takes the only logical step left for him to take. The meeting elected "Bob" Gifford president. The new president was not in attendance at the meeting, so vice-president Lew LeBarr directed the proceedings.

Secretary Don Loucks reported that the management of the Classics had notified him that the team has withdrawn from the serie.

FRENCH PLAYERS MAY DEFAULT IN DAVIS CUP GAME

Will Not Go to Denmark Unless the Semi-Finals Are Played in England or France.

COST TOO MUCH.

PARIS, June 3.—(Canadian Press) —The French Davis Cup team may default in the play against Denmark, unless Australia agrees to play in the semi-finals in England or France, instead of the United States, as the Australians are now proposing, if both Australia and France should reach the semi-finals.

"These trips cost a lot of money" said M. Wollet, president of the French Lawn Tennis Association. "What is the use of going to Denmark, if Australia insist on our going to America to play in the semi-final round. We surely will default, as we can't afford it. We might as well default now and save the expenses of the Denmark trip. There is no sense in Australia insisting on playing the semi-final in America, inasmuch as their team is now complete in England."

DATES ANNOUNCED FOR BACK GAMES.

The two postponed games in the Central League have been ordered to be played as follows:

Cobourg at Belleville on Wednesday June 7th (Umpires Rosevear asd Wilson).

Bowmanville at Port Hope on Saturday, June 17 (Umpires Barnes and Boundy).

CRESCENTS LAND IN WIN COLUMN

Defeated Athletics By 4 Goals to 1 at King Edward Park Last Night —George Robertson Was Referee.

That the quality of lacrosse in the senior city league is steadily improving was demonstrated in last night's game at King Edward Park, when the Crescents won from Athletics by 4 goals to 1. It was the third game of the series and if the quality of lacrosse continues to develop as it has in the week since the opening the success of the effort which was launched by Dr. Sutton, George Mein and other tireless promoters, will accomplish its primary object of turning out a fair crop of capable youngsters this season.

Creighton of the Crescents moved himself back on the defence and put in the Jones brothers, Fred and Joe, both of whom showed up well. Ranger was in his best form and with Jack Killoran, Doug Miller and Gene Donovan, comprised a light but shifty home section. The Athletics have not yet hit the stride that marked their earlier practices, and the close scores of the three first games amply proves that the four teams are well matched. Their midfield section looks good, but with the home field they have not yet reduced their play to a working system that gets goals. Keith Mein, Todd and Halpin are all good stick handlers and should have higher scoring averages than they so far secured. George Robertson and Walter Smaill handled the game impartially and kept it clean. The teams were as follows:

Crescents: Goal, L. Lebarr; points, Creighton and Briou; defence, Neary and F. Jones; centre, J. Jones; home, Ranger and Donovan; outside home, D. Miller; inside home, J. Killoran. Spare, McDonagh.

Athletics—Goal, J. Lebarr; points, G. Mein and Taylor; defence, Foy and Sims; centre, Fuller; home, Wolfe and Halpin; outside home, K. Mein; inside, B. Todd.

Jones and Ranger scored the first two for Crescents and the third went in off an Athletics man in a scramble in front of the net, Killoran got their fourth, and Bert Todd scored for Athletics. An index of the play is afforded by the count of nine stops by Jack Lebarr in the Athletic goal and six by his brother Lou for Crescents. The brothers are on opposing teams and are both keen for lacrosse. Fuller, Wolfe and Keith Mein are three juniors the Athletics are grooming and all three of them are doing well enough but appear to be capable of even better style when the team as a whole finds itself. Condition will count a great deal as the season proceeds, and the players should be in better shape with every game.

Junior O.A.L.A. Game.

Hastings and Peterborough juniors play a league game here next Thursday. The local squad will practice this afternoon at Riverside after the ball game and will also turn out on Tuesday evening for their final workout before the game.

Fred Goodfellow of the Stratheonas, the donor of the city league cup, has the deepest sympathy of all his friends in lacrosse circles in his bereavement. A week ago last night his little three-year old daughter Margaret placed the ball for the face-off in the opening game of the city league at King Edward Park. She carried a miniature lacrosse sitck her father had bought for her, and was the cynosure of the crowd that delighted in her baby glee. During the week she met with a fatal accident in her home, and yesterday was buried in a little untimely grave in the Little Lake cemetery.

CONSIDER ALBERT SMOKE'S CASE.

An aplication from the Gladstone Club to have Albert Smoke, the Peterboro Indian marathon runner, reinstated, was considered Wednesday by the A.A.U. of C. It was decided that the transfer must come from Peterboro A.A. or else Smoke will have to run unattached for three months before transfed is considered.

CAPTAIN ELECTED.

At a meeting of the C.P.C. Football team held Thursday evening the resignation of H. Mann as captain was tendered and J. Clark was elected to fill the position. A new committee was also formed and the team strengthened by three or four new players. The next local game for this team will be the match with the Comrades on June 10.

CANADIAN CHAMP. UNABLE TO PLAY.

LONDON, June 3.—(Canadian Press)—Miss Cecil Leitch, holder of the Canadian woman's golf championship title, wil not defend her title this summer, because of an injured arm. She strained the muscles of the arm in the summer of 1921 during her play in the United States and Canada and was ordered by physicians to rest the arm for several months. She did this, but on resuming play for the British championship this year, hurt the arm again.

If Miss Leitch visits America this summer it will be only for a holiday. She had intended to defend her Canadian title and to compete for the United States woman's championship. Miss Leitch won the Canadian titel last summer.

ALICE BRADY in
"OUT OF THE CHORUS"

NINETEEN-YEAR-OLD WIDOW OF CHERRETT LOOKS FOR HUSBAND

"I Want Him to Come Home" Cries the Girl Wife of Roy Cherrett as Friends Try in Vain to Console Her—Says Mrs. Agnes Cherrett Worried Considerably—A Visit to the Home.

With her large, black-rimmed eyes peering nervously about the room, her pretty, childish face and smooth bobbed hair contrasting strangely with the tragic paloir of her face, Alice, the nineteen-year-old widow of Roy Cherrett stared in distraught fashion at the faces of her companions in the dining room of her home last evening, while thin fingers, with only the one plain gold band on the left hand, plucked and twisted in and out in ceaseless movements.

She had been upstairs, talking to a couple of girl friends, and came down in her little white nightgown and blue kimona, to find her sister. The bare feet halted half-way, and she began to cry, little, whimpering, tearing sobs. The sister, Beatrice Woodford, ran up the stairs and put her arms around her. "What's the matter, Alice," she said, "you must'nt come downstairs." "But I'm afraid to stay up there. It's dark. Look, the blind is up," she whispered, pointing distractedly at the half-raised curtain, which was lowered at once. Then she ran to the front door and peered out. "They haven't brought him yet," she said. "Why don't they bring him," "But the inquest isn't over," said her sister, soothingly, trying to lead her to the couch. "Yes, it is, I know it is, and I want him. I want him to come home," and she began to cry again. "Where is that contract?" she demanded suddenly, running to the writing desk in the corner of the room. "Don't touch it," she whispered sharply to her sister, frowning. And then, "what are you doing with those?" pointing to the newspaper clippings about the case that the sister had been looking over, and that Alice herself pores over constantly. "Put them away. Don't touch them," she commanded.

The sister said Alice had been trying all day to gather strength so that she might sit up with the body of her dead husband, when they should bring him to his home for the last time. She did not realize that she would not be allowed to see him at all, and that when the swollen remains stayed outside the house in the dark hearse, and the minister read the service within, on the following morning, she would be succumbing to the triple dose of the opiate that has been administered for some days now. With the little remaining money in the house, she demanded that a large wreath, "all pure white" should be ordered for Roy, "from Alice," and she whispered at the last that she knew she would be better, "when it is all over."

Her unshakable conviction, according to the sister, who shares it with her, is a denial of the theory that her young husband committed suicide. He had never mentioned such a thing, it is declared, and at the time of reading of such an attempt by a man some short time ago, remarked that it was a "cowardly" thing to do.

Plans had been made, it seems, by the young people, to go to Three Rivers in the near future, and the mother would probably accompany them, "because she would never leave Roy, and he wouldn't leave her, either," and on the very Sunday when the two walked out of their home, never to return, Alice and Roy had been talking about their future together, and about the child, which is expected, that Roy "wanted to be a boy."

Mrs. Cherrett, senior, it seems, had been ill, and it was said that "she had never seemed the same, even to Roy, since her brother died," some time ago. On last Sunday night, she had mentioned a visit to some friends, but was undecided about going out, changing her mind several times in the course of the evening Roy had not wanted her to go out at all and tried to persuade her to stay at home, saying that he would go and telephone the people that she was not coming. When she went upstairs, he said to his wife and her sister that he didn't know whether his mother was lying down or getting ready to go out. Finally the mother decided to make the visit, and Roy went with her, running back for "car tickets." His wife and sister-in-law are unable to account for the direction taken by the two, it being in an opposite section of the city to the house which they proposed to visit, although other friends have recently moved to the south end.

According to the sister, Roy, who had been worrying considerably over unpaid bills for some time, had remarked on that very Sunday afternoon that things would soon be all right again, and his mother had agreed with him, although "she was a woman who usually looked on the dark side of things, and was always worrying about something."

Speaking of the published report regarding an early morning occurrence some time ago, when a neighbor witnessed Roy and his mother carrying the girl in from an upstairs balcony, the sister denied that Alice was caught while attempting to get down. "She was just standing there, and his mother had been worrying [illegible] all night."

"Alice loved Roy, and he certainly loved her," said the sister, speaking of farewell scenes in the hospital, where the young wife just underwent an operation for appendicitis, and where he "hung over her and kissed her so much that no one else could get a look at her."

The mother was buried from the house on Wednesday, because "Alice thought she should be brought home, and Roy would have liked it," but the girl had no black dress, so they made one for her, that lay in a crumpled heap on the dining-room table. "What is that? Take it away," she said, excitedly running once again to stare into the dark for the approach of the vehicle carrying the dead form she has been watching for ever since the news was brought of its redemption from the river.

WAS TROUBLED WITH HER STOMACH FOR FIVE YEARS

Mrs. Samuel Ward, Millerdale, Sask., writes:—"I feel that I must write to you before another day passes I am so happy and so grateful for your splendid medicine, Burdock Blood Bitters, for after an illness of five years I am better.

I had stomach trouble so bad, I could not bear the smell or taste of food of any kind, and got so thin and weak I could not work. I was in pain, but felt so ill, at times, I thought I would die, in fact, all my friends were sure I could not live many weeks.

This time last year I saw where a man was relieved of stomach trouble by Burdock Blood Bitters, so my husband got me two bottles, but I had no faith in it after all the different medicines I had taken, however he insisted, and after the first two days I must say I began to feel better, and after the first bottle I felt so much better I went out every day, but I soon got so I could walk and eat and have got quite stout.

I am nearly seventy years of age and I feel better than I have for years, and can now do all my housework.

You may make use of this letter if you wish, as it may be the means of making others as well and as happy as I am."

AT THE THEATRES

CAPITOL — "The Man From Home," screen version of the novel that brought Booth Tarkintgon lasting fame. Also the balance of a Capitol premier programme, including comedy.

ROYAL — Mutt and Jeff in a "Tongue Sandwich"; Dustin Farnum in "Iron to Gold"; Sunshine comedy, "The Barnstormers," and other features.

REGENT—"The Guttersnipe," a tale of New York's "Irish Ghetto." Also a good snappy comedy and feature western drama.

Capitol Entertainment

Starting with Monday of next week, the Capitol offers a double bill, featuring Charlie Chaplin in a new comedy and a dramatization of Kathleen Norris' famous novel, "Sisters." As an added attraction, which every child will want to see, are the pictures taken of the contestants in the "Jackie Coogan" contest. During the summer months matinees will be held only on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons at this theatre.

"Sisters."

"Sisters," Kathleen Norris' novel, which appeared as a serial in "Good Housekeeping," which has been made into a real, human motion picture, comes to the Capitol Theatre for a three-day engagement, starting Monday. It is a story of a courageous girl who fought to hold her husband from her own selfish sister—and won her fight. As a novel everybody talked about "Sisters"; as a tremendous motion picture it will now command the attention of millions in all lands. The story features Seena Owen, Matt Moore and Gladys Leslie.

Alix Strickland is the daughter of of Dr. Lee Strickland, an inventor. His younger daughter, Cherry, is happy, gay, irresponsible and less considerate of others than her sister Alix. Peter Joyce, a neighbor, is helping the members of the Strickland family to celebrate the birthday of Cherry, who Peter loves. Cherry's attention is taken up entirely with Martin Lloyd, a stalwart lumberman. The doctor gives his consent to the marriage of Lloyd and Cherry. Anne, a niece of the doctor, who has been in love with Lloyd, is crushed by the announcement, and Peter Joyce, who loved Cherry, is heart broken. Alix takes the announcement with unmixed joy because of her sister's happiness.

Cherry leaves with her husband for the lumber camp. Peter, disappointed, leaves for a world trip. After a year of hardship in the lumber camp, Cherry has lost her gayety. Anne, the niece, marries a lawyer. Alix remains at home and nurses her father, who later dies, at which time Anne puts in a claim for the major share of his estate, because of some papers her father possessed.

Alix is feeling lonely when Peter returns from China. Their romance thus takes root culminates in marriage, but Peter allows Alix to believe it was some other woman's unrequited love which sent him round the world. Soon after this Cherry appears and makes known the fact that she can no longer live with her husband. The sight of Cherry revives for Peter the love for Cherry. Thus this romance starts. It is discovered by Alix, who brings the pair to a realization of the marriage vows when fate intervenes and restores the couples.

Chaplin in "Sunnyside."

Charlie Chaplin "expresses himself" in the new aesthetic dances, which are quite the thing in the most artistic circles, in "Sunnyside," his third million dollar picture, released by First National, which will be shown at the Capitol Theatre, commencing Monday. The manner in which Charlie gets in with a group of beautiful and scantily draped young girls which are engaged in this sort of dance is quite Chaplinesque.

Such a thing as riding a cow is almost never attempted in the country even by the boy and girl who take the cows out to pasture and bring them back at night. But Charlie attempts this when he tries to induce a cow to leave the church in which the bossy has been breaking up meeting.

Landing in a ditch on his head, the little comedian goes into a state of coma wherein he "sees things." While these are imaginary to him, on the screen they seem real enough, and the sight of Charlie burlesquing the serious sort of dance which St. Denis, and Hoffman, and other less famous give, surrounded by beautiful young girls, bare of limbs, furnishes a most entertaining combination.

After this little divertisement Charlie settles down to his real problem in the picture, that of saving the love of his rural sweetheart from being stolen by a "city dude" who appears in the community with a fine automobile.

AT THE REGENT.

Beginning on Monday the Regent Theatre on Hunter street, will pass into the management and control of Mr. Ambrose Edwards of Toronto. It will be remembered that about eighteen years ago, Mr. Edwards opened and successfully operated the first picture house established in this city. This was known as the "Crystal". Thus when Mr. Edwards takes hold of the Regent the city not only gets back a well known and popular former resident but a picture man who knows the business from years of personal experience. Since going to Toronto to reside Mr. Edwards was in the film exchange business, which enables him to be thoroughly conversant with procuring and selecting films to the very best advantage. This ensures a pick of the world's best productions at prices this will result in patrons of the Regent getting the best pictures on the market at reasonable prices. Mr. Edwards is confident that his old patrons of former years will renew their favors of the past and that the younger folks will recognize that a good clean show with best pictures available at reasonable admission is the best class of amusement to be had.

Big Double Programme at Royal on Monday

The Royal for Monday, has a big double bill including selected First National and Vitagraph features both drama and comedy. The First National six reel feature is entitled "Unseen Forces". This is one of the most intensely interesting and beautifully screened dramas ever presented in moving pictures and is a play that will delight every audience. The Vitagraph six reel drama called "The Charming Deceiver" stars that popular actress Alice Calhoun, who has so many admirers wherever films are shown. "The Charming Deceiver" is a story of life as it exists in a small village and is that clean sweet stort of story that delights every member of a family, young or old. It presents the kind of characters one meets in every day life. In the briefest synopsis possible of the plot, and old man, who has disowned his daughter for a marriage she made against his will, sends for his grand-daughter, living in Montreal and his grand son ,who is suffering from wounds received whilst fighting in France, with the Canadians. His grand-daughter has, unknown to the old man, made an unfortunate marriage Her grandfather thinks the wedding ring she wears to be that of the girl's mother. A young man, whose attentions are approved by the grandfather, makes love to the young woman, whose husband is in penitentiary for forgery. By mistake the old man, discovers a letter his grand-daughter has written to her husband in prison. The settlement of the old man's estate their becomes a question of doubt. However matters adjust themselves most happily. The Mack Sennett Comedy "By Heck", introduces once more that universal favorite Billy Bevan, who is a perennial fountain of fun.

Pupils of Prince of Wales and Queen Mary Schools Reflect Credit on Their Teachers.

AT PRINCE OF WALES.

The Prince of Wales School held an exhibit of children's work in the art and sewing sections, with a good attendance of parents and interested friends. A fine exhibition of the pupils' work was made, with some excellent examples of skilful training in the drawing and fine sewing of the small men and women of the different classes.

Ribbons for prize-winners were provided by the Home and School Association, which helped by serving light refreshments and providing an enjoyable short musical programme —Mrs. John Holmes acting as refreshment convenor, and Mrs. John F. Allen in charge of the programme.

AT QUEEN MARY'S.

There was a large attendance at the exhibit of children's work held yesterday afternoon and evening at the Queen Mary School, and much interest was manifested in the fine display of art work and sewing in the different classes. The pupils in the schools of the city are doing excellent work in both these branches, and there was a splendid exhibit on view at the Queen Mary School, both in the drawings, water colours, and crayon attempts, and in the fine sewing of the litle girls, on dolls' clothes, towels, etc.

Ribbons for designation of prize-winners in the several sections, were provided by the Home and School Association, which also served tea and cake during the afternoon and evening—Mrs. H. S. McFuddee and Mrs. B. L. Barns in charge, Mrs. M. N. Clark pouring tea.

for health, don't forget that there is one health method which deals directly with the cause of disease. Ill-health is but an effect. See to it that THE CAUSE of that effect is removed.

Chiropractic Proves Itself
Nerves are very sensative. Nerve tissue is the most delicate structure substance in the body. Pain results from pinched or injured nerves. It is the voice of protest against overpowering conditions. A sudden and severe jar, twist or strain will subluxate a bony segment of the spine, and such subluxation will be known by the pain which follows. The excrutiating pain following a sudden wrenching of the back is the proof of pressure upon nerves at the spine. Such a condition is followed by an effect, in greater or lesser degree, ending in some disorder commonly called "disease."

THE HISTORY
of such an incident confirms the logic of the Chiropractic idea, that impeded nerve force is the cause of human ailments. To adjust this obstruction is the Chiropractor's work, which in scope does not apply only to accidental subluxations, but to all forms of spinal defects, most of which come upon the patient unawares. The reference to injury as a cause of displacement of spinal segments is made to better illustrate the Chiropractic claim that most ailments result from pressure upon nerves where they emit between the bones of the spine. The proof of this claim is in the fact that sick people get well after the displaced vertebrae are adjusted to normal position.

Parents' Blue Laws For Flappers Included Curfew and Chaperones

NEW YORK, June 5. — Members of the Parents' League of Brooklyn have decided to take a hand in the social life of school boys and girls between the ages of 15 and 18 years by promulgating certain edicts calculated to counteract the flapper invasion into the life of young girls. League members will see that these "blue laws" for the young are enforced in their own families and will also try to extend the movement to other Brooklyn homes. Here are the rules for flappers:

1—Hours for evening parties are limited from 8.30 to 12. It's curfew after midnight.
2—Parties are to be held only on Friday and Saturday nights.
3—Simple, refined clothes are to be worn at all times.
4—Chaperones will accompa ny the girls home.
6—Censorship over the plays and movies to be attended.
7—Improper dancing forbidden.
8—No refreshments served after dances.
9—Not more than one party to be attended on the same evening.

Here are the rules which both boys and girls in Brooklyn must observe.

1—Entertain in small groups.
2—Serve very simple refreshments at parties.
3—All games must be supervised.
4—Use simple favours and no prizes.
5—Parties must end at 8.30 p.m.
6—Simple afternoon dress is to be worn on all occasions.
7—No movies or theatres except those recommended by the school or investigated or approved by parents.

"We can do nothing with the older boys and girls, whose customs have become more or less established," said Mrs. Otto Affeld, Brooklyn, president of the league, yesterday. Girls over 18 years of age are left to whatever rules their parents prescribe.

HEAVY DOCKET COUNTY COURT

A Number of Cases Already Entered for June Sittings.

The June sittings of the County Court, which opens at the Court-House a week from to-morrow, will evidently be featured by a large docket. A number of cases have already been entered, and there are said to be others hanging fire. Wednesday is the last day for entering records with the Registrar.

The case of Akey vs. Letellier was entered February 14th by plaintiffs for trial by jury. The writ was issued November 17th last. James Akey, a local liveryman, is claiming the sum of $300 from defendant, the amount of a cheque received by him from Paul Drouin for two horses but which, when presented at the bank, was not cashed on account of "no account." The money, plaintiff claims, has never been paid, while he has had to refund to W. J. Poulson, who discounted it, the amount received. Plaintiff claims $390, with interest at 5 per cent., from June 1st, 1921.

The defendant denies that he at any time agreed to or made any promise to answer for the debt of Paul Drouin, and if any promise was made, which they deny, it was verbal and was not made in writing and signed by the defendant. C. R. Widdifield is representing the plaintiff, while Peck, Kerr and McElderry are acting for defendant.

On the direction of the Supreme Court a new trial of the case of Mahood and Havery vs. Robert H. Bigelow will be held, in which The Canadian Credit Men's Association are acting as plaintiffs on behalf of the firm. The plaintiffs claim $1.300, the price of a motor car sold to Robert H. Bigelow. R. R. Hall is acting for the plaintiffs and Gordon and O'Brien for defendants.

Claiming an agreement for hire and a balance of $250 due, Willis Johnson, of Ansley, has entered action against three Toronto gentlemen with summer cottages at Loon Lake. Johnson, who is represented by Gordon and O'Brien, claims an agreement existed whereby he was to receive $100 for the months of June, July, August and September, 1921, for looking after the Loon Lake Cottage. He only received $150, he claims. The claim is against G. S. Duggan, broker; I. S. Beatty, solicitor, and J. L. Burnand, gentleman. Defendants deny any agreement to pay a stated sum, and maintain that fair recompense was given for the services performed.

In the list of non-jury cases allowed to go to trial by the County Court is D. B. Cutcliffe vs. F. P. Quinn, E. M. Quinn and D. Florence and Son. This case has arisen over a promissory note in favor of D. Florence and Son, amounting to $550. Plaintiff claims $553.01.

ANNUAL CHURCH PARADE C. O. F.

Eloquent Sermon by Rev. J. R. Webb—Large Congregation Present.

A large congregation attended services at Murray street Baptist church last evening, on the occasion of the annual church parade of the Canadian Order of Foresters. There was a good attendance of members of the Order, Marshall William Kempt leading the way. Rev. J. R. Webb preached an eloquent sermon, taking his text from Chronicles 2, the 27th chapter, 2nd and 4th verse, "He put towers and castles in the forest, but he went not up to the Temple of the Lord." Mr. Webb congratulated the Foresters on the good work they had done in the past indicating, however, that possibly they had not gone far enough. They should remember always that Christ was above all earthly things, and that He should come first. Loyal members of the Order should be constant in attendance in the temple of the Lord.

The choir rendered excellent music for the service, with an enjoyable vocal solo by yMiss Florence Scott.

URN MADE OF COBBLE STONES AT THE PARK

At the Brock Street corner entrance to Victoria Park an urn built of cobble stones was set up to-day by Mr. Frank Wise, and prepared for its first planting of flowers. It is an idea conceived and accomplished by Mr. Fred. Tuggey, and in its rough way has genuine artistic features. It is made up of three parts, a base, pedestal and the upper containing section, uniformly designed and built. Nearly three times the height of an ordinary urn, and also more capacious, it stands at the park entrance to be approved by the Park Committee of the Council. Mr. Wise had urged some decorative effects of this kind, but the appropriation was so small Ald. Gainey felt that nothing much could be undertaken. Mr. Tuggey's work is striking and practical and permanent. The parts have been strongly fitted together, but can be taken apart at any time. Provision has also been made for their easy carriage should occasion demand the removal of the urn at any time.

MEMORIAL TO HEROES GREAT WAR UNVEILED

To Keep Bver Green Memory of Local Bankers Who Made the Supreme Sacrifice.

BANK OF COMMERCE

Between 50 and 60 of the adherherents and friends of the Canadian Bank of Commerce assembled at the offices of the Bank here on Saturday afternoon, to attend the unveiling ceremonies in connection with the memorial tablet which commemorates the names of men from the Bank's staff in this city and district who served in the Great War. Mr. Dunsford welcomed his guests and an eloquent and touching address was delivered by Judge E. C. S. Huycke, who unveiled the tablet, which he said, "commemorates the memory of those who died for things and people that they loved better than life itself. The Bank has done well in its efforts to perpetuate the heroic sacrifices and the splendid self-denial of these men, in doing as they did, and going as they went. It has been said that it was the soul of Canada that went to the war, and it is equally true it was the soul of the bank that went. Some have returned, for which we thank the Great Father, but there are four names here of those who did not return, and will not return."

His Honor referred to the high percentage of enlistments from the staffs of the various branches of the Canadian Bank of Commerce. Out of a total of 3500 male employees, 1701 did their bit in the Great War, and out of that 1701, the last price was paid by 265 who "did not return and will not return, but whose name liveth forever." There were 503 wounded, therefore, nearly half of those who went suffered by death or wounds. "They were a band of heroes who went out loving their Canada, the British Empire, and their Banner will say, 'What good has it been?' I admit that there are many discordant elements, but what would have happened had the war gone otherwise There would have been no freedom, none of the things that we prize so dearly. We would be a German possession, with the heel of the oppressor on our necks. The Bank has done well to place these names in bronze, for they are the names of those who gave themselves for others; who endured hardship and suffering and physical ills that they might hold the torch uppermost. They are the martyrs of our country, and if they could speak to us, they would say—— "..... .....that ye pray for me.

Here do I lie where I long to be.
Home is the sailor, home from the sea,
And the hunter is home from the hill."

Yes, the hunter and the sailor are at home indeed in eternity, in safe anchorage and harbor."

Welcome to Guests.

Mr. W. H. Dunsford welcomed his guests in a few brief timely sentences, in these words:

"We sincerely welcome your presence to-day to assist in the ceremony of unveiling a tablet erected by the bank in honour of the men in its employ who responded to the call of their king and country during the Great War. While the tablet about to be unveiled is in honor of the 1701 officers of the Canadian Bank of Commerce who served, it is particularly in honor of those members of the Bank's staff who hailed from this district, and very particularly is it erected in memory of the four brave lads who died for their country in the great struggle.

"We are proud of the record of our men as indeed we are proud of our Canadian soldiers generally. When it is realized that the majority of the 1701 employees of the bank who enlisted had never donned the uniform of a soldier until they did so to face the greatest military power the world has ever seen, their record is truly amazing. It is with pride, ladies and gentlemen, that we have to inform you that 210 of our men were decorated, mentioned in despatches, or brought to the notice of the Secretary of War for bravery and gallant services in the field, and of the number, Lieut. E. de Wind, of our Edmonton branch, was awarded the much coveted Victoria Cross. It is with sorrow, however, that we have to tell you that he did not live to enjoy this great distinction. It is fitting that we should remember his name.

"Before calling on Dr. Blagrave to proceed with the ceremony allow me again to welcome you and thank

SUSPECT FILION SENT FOR TRIAL

Charged With Murder of Ernest Edwards in Dummer Township.

Abraham Filion, charged with the murder of Ernest Edwards in Dummer township the second week in April, was committed for trial by Magistrate O. A. Langley in police court this morning. The Magistrate, who withheld judgment at the preliminary hearing last week, said he had given the case full consideration and decided there was sufficient evidence to warrant sending accused up for trial.

Filion, who has been in jail since May 5th, was looking remarkably vigorous to-day, in fact his appearance has improved considerably. He was wearing a soft khaki shirt with turn-down collar and black tie, and his looks showed acquaintanceship with a comb. Accused is 23 years of age and Mrs. Emma Jane Edwards, who has also been sent up for trial on the same charge, is 42.

F. D. Kerr, K.C., is representing Filion, C. R. Widdifield appearing for Mrs. Edwards.

A young man who drove recklessly up the main street, was led into court and later led out minus $25.

CARS TOO NOISY AT SUNDAY NIGHT CONCERT.

Owing to the unnecessarily noisy motor traffic on Water Street, between Murray and Brock Streets, Sunday night, residents of that section could not hear the music of the 57th Rangers' Band in Victoria Park. Several of them have suggested that the motorists who park their cars along that part of Water Street should remain for all or most of the concert and not keep coming and going continuously. It is believed that a little thoughtfulness is all that is required to correct the condition complained of.

THE ROTARIANS LEARN HOW TO MANAGE A HOTEL

Chris Graham Tells Them the Empress Served 85,000 Meals Last Year and Has Pay Roll of $27,000

TODAY'S LUNCHEON

Some interesting details as to the management of a modern hotel were given by Rotarian Chris Graahm at to-day's luncheon of the Peterborough Rotary Club. He was the speaker of the day, and his address not only contained many facts of interest, but also was adorned with some very amusing stories that were appreciated by the members.

President John Crane presided, and among the guests were Fire Chief George Gimblett, W. H. Stock and Wallace Armstrong.

It was announced amid applause that a $25 cheque had been received from the Business Girls' Club.

Greetings were received from Rotarian John Seels who, with Dr. Buchanan, is representing Peterborough Rotary at the Los Angeles convention.

Rotarian Claude Rogers made several announcements in regard to the boys' camp, the main building of which he said was nearing completion. It had been arranged that the Y.M.C.A. would go into camp first, followed by the Mentors' Club, the Holy Name Society, Rotary's own camp and the Boy Scouts in that order. A cook and a man to take care of the plant would be on duty during the whole season.

An invitation was received from the Lindsay club to attend the first ladies' night of the Lindsay organization, which is to be held at the Kirkfield Inn on Thursday. Rotarians W. R. Widdess and Fred Roy were ordered to secure a party of local Rotarians for this trip.

Rotarian Graham began his interesting talk on hotel management by drawing the attention of the members to the rapid growth of the hotel industry, referring to the Bouman interests, the Statler hotels, the new Mount Royal at Montreal, and other big modern hotels. Operating a house with from 76 to 100 rooms in a small city was quite a different matter. The Empress Hotel, Rotarian Graham stated, had a yearly pay rooll of $27,000, with 38 employees, and the operating expenses amounted to $62,000 a year, most of which was spent in Peterborough. $2,500 of this amount consisted of taxes, $1,100 was spent in water and light and the fuel bill cost some $6,000. The number of meals served last year was 85,009. The worst problem faced by a hotel in a city of this size was that while the overhead went on seven days a week, the hotel was only busy some four and a half days a week. The Ontario Temperance Act had added another problem, inasmuch as the hotels were made depositories for empty bottles, and still another was furnished by the souvenir hunters, who carry off spoons or linen. Rotarian Graham pointed out that a community was often judged by its hotel service, and the Empress had always endeavored to give visitors to Peterborough a good impression of the city.

Rotarian Thos. Barrie, just back from a trip to the western provinces, reported that he had found the conditions there much more satisfactory than he had anticipated. Edmonton was in especially good shape and the crop prospects throughout the west were such as to encourage an optimistic feeling.

Rotarian Peter Westbye, after referring to Col. Cooper, former Canadian Trade Commissioner in New York, who is to speak at the next meeting of the Rotary Club on "Canada's Foreign Trade," gave an interesting account of the visit of the Engineering Institute to Ranney's Falls on Saturday. The new Hydro-Electric power house there, he characterized as a wonderful piece of work and he paid a tribute to Mr. A. S. Grant, whose foresight and vision had caused him to anticipate the building of a power house at this point, and to so build the canal that the task of the Hydro engineers was a simple one.

Rotarian Killaly also referred to the visit to the power house and suggested that the Rotarians of Peterobrough, Belleville, Cobourg and Port Hope might unite in holding a basket picnic at Ranney's Falls in order that the work might be inspected. A cordial invitation had been received from Mr. Ireland of the Hydro Electric Commission to visit the power house.

During the luncheon President Crane congratulated Rotarian Asa Huycke upon the splendid success of his musical work, "The Legend of the Bluebird," and the members indicated their appreciation by hearty applause.

The challenge of the Kiwanis club to a game of baseball has been accepted and the game will take place on Thursday evening at Nicholls Oval.

Escaped Lunatic Scares Motorists

HAMILTON, June 5 (Canadian Press). — Motorists on the Toronto-Hamilton highway received a bad scare early this morning.

Bill O'Grady, a lunatic, escaped from the Ontario Hospital, and raced down the Mountain to Aberdeen Avenue, where he seized a car belonging to George Park, of Park & Parkes' drug store, and made a dash for the highway at a dizzy pace, terrifying pedestrians and motorists alike.

Three times at least, and possibly more often, Bill collided with other vehicles in his mad race, causing much damage to cars he struck and to the car he was driving.

The last of these crashes displaced the engine, and set fire to it.

O'Grady is in the safe custody of the police now, but the car is a wreck.

A.O.F. ATTENDED DIVINE SERVICE

Hear Able Sermon by Rev. Widdows, Pastor Christ Church, Toronto.

About one hundred of the members of the Ancient Order of Foresters in the city, including twenty of the members of the feminine "Queen Alexandra Circle" and the juvenile "Court White Lily," attended divine service at St. John's Church last evening, when a very able sermon was preached by Rev. Mr. Widdows, pastor of Christ Church, Toronto.

On behalf of the vicar and wardens Mr. Widdows extended a hearty welcome to the Order, referring to the intrinsic worth of the society, and its establishment at Leeds, in Yorkshire, in the year 1793, in the face of a Governmnt order that no assembly of over 50 members should foregather. The principles of the Order, enunciated by Christian men, won their way through, and now the society is known wherever the British flag flies.

The occasion being the Evensong of Whitsuntide, musical services last evening, under the direction of Mr. R. J. Devey, were fully choral. Gounod's "Send Out Thy Light" was sung during the offertory.

A DISTINGUISHED SPEAKER COMING

Mr. S. J. Moore of Toronto Speaks Twice in This City.

The Baptists of Peterborough have certainly introduced some outstanding speakers to this city during recent years. In this the citizens of Peterborough feel that they have made a real contribution to the welfare of the city.

In connection with the Associational meetings which continue all day Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week another name appears that is known, not only all over Canada, but in the business centres of the United States.

Mr. S. J. Moore speaks both Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. Mr. Moore is president of the Rogers Silverware Company, the Toronto City Dairy, the Home Bank, the Carter Crume Company, and is on the directorate of many business and financial concerns. His main interest, however, as all who know him will concede, is the extension of the kingdom of God in the hearts of men and in the world. These meetings are open to the public, and doubtless many business men and others will avail themselves of the opportunity of hearing one who may not be in this city for many years again.

Mr. Moore is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Eastwood while in Peterborough.

45 ENGINEERS MAKE TRIP TO RANNEY FALLS

Inspected Second Largest Power Unit in the Hydro Electric Central Ontario System.

A WARM WELCOME

Through the courtesy of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission a large number of the engineers of this city, with members of the Peterborough Utilities Commission and members of the Campbellford Council, inspected the Ranney Falls power plant, which lies within the corporation of Campbellford, Saturday afternoon. The total number in the party was about 65 and the trip proved interesting and enjoyable owing to the arrangements made for the conduct of the party and its entertainment by the committee in charge. This commitee, which worked under James Mackintosh, Hydro engineer in this city, and E. R. Shirley, was made up of Fred H. Burgar, superintendent of construction, G. B. Smith, Belleville, superintendent of operation of the Central Ontario system, and A. E. Caddy, in charge of the Campbellford office of the Trent Canal. The affair came off harmoniously in every way. The Peterborough branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada scored another success in carrying out an inspection trip and started the season off in a happy manner.

Forty-five in Party.

Peterborough was represented by about 45 engineers and their guests. The majority motored to the pretty town on the Trent, although there were a small number went by train. The weather was ideal for the trip and aside from chronic trouble such as punctures and blow-outs, the cars had no mishaps. Most of them arrived at their destination between 3 and 4 p.m. in the afternoon. The Campbellford party was on hand and prominent Hydro engineers were waiting to welcome the Peterborough visitors.

That the visit of the party was considered a noteworthy one was evident from the presence of L. J. Ireland, chief municipal engineer of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, G. B. Smith, Belleville, superintendent of operation Central Ontario system, H. C. Don Carlos, chief of operation. These gentlemen were solicitous for their guests and the party was divided into groups placed under capable guides.

The work at the plant is rapidly approaching the completed stage, and the visit was made at an opportune time to see the new unit when practically ready for turning the water in. The forebay which leads out of the canal has yet to be cleaned out, and the second generator is being assembled. The installation of the electrical control apparatus is at an advanced stage and the final touches are being put on the building.

A Pretentious Work.

The Raney Falls power plant represents the most pretentious work the Hydro have in hand at the present time, excluding the Chippewa scheme. Two 5,000 horse power generators will deliver approximately 10,000 horse power, making the unit the second largest one in the Central Ontario system. Healey Falls leads the way with 14,000. Ranney will be a cose second and may take the lead if it is decided that there is sufficient head for another generator to deliver 5,000 horse power more. The Seymour plant above Campbellford, generating 5,000 horse power, is the third largest plant in the system.

The survey for the power plant was started in January of 1920, and work by the Hydro construction forces began in April. The estimated cost of the plant is approximately one million dollars.

RECIPES

WHILE fresh vegetables are rather high early in the season, try using them in salads. A small amount goes much farther this way than if the vegetables are served as a vegetable with the meat.

Do without dessert if necessary but serve some sort of a green salad at least once a day during the spring months.

And a salad need not be an elaborate affair swathed in a rich mayonnaise dressing. A dinner salad is preferably composed of salad greens, with maybe a strip or two of asparagus or some other fresh vegetable to give tone, and plain French dressing.

If the greens are crisp and dry and the dressing carefully seasoned the perfection of the salad is assured.

To prepare salad greens for a salad: If possible wash each leaf under running water, holding the leaf open and at a sharp angle. Tiny, invisible insects are washed off and any sand or dirt is carried away by the force of the water.

Shake each leaf as free from water as possible and put on a clean dry towel to drain. Wrap loosely in the towel and put in a cold place for an hour or longer.

The lettuce or other salad plant becomes very crisp under this treatment and seems to have a fresh dewiness quite impossible to attain by washing and drying each leaf with a towel. The French drying each leaf with a towel. The French housewife has a wire salad basket. She puts her carefully washed greens in this wire box and whirls them rapidly. This dries the plant quickly, but fails to give the crispness

Always pull off any wilted edges of the leaves with the fingers. Shred the plants with a silver knife. Never leave the salad till the last minute when preparing a meal. It takes time to wash and crisp salad plants.

Do this right after lunch and have everything ready to put together when needed. A green salad with a French dressing should not stand after being mixed for the oil and vinegar with the leaves.

There are many salad plants to choose from. Try them all and avoid monotony. Keep this list in mind when you go to market and be on the lookout for something different:

Of course, lettuce comes first. Most persons prefer head lettuce, but leaf lettuce contains quite as many of the much talked of vitamines as head. Water cress, curly endive, romaine, French endive, chicory, young dandelions, parsley, mint nasturtiums, tender young onion tops—these should all be used alone or in combinations.

Hard-boiled eggs add to the attractiveness and nourishment of any green salad served with French dressing. And speaking of hard-boiled eggs, remember that it takes longer to cook a very fresh egg than it does one three or four days old.

Let the eggs stand in boiling water 30 minutes. Do not let the water bubble, but keep at the simmering point.

French Dressing

Chill the bowl or saucer or mixing bottle. Chill the oil and vinegar. Put one-half teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, three tablespoons oil, one tablespoon vinegar in mixing bottle and shake vigorously. Or put the salt, pepper and oil in a bowl and add the vinegar slowly, beating constantly with a silver fork and a dover beater

Many women like to mix the dressing at the table when the salad is served. A pinch of powdered sugar and a suggestion of mustard may be used with salt and pepper. Olive oil is expensive, but of course desirable. However, there are several vegetable oils on the market that make delicious dressings. Try until you find the oil you personally like the best.

Be sure the oil you buy is fresh. If it is put up in tins can see that the can looks new and is without "dents."

Always store oil in a good place. Wipe the can carefully before putting it away after using and be sure the cap is screwed on tightly. Oil becomes tainted quickly and these precautions are simple but effective.

Religion is not a thing of books and sermons. It is living communion with God, or it is nothing. It is the deepest, closest human experience.

HAVELOCK WON BASEBALL GAME

Defeated the Norwood Aggregation in a Good Fast Game — Score Was 6-1.

HAVELOCK, June 5.—A ball game betwen Norwood and the fast local team was played here Saturday, Norwood having strengthened their team by having a few Peterborough men added in the persons of Dr. Green's brother, and F. Fanning, however, from the result of the first innings it would appear that they should have waited till Heckman could have appeared. The Norwood team went down in the first innings as fast as they appeared. Havelock put the game on in the final innings when B. Quinn, McGill and Brennan came through with hits with men on, this with a few errors on the parts of the imports took the pep out of Doc Green who was twirling for the U.F.O. town.

During the first shower Norwood started the second innings and were lucky enough to get a man across home plate after two were down before the clouds burst and everybody had to find shelter. Norwood expect to get their revenge by watching Hastings trim the locals next Friday in the first game between the leading teams in the Center County League.

Score 6—1.

A RADIO CLUB CAMPBELLFORD

Outfit Expected to Arrive This Week—First in the District.

CAMPBELLFORD, June 5.—The Radio club of Campbelliford is preparing for the installation of their receiving set which will arrive sometime this week. Two poles about 35 feet in length are to be erected, one on the roof of the Peterboro Cereal Company's store-house, and the other on the roof of the Herald Building. The aerials will be stretched between the poles. The set is being prepared by the Independent Telephone Corporation of Toronto, and will be installed in the large assembly hall above the Herald Office, which the Radio club has rented as their clubroom. The Club will furnish the rooms so that the club members and their friends may "listen in" to the many programmes being sent out by the radio broadcasting stations throughout the world.

This is the first radio club ever organized in this district, but there are several persons owning individual sets.

Constructed a Set.

Mr. Kenneth Cairns, an employee of the Hydro Electric Power Commission here, constructed a receiving set some time ago and he has listened to stations in many parts of America, and has heard conversations between steamships on the Atlantic Ocean about 300 miles out from the coast of England. Mr. Cairns is one of the men on the Property Committee of the Radio Club, where his practical experience along this line will be in demand.

McLaughlin, B.D., of Pontypool, who visited the League after the ball game, also spoke briefly on the work of the Citizenship Department of which he is the 4th vice-president for the Conference. Next week's meeting is under the Christian Endeavor Department; after June the League will close for the months of July and August as usual.

HASTINGS LOST LACROSSE GAME

Havelock and Hastings Clash in an Exhibition Fixture.

HAVELOCK, June 5.—A lacrosse match which was played here Saturday between a picked team of local intermediate and Junior players. The result of a rather interesting game was 7-2 in favor of the locals. B. Bunkman and C. Brennan were the pick of the home team while Stevenson and Sculer for Hastings were good. The locals are not in playing the same class of lacrosse that was enjoyed here last year. No doubt missing the clever work of P. King and O'Brien and McGee, who are playing in Toronto this season. However better things are expected of the Juniors. Some of the young sters look promising.

IN TRENT RIVER AND THE DISTRICT.

IN FILLBROOK AND DISTRICT.

June Meeting of Women's Institute Postponed — Court of Revision.

MILLBROOK, June . 5— The June meeting of the Women's Institute, which was to have been held on Wednesday, May 31st, in the council chamber, has been postponed till a later date as the Cavan Council was meeting that evening and the room was in use; also the attendance of members who did turn out was disappointingly small.

The council has requested the Insitute to see that the Soldiers' Monument is decorated next Wednesday evening in preparation for Sports Day, on Thursday, June 8th, which is expected to be the biggest day Millbrook has known for some time. All the members of the Institute, who can assist in the work of decorating, are asked to be on hand on Wednesday evening and also to bring as many flowers as possible as a quantity will probably be needed to do the task in a suitable ner.

A Tennis Court.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Stinson have kindly offered the use of their tennis court to the Young Peoples' organizations of the Methodist church for the summer. Plans are being completed by which the Tuxis Boys, Trail Rangers, Senior Epworth League, and C.G.I.T. group will take advantage of this generous offer, and begin play for the season, a friendly rivalry between the various teams adding interest to the games.

First Aid Talk.

The "Wide-Awakes" group of Canadian girls in training of the Methodist church, held their weekly meeting on Friday evening with a large attendance of members. The president, Miss Jean Burnham, occupied the chair and after the business and devotional periods, Miss Finnimore kindly came up from the hospital and gave the girls a most interesting and instructive talk on "First Aid." A vote of thanks was moved by Gladys Tucker and seconded by Marjorie Sayles, the members showing their appreciation by a hearty clap of the hands. The group "yell" with a sing song and treat of candy brought the meeting to a close. Next week's meeting will be held on Monday, June 5, at 7.30 p.m., instead of on Tuesday, which is the regular time for the C.G.I.T. to have their group together but on account of examinations for the High School members that day, Monday evening will be used instead.

Mission Band.

The regular monthly meeting of the Mission Band will be held on Friday, June 9, at 7.30 p.m. As this is the last meeting before the holiday season a large attendance of members and their friends is looked for and an interesting programme will be provided.

Court of Revision.

The Court of Revision for the village of Millbrook meets on Monday evening, June 5, at 7 p.m. and the council meeting immediately afterwards.

Woman's Auxiliary.

In the account of the congregational meeting held in the Methodist church on Tuesday evening it was incorrectly stated that Miss Hampton read the report of the Woman's Auxiliary, Mrs. C. W. Richards, the secretary, should have been the one mentioned, Miss Byam reported the Mission Band, and Jean Burnham the C.G.I.T. work, the girls present giving their group "yell" at the supper hour. Mr. Irwin Hatherly moved a vote of thanks to Miss Hampton for her faithfulness in providing flowers for the church on each Sunday, and also for their tasteful arrangement, all present signifying their hearty approval by continued applause. Rev. Mr. Tucker in his concluding address, stated that at the district meeting held recently in Peterboro the report from the Millbrook circuit was one of the best in proportion to size of any presented by the various pastors in attendance.

Cobourg Convention.

Considerable local interest is taken by the farming community in the recent announcement of the Ontario Department of Agriculture to the effect that the annual convention of the Agricultural representatives will be held at Cobourg this year during the week of July 3rd. This body of farm experts has formerly met at the O.A.C. Guelph, but it was felt that a change would be beneficial; though as the members in attendance are usually large the place chosen may not be as convenient for the purposes of entertainment of delegates as has been the case in Guelph. It is expected however that the advantages accruing to the farmers of this part of the province will more than offset any drawbacks that may present themselves.

THREE KILLED WHEN TRAIN STRUCK AUTO.

SHERBROOKE, June 5.—(Canadian Press).—Alex. Dougay, his wife and fifteen year old daughter, Gladys are dead, and their son, Patrick, seriously injured as the result of an accident when a motor car in which they were riding was struck by a train near Norton Mills, Saturday.

HENRY SPENCER, well-known and respected citizen of Watertown, N.Y., who reports he has gained 15 pounds since he began taking Tanlac, and always tells his friends how this medicine restored his health.

"My friends often say: 'Never saw you looking better; what are you doing for yourself?' and I always tell them: 'Well, I am taking Tanlac now,'" recently declared Henry Spencer, 415 East Street, Watertown, a well-known and highly respected citizen.

"For more than a year," he said, "I seemed to be run down all over. From 160 pounds I fell off to 135, lost my appetite, and my stomach gave me no end of trouble. The little I ate caused me to bloat with gas, and I was subject to dull, heavy headaches. I had no energy and it was all I could do to get around the house. I had dizzy spells," when everything would blur before my eyes and I had to catch myself to keep from falling.

"Well, now I have gained 15 pounds, feel better in every way, and can work as well as ever, since taking Tanlac. I relish what I eat, with a fine appetite, and gas, indigestion, headache and dizziness are completely gone. Yes, sir, I just can't say too much for Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

RILEY'S ARMY TO GROW TO 15,000

Stay in Ottawa Till Grievances Are Redressed

OTTAWA, June 5.—(Canadian Press.)—For about twenty minutes this morning General Riley's Army of unemployed, which has been marched from Toronto sat in silent siege of Parliament Buildings, then marched back to barracks. Every consideration and sympathetic treatment was promised by the Prime Minister and by Hon. Beland Minister of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment at an interview between the army executive and the government.

In presenting his demands to the ministers, Riley declared that the parliamentary committee of the D.S.C.R. was a farce. So was the D.S.C.R.

The Department treated fit men and in cases of men who had been treated it was "be damned to them". He declared distress was rampant in Toronto that his army would have no homes when they returned to Toronto, that they "never got a show" and that he would not tolerate the boys going home to die of hunger.

He drew a dismal picture of the sufferings of his men, and in impassioned tones declared that they were ragged and had literally sweated blood on the march to Ottawa. Hon. Dr. Beland told the executive that grievances were being redressed, and admiteld that distress existed. It was impossible to please everybody, he said, but measures were being applied in an effort to meet reasonable requests. It had been stated in the newspapers that nothing had been done for the soldiers. This was not correct, and while he had always fought against the Conservatives politically, he would give them credit for their work for soldiers.

At one o'clock today, Riley, after consultation with his men stated in a speech to them: "We will remain in Ottawa till hell freezes over, or until the bayonets of the police drive us from here, unless the Government gives us satisfaction". This statement was cheered by the men for several minutes. J. S. Woodworth, M.P. for Center Winnipeg, offered his services to the men in any capacity. Riley declared that as result of the government's treatment of the men, his army will number 15,000 in three days.

Little Sport Hats to Wear In or Out of Town

The whole world is clad in green and the great out-of-doors calls insistently. It's away to the lakes for some, off to the links for others and many will seek their recreation right in town. It does not matter where you go or what you do, you'll require a sport hat anyway.

You've never seen these before, for they were just unpacked this morning. They'll reveal their lovliness to you if you come in immediately. Note, we say immediately, for we do not expect they will be here long. A legion of glorious White models of Silk, Embroidered Georgette Crepe, and combination Straw and Georgette. Rhinestone ornaments and daggers give them a striking air. The Shapes are saucy little Sports numbers that show the versatility of the Sailor. Prices up to $12.50.

Another impressive lot are of White Felt and White Straw combined; also some two-toned affairs. They are jaunty little models, and priced only from $2.50 to $6.50.

In the Dim Past the First Sailor Men hoisted their crude sails on still cruder craft, and leaving their rock-rimmed island, started for the distant shore that was discernible only on a clear day, while their wives and families stood about to witness the commencement of the great adventure.

Eventually they returned with strange fruits, spices, and goods. And so commenced the business of trading.

There have been many ups and downs in trade since then, many developments and many reactions.

Happily we are experiencing a strong, healthy volume of business these days, that speaks well for our Merchandise and Prices.

Summer Frocks—Delightfully New and Piquant
The Smartest of the Smart

Thank goodness there is such a thing as distinctiveness where clothes are concerned. Otherwise a frock would be only a frock and we would miss the opportunity of displaying these beautiful summer creations that represent much originality and ingenuity. Can you spare a few moments to inspect them when you are down town?

The Bride's Lingerie Must Be of Silk or Satin and it must have other qualities, too. It must be artistically garnished with Lace, Ribbon, Georgette, or some other form of trimming. When we look about our stock of Silk Lingerie, we do not wonder that it holds such attraction for discriminating women. It embodies so much that only expert makers and designers can create.

Envelope Chemise of Wash Satin, obtainable in Flesh or Pink. The Georgette top is garnished with Lace and Ribbon, and much pin tucking. Priced at $7.50.

Envelopes of White Habutai at $2.25 and $3.75. Of Crepe de Chine and Satin, in White or Flesh, from $4.25 to $9.50.

Gowns, Pink Wash Satin, V-shaped neck, pointed shoulder of Filet Lace, clusters of pin tucks down front, Empire style with draw ribbon in bodice. Price $13.95.

A DELIGHTFUL CREATION of Dotted Voile will fit into any Summer picture, whether it is Black with tiny White dots or Mauve with little pin head dots. In both numbers White Val. Lace is prettily arranged—edging the deep hem that is turned up on the outside, forming pockets and finishing the sleevs, collar and cuffs. Priced at $15.75.

FOR AFTERNOON PARTIES or Street Wear, we can recommend a charming number of Navy Swiss, with small White dots. It is greatly enlivened by the influence of White Organdy, in the form of a wide girdle, collar and cuffs, and also a wide inset band in the Skirt that is trimmed with circles of the Navy Swiss and edged with Val. Lace. Priced at $18.95.

Gingham and Organdy Arranged in Novel Ways

There is wide choosing in Frocks of this description. There is number after number that will supply interesting features to dwell upon. For instance, there are two pretty numbers in Brown. The other shows a plain Organdy Waist and Brown Check Skirt, with novelty trim. It is $12.95. A Golden-hued Checked Gingham is as pleasant as a beam of sunlight. It has three little White Organdy panels on the sides and a large bowed Organdy girdle, all of which are edged with Yellow. The price is $12.75. One of Lavender Plaid Gingham has a White Organdy Overskirt, with patch pockets arranged with biased folds. It is $11.75.

Britain Ready For Radio

LONDON.—Government sanction is all that is needed to make radio a national public utility in England.

News of this development follows reports from America that a national system of broadcasting, with rental of radiophone receiving sets in homes, was being planned there. That England is actually preparing for such radio service in the near future is gleaned from a statement issued by Godfrey Isaacs, managing director of Marconi's Wireless Telegraph Company.

In this statement, Isaacs looks forward to the time when radio will be as popular as the telephone and outlines a program for an organized public service which the Marconi company is ready to install as soon as the necessary authority is obtained.

In All Homes.

"My hope is that in time every home will have a wireless set," says Isaacs. "Our program is more particularly to supply the instruments to the householder on hire.

"Our idea is to have two or three broadcasting stations in different parts of the country and to have a program for different hours of the day. We shall transmit by particular wave lengths—if we get assistance, as I have no doubt we shall, from the authorities—which will be so confined as to reach only these particular receivers. Nobody else will be disturbed and the telephonic receivers will not be disturbed either by wireless telephonic or telegraphic communication."

This, says Isaacs, will be the start of a system which will spread through the continent of Europe and eventually will reach over the entire world.

Great Possibilities.

"I do not think that anybody realizes how big a thing this is going to be," he adds. "A message sent out by the Government or the police would be in every home in the country in a second.

"We have been perfecting this system for a long time. We have been working in close touch and co-operation with the big American, German and French firms."

Cost of such a system to the consumer would be cheap, says Isaacs. The receiving set would be leased at a modest annual sum and the service rendered also for a small amount.

A GOOD CLASS OF EMIGRANTS

Old Country Farmers Are Coming Out to Try Their Luck in Canada—Visitors to the Country.

QUEBEC, June 5.—Can. Pacific Steamer Minnedosa from Liverpool with 604 passengers, 265 cabin and 439 third class arrived at Quebec and berthed at Louis dock. Saturday the third class passengers were landed at seven o'clock for immigration inspection and railway transportation by C. P. R. Special to their destinations in Toronto and Canadian West. These passengers are all British and a very fine class of farmers, married men and women and splendid children. Included is party of 20 domestics who came out under the auspices of the Salvation Army and conducted by Envoy Mrs. Paterson.

The cabin passengers comprise many interesting arrivals. Mr. Leslie Cox, member of the United Times, South America, is among the number on a tour through Canada. Also Mr. A. Staks, who has come to Canada to study Agricultural methods and training college. Reverend W. Gefford is another passenger who has had large concessions of land granted him in Brazil which he proposes developing, including the building of a railway which will materially affect three million people. To accomplish his object he will also purchase a two hundred ton schooner, which he himself will navigate, being a skilled sailor. Rev. Mr. Geffard has had great missionary experience with various tribes in South Africa and frequently face many dangerous situations. As may be assumed he is a great linguist. Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Wingate, son-in-law and daughter of the Hon. C. J. Doherty are among the passengers also Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood, the latter daughter of Chief Justice Anglin, Mr. J. Forsyth Smith, Canadian Government Fruit Trade Commissioner, Brigadier Gerald Porteous and wife of Instow, England. Mr. T. Goldsmith, Lieut. of the Northwest Mounted Police is returning to Regina, Sask. with a prisoner who had been arrested in Edinburgh, Scotland. The prisoner is David O. Creig, who was an accountant in the employ of a Regina Lumber Co. falsified his accounts and absconded with six thousand dollars in cash. Captain Andrew Hamilton, a staunch friend of Canada is returning to British Columbia which won his affections thirty years ago. Capt. Hamilton is now in the eighty-fifth year of his age and with Mrs. Hamilton has come back to Canada to spend the winter of his life with their two sons and grandson and say they will settle in a small house with a bit of garden in Victoria, twenty miles from Duncan. Going back to the earlier days of Capt. Hamilton, those who know him best in Europe as well as in Canada looking at him as he stands today fresh in second youth and happy spirits, acknowledge how much Canada and the Empire owe to him. A generation ago when Canada had comparatively few srh in England he toiled at the great Assembly Hall in the East end of London, day after day to help the "under dogs" so many of whom have since reaped in happy Canadian homes, the fruit of his unselfish devotion. Both Captain and Mrs. Hamilton were pleased to once more put their foot on Canadian soil, and look forward with the greatest pleasure to their return to British Columbia.

About "Canadian Exchange"

"The Dearborn Independent," an interesting Michigan publication, has this to say about "Canadian Exchange":

Never, before, during, nor since the World War, was there a moment when there existed a reason for the depreciation of the Canadian dollar in United States money. The exchange rate was an arbitrary demand of the banks, and was participated in on the other side of the border. Under ordinary practice, any exchange would be confined to the cost of service, whether the exchange was made here or over the line. That is, whatever the charge, it would not represent depreciation.

There was no greater inflation of the Canadian paper circulation during the World War, than there was of our own. Her credit was as sound as was that of this country, and only the fact that Canadian currency is not a legal tender here gave opportunity for taxing the holder the difference between face value and what the bankers said they would allow for it.

Recently, Seattle business men decided to accept Canadain currency at par, and boasted of it. Now comes Spokane with a hotel patronized by many Canadians, which has never made a difference between Canadian and American money. There is no question that its fair dealing has made many friends.

The beauty of this generosity is that it has cost the hotel man nothing. He wisely used his American money in carrying on his business, and kept his profits in Canadian currency, from time to time investing them in Canadian war bonds, which, by the way, never went below par.

Now that the rate of exchange between the two countries is again normal, the wisdom of that Spokane landlord is apparent.

Radio Inspectors Keep Watch On Licensed Amateur Stations

BY R. L. DUNCAN
Director, Radio Institute of America

When you visit a friend who has a transmitting set, don't start tinkering with it.

You may make yourself liable to a heavy fine and be the cause of having the set confiscated. For none but a licensed operator may transmit radio messages.

The government regulations are strict on this score. There is no charge by the Department of Commerce for the license. But a fine up to $500 may be imposed for a violation.

Three Classes

The licences granted are for:

1. General amateur stations, permitted to use a power input of one kilowatt and operate on a wave length up to 200 meters.

2. Restricted amateur stations, located within five miles of a naval or military radio station, limited to a power input of ½ kilowatt and a wave length of 200 meters.

3. Special amateur stations, permitted to transmit on wave lengths up to 375 meters. The applicant for this license must have had at least two years' experience and must prove that his operation will be of direct benefit to the science of radio.

Besides these genaerl classes, there are several special licenses issued to universities and experimental stations.

All stations are required to use as little power as possible to carry on their successful communication.

Malicious and wilful interference or the sending out of false or fraudulent distress signals are prohibited.

Applications for operators and station licenses of all classes should be made to the radio inspector of the district in which the station is located. There are nine of these districts with their headquarters in the following cities:

First District—Boston.
Second District—New York.
Third District—Baltimore.
Fourth District—Norfolk, Va.
Fifth District—New Orleans.
Sixth District—San Francisco.
Seventh District—Seattle, Wash.
Eighth District—Detroit.
Ninth District—Chicago.

Special Permits

Those amateurs who live in places too far from the district office to make personal application can get temporary permits if they satisfy the authorities by letter that they are familiar with all requirements.

Even after an applicant has passed his examination for an amateur license, he cannot operate his station until he gets a station license from the inspector. This is obtained by filling out an official blank with a complete description of the apparatus. If it conforms to the government requirements, the license and station call is issued and the amateur may start transmitting.

But he must remember at all times that he cannot commercialize his station

CHAPTER LIV
NEW CLOTHES

I went down to Jack's office. Lately I've imagined that he doesn't like to have me drop in there every time I'm down town.

Anyway, my checking account had to be fixed up. Jack figured up my stubs for me and asked me a few questions, and it proved that I was overdrawn on account of the down payment on that electrical sewing machine.

Of course Jack was perfectly lovely about going over to the bank to straighten things out for me, but I think he was almost too serious when he warned me:

"Better be careful, Peggins. Maybe I won't have the cash to fix you up, next time!"

In the bank lobby I stopped to talk a few minutes with Jessie Langdon. Her husband is in the office with Jack. He does the same kind of work. Jessie rather boasted that Bob Langdon had been doing a lot of business lately. Her story hurt me awfully, because I know Jack has sold very little insurance, not more than enough to justify his regular salary.

I resolved that I'd be awfully careful about spending until times improve.

Being down town, that morning, I ran into Chadbourne's to pick out the pelts they were lending the Little Playhouse company for "Skoal."

I fell quite in love with one piece of fox, a beautiful soft grey, dyed of course, and the most becoming thing I ever put on. The clerk reminded me that furs are very much cheaper in midsummer than any other season and it really seemed a wise economy for me to buy the piece. I ordered it charged and sent, so Jack wouldn't have to worry about the bill for a while.

That night I was perfectly wild to show Jack how perfectly becoming gray fox is to me. But it turned out to be a hot evening, and Jack looked decidedly fagged when he came home. So I put the scarf away. I'd surprise Jack when we started on the motor trip. A fox scarf would be just the thing for such a trip.

This purchase reminded me that I ought to foot up my bills.

There were several milk bills. I had not intended to let them accumulate; after I put the first one aside I had simply forgotten about it until the middle of the month. Jack is so particular, that I didn't like to speak of it then, so I just let it run over until the next month. It was the same with my dry goods bills; and there were two from the milliner.

The latter reminded me that I must pick out a close hat for the auto trip. I wanted one of Paisley silk, it would be gray, and wouldn't show the dust. And if possible, I would buy a scarf to match.

The Future of the Welsh Wizard

If the Welsh wizard is the most powerful British statesman since Pitt, it is interesting to guess at his future. He was born in 1863. Apparently he will be a force as long as he lives. In the Boer War he had to be protected from mobs because he thought his country in the wrong. He 1909 he was the most hated man in England because he tried to tax away the idle land of the aristocracy. Of the men who were in power in 1916, when he became premier, he has seen every one disappear from importance.

He probably has ten years of energy ahead. Whether he counts much or little in that time, depends on how he can stand adversity. He, like every man who is in power for long, must have his ups and downs. The temperament that is as calm in defeat as in triumph is the one that lasts. Lloyd-George himself said in conversation that a public man can survive anything except his own bitterness. When one of England's greatest statesmen was felicitated on the public enthusiasm, he said: "Wait a while. They will be howling for my head."

That is the way to take power. Old Clemenceau, in his 82nd year, has a philosophic cynicism that keeps him fresh. If Roosevelt had cared less he might have lived and come back into power. Mr. Wilson's break-down might not have occurred if he had not taken opposition so hard.—From International Magazine.

TRUE DETECTIVE STORIES

THE LADY OF THE OPALS

Who was she, this mysterious gorgeous personage who flitted across the pages of European diplomacy only a few years before the World War broke with a crash that shattered the lives of nations as well as individuals, and, at the same time that it produced a host of minor spies and secret governmental agents, sent those who were well-known into the forced retirement of safety?

Men knew her by many names. In Paris she was fond of posing as a princess of Russian blood. In St. Petersburg she allowed it to be known that she was of Austrian extraction, while in London and Brussels, in Rome and Madrid and Geneva, she could call up any one of a number of other explanations of her past history and her present business. But the diplomatic underworld, the far-flung web of the vast spy-system which included every European capital in its meshes, she was always referred to as "The Lady of the Opals," and around her, there sprung up a sort of legend—a belief that she was responsible for every successful coup, no matter where it might be staged.

It was for this reason that "The Lady of the Opals" was credited with having manoeuvred the betrayal of Thiers' project of war to Bismarck, with having had a hand in the affair of the Russian loans which led to the French naval demonstration at Cronstadt, with having engineered much of the intrigue which preceded the declaration of war between Russia and Japan, with having possessed a fore-knowledge of the plots which culminated in the death of Prince Rudolph of Austria at Myerling Castle and that of the Empress Elizabeth at Geneva. All these and as many more were supposed to have been, at least in part, the handiwork of this mistress of mysteryland, or at least so the story goes, for each exploit she demanded as her recompense an opal which would match the string of fire-flashing gems she already possessed.

In describing this strange creature whose mind was always busily toying with some new problem of diplomacy, some new method by which she might alter the history of the world and, at the same time, add to her collection of opals, Vance Thompson says:

"In a box not far from mine at the Theatre de la Monnaie in Brussels I noticed a woman conspicuous for her pallor, her coiffure of tawny hair, in which were white striations, and the opals she wore. I recognized the opals. Indeed, they are known in all Europe, these occult, wonderful stones. They have been paid for by every feminine treason that a woman of high birth and dangerous destiny can commit, for there have been few diplomatic roguerie in the past thirty years in which she has not had some part, slight at least.

"She, and not Bismarck; she, and not Emperor Franz Joseph; she, and not that poor creature, Crispi, cemented the Triple Alliance, united France and Russia and changed the diplomatic map of Russia. She it was she sold to Fourens—at the price of how many opals I know not—divers documents in manuscript relating to Bulgarian affairs, letters that were forged by—whom? I asked the question, and in yellowing lace, in the opalescent splendor of her jewels, the grande dame laughed. Her old eyes were full of wisdom and mockery, possibly as she recalled the fact that a woman's love of intrigue and jewels, a few forged letters, the Czar's anger at being duped and Fourens' adventurous disdain for ordinary diplomatic methods had been the feathery origins of one of the most amazing alliances of history."

Shortly after this—for the time of which Thompson writes is the early part of the present century—"The Lady of the Opals" dropped out of sight. Rumor had it that she had retired, to meditate upon the flashing beauty of her gems and the manifold exploits in which she had exercised so strange an influence. But the fact remains that Europe knew her no more—nor was the real identity of this woman who had made history ever directly responsible with the many diplomatic triumphs which she had engineered.

How They Broke the Mighty Guns of Heligoland

(Special Correspondence.)

BERLIN, Saturday.

GONE are the glories of the olden days—departed is the last vestige of German naval greatness—the Kaiser's pet project, the fortification of Heligoland as a perpetual menace to Great Britain is no more.

For the last of the gigantic fortifications which made Heligoland impregnable has been destroyed by the allied order, and now the island, which once bristled with giant guns and was surrounded with deadly mines, is again the home of simple fisherfolk.

When the British handed it over to the Germans one bright summer day in 1890 it was hardly anticipated that twenty-four years later the little North Sea isle, armed to the very edge of its cliffs, would be a pistol pointed at the breast of England. To-day the British are supervising the demolition of its last fortifications.

The nation which created this formidable outpost of naval ambitions is itself demolishing it, and in so doing the prophecy of the Kaiser, "The future of Germany is on the water," has met a caustic refutation.

The romantic expectations with which the Germans bought the island are a matter of the past, and what now is going on in Heligoland is a process of the most prosaic nature and a most disheartening one to those performing it. It consists of the systematic destruction of some of the best fortifications and one of the best naval harbors in existence.

This work is being carried out by German engineers and laborers under the supervision of British naval officers and civil engineers, who form the Heligoland subcommission of the Naval Inter-Allied Commission of Control. As for the destruction of the harbor, care has been taken to leave intact what is necessary for the requirements of a purely commercial port. In fact, with the removal of those of its parts which served war purposes the harbor of Heligoland will be more suitable for commercial craft than it ever was before.

The considerable amount of scrap material yielded by the work of demolition is characteristic of the time, energy and material invested in the fortifications. By September 30, 1921, the quantity of concrete and brickwork demolished was about 200,000 cubic yards, and in connection with the work done until the same date about 432 tons of explosives had been used. Even with the use of the most efficient and modern methods and devices the task of razing the fortifications was unusually difficult.

Heligoland's History One Of Many Frequent Changes

Heligoland became German territory thirty-two years ago. It repeatedly changed hands in the course of its history. Originally a domain of the Dukes of Holstein-Gottorp, it came under Danish sovereignty in 1714. A hundred years later the British took possession of it and provided it with a Governor.

Negotiations between England and Germany in the latter part of the eighties led to a treaty in 1890, whereby Germany, against the cession of rights in Africa, obtained the control of the island and incorporated it in the Kingdom of Prussia. The ceremony of handing the island over to Germany took place August 10, 1890. British sailors stood in rank and file while their superiors shook hands with the German commission which took possession.

The fortifications on Heligoland were begun in 1903 and finished in 1914. Since January, 1917, the island served as a submarine base, but the U-boat docks were not completed before the last year of the war. After the British raid on Zeebrugge the defensive devices in Heligoland were considerably improved; it was also completely surrounded by barbed-wire fences erected below the surface of the sea. The garrison numbered 6,000 men; after the hostilities had commenced, the civil population was removed to the German seashore, where the city of Blankenese became its temporary abode.

Inregard to the system of its fortifications, Heligoland resembled much more a battleship than a fortress. It comprised the war harbor and submarine base on the one hand, and the fortifications on the other. The former possessed all the characteristics of a strong naval base, while the forts sported the most modern and powerful guns Krupp was able to produce.

The most conspicuous part of the island's armaments were four twin turrets, with long-barrelled guns of 15 inches caliber. These turrets were known as "Anna," "Bertha," "Cesar" and "Dora." There were eight 11 inch howitzers and four 8.2 inch single-turret guns; further, eight 4 inch guns on the mole, four 3.2 inch guns on the dune and four 3.2 inch guns on the upper part of the island, as well as one 4-inch and ten 1.3 inch anti-aircraft guns.

The emplacements of some of the big guns were armored with steel plates about 3 feet 4 inches thick, and the protection of the dugouts consisted of walls and ceilings of solid concrete of a thickness of 15 feet. The hospital, which was equipped in most up-to-date fashion and contained all implements of medical science—like an X-ray chamber, a laboratory, &c.—was imbedded 60 feet deep in the solid rock.

Ever since 1914 Heligoland was considered impregnable and the British fleet refrained from any attack upon the island, the guns of which fired just one shot during the four years of the war; they had no opportunity to fire more. And they never will, because the huge barrels and their emplacements are a pile of ruins and the steel constructions which aroused the admiration of the experts have become a heap of scrap iron.

If, however, the artillery of Heligoland was too formidable to ever become effective the submarines for which it served as a refuge were the most active weapons of the German navy. The fortifications and naval constructions in Heligoland cost Germany the countervalue of $150,000,000, but the damage caused to the enemy's shipping by the U-boats of Heligoland exceeded that figure by far.

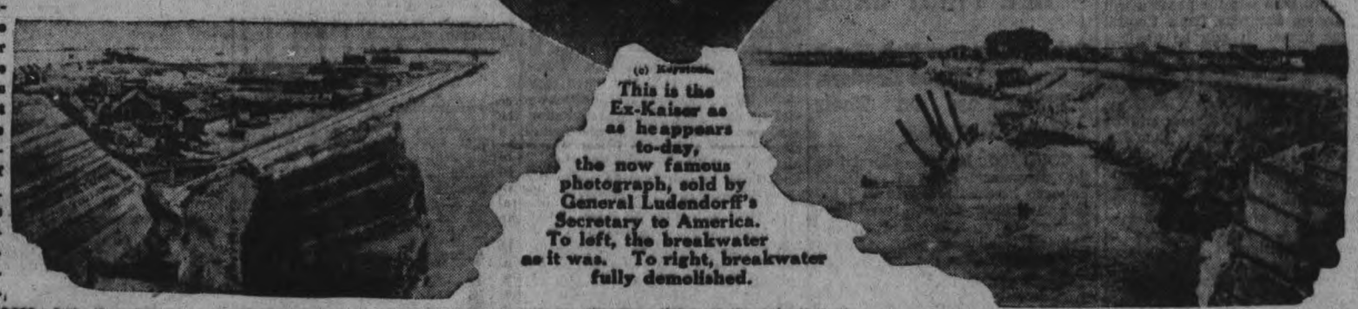
The work of demolition began in February, 1920, after the representatives of the Naval Inter-Allied Commission of Control had paid their first visit to Heligoland.



(c) Keystone.

This is the Ex-Kaiser as he appears to-day, the now famous photograph, sold by General Ludendorff's Secretary to America. To left, the breakwater as it was. To right, breakwater fully demolished.

Great howitzer, as it was in the days of the empire.

Article 115 of the Versailles Treaty provided that "the fortifications, military establishments and harbors of the Island of Heligoland and Dune shall be destroyed under the supervision of the principal allied Governments, by German labor and at the expense of Germany, within a period to be determined by the said Governments."

According to the German estimate the destruction of the fortifications and war harbor would have lasted seven years; but the requirements laid down by the Allies representatives will be fulfilled in about two. The inter-allied sub-commission comprised eleven officers and twenty-three men, under the command of Capt. Leonard Willan and later of Capt. Andrew Cunningham, both of the British Navy.

The actual demolition was carried out by a number of German engineers and 757 laborers. Of these 450 were active in the harbor and 357 on the fortifications. The pay of the workmen was comparatively high for German laborers. Skilled men received 14.30 marks an hour and unskilled ones 12 marks in addition to such facilities as cheap lodgings and canteen meals.

The demolition was carried out with the aid of drilling and boring machinery and explosives of the most modern type. The emplacements of the different batteries, the gun turrets and, in particular, the protective walls and ceilings of the dugouts, which consisted of huge blocks and powerful strata of solid concrete, were blown up. The same method of destruction was applied to the different breakwaters, moles and so-called "caissons."

The gun barrels and a great part of the armor plates and steel constructions were cut to pieces. The hydraulic rooms which were connected with the gun turrets and with other artillerytic devices, were likewise demolished. The German engineers used an apparatus which somewhat resembles the notorious flame thrower of the war. It shoots out pure oxygen, which burns into the strongest steel plate holes one foot deep and one inch wide. The explosives are then inserted into these holes, whereby the destruction is made complete.

The demolition of the war harbor was even more difficult than that of the fortifications. A complete annihilation of the breakwater which surrounds the inner harbor appeared inadvisable, because not only would the island itself have become defenseless against the gradual but unceasing destructive action of the sea but the ships coming to and from Heligoland would have been in permanent danger, especially in winter, when the gales around the island are particularly strong.

It is but a few weeks ago that part of the dune of the island was washed away by the waves accompanying one of the furious gales of the North Sea. Furthermore, the number of ships landing on and leaving Heligoland is now even greater than usual, because the scrap material resulting from the dismantlement is shipped to Germany. It is sold there to contractors, and the material of commercial value, like concrete and parts of the machinery, is utilized for business purposes while the proceeds from the sale of material of a military character go on the reparations account.

Great Breakwater's Ruin Accomplished by Dynamite

In certain places of the harbor matters were simplified by blowing up the foundations of the breakwater and leaving the completion of the destruction to the action of the sea, which will gradually wash away the debris left by the explosion. It is not, however, the intention of the Naval Inter-Allied Commission of Control to annihilate the harbor completely. Only those parts of the breakwater were removed which served, or could again be made to serve, active warfare. Thus a considerable portion of the breakwater has been spared from destruction.

By October 1, 1921, the demolition had made such progress that the sub-commission of allied engineers in charge of the supervision could leave Heligoland. After that date only periodical inspections by Admiral Sir Edward Charlton of the British navy, president of the N. I. A. C. C., and by other members of the commission were made. By February 15 of the current year all machinery in the power houses had been removed.

The only item still left on the working programme is the demolition and reconstruction, on new lines approved by the Allies, of the inclined tunnel which connects the lower part of the island, the "Unterland," with the "Oberland," or upper island. This tunnel is expected to be demolished by April 15, the last day of April being the latest date admissible.

On that day the complete dismantlement of Heligoland will become an accomplished fact, and on the occasion of his recent tour of inspection Sir Edward Charlton expressed to Herr Rickert, president of the German sub-commission in charge of the demolition, his recognition of the effective execution by the German commission "of what had undoubtedly been a most unpleasant duty."

A Modern Dreamer who Really Believes in Fairies

DUGALD WALKER is the most whimsical of persons. Nor is any one more sincere. He believes in fairies, and as surely as truth is relative—which it is—his belief is well based, for there are fairies. He knows them. He has them in his studio.

Robin Ringlet is Dugald Walker's other name. He must have another name—for his fairies.

He is about 35 years old. He is serious looking. He is an artist and a writer and a poet. He is a child and a man. No child could ever believe in fairies more sincerely than does Dugald Walker. No man could ever have been as sincere in any belief as he is in this.

Dugald Walker illustrates fairy stories better than any one else can. His illustrations of his own "Dream Boats," of "Andersen's Fairy Tales" and of Irish folk tales are pictures of real fairies and brownies and elves and pixies. He has seen the fleeting creatures with his own eyes and has pictured them as he has seen them.

It is not his work that has converted him. He has converted his work. He was not educated to believe in fairies. He believes in them in spite of his education. He is really a glorified sort of child.

If you have your mind made up to not believe in fairies, then you would better not go near Dugald Walker. He would make you believe. He would convince you against your will.

If you could talk with this idealistic man of our coldly scientific twentieth century he would soon leave you in no doubt of the magic country of fairies, his sparkling eyes (that are sometimes green and sometimes yellow) would aid the enthusiastic words in completely proving it to you.

A son of Virginia, he has never forgotten the stories of elf land once told him by negro mammies. A little digression will illustrate his unquestioning belief. It seems that some one having lost a beloved parent, read a poem of Mr. Walker's, "The Legacy of Prayer," and promptly wrote to him. This letter was the beginning of a deep yet quite impersonal friendship, for though this occurred several years ago these two have never yet met. Once, before starting on a trip around the world this friend of mystery wrote Mr. Walker asking to know what gift he would desire be brought back to him. Mr. Walker asked for a bit of earth and sand from every separate body of land visited! Months after he received many little bags containing what he had requested. This gift from other lands arrived just after the publication of his well known book "Dream Boats." So taking a little shell that had become priceless to him in the associations it contained he filled it with some sand from one of the little bags the label of which indicated that the contents had come from an island in the West Indies.

His retreat is a large glass inclosed studio overlooking one of the city's noisy, dusty streets, yet strange to say, while the sunbeams dance through the glass the noise and dust seem to stay without. One also senses the presence of wood spirits and ocean pixies, elves of glade and wave in this room of strangely assorted mementoes. The studio is lovely with many exquisite bits from here, there and everywhere, as well as with many beautiful paintings and drawings of the well known books he has so charmingly illustrated. There are seashells of every tint and form, feathers from brilliantly colored exotic birds, treasured mummies of butterflies and other beautiful creatures.

An instance of his versatility was the pageant he arranged in honor of Cardinal Mercier's visit to New York, in which some 30,000 children took part. The mise en scene of the 1922 fashion show was also a result of his imaginative as well as his practical side (always unusual in an artist), for its Japanesque setting was devised by Mr. Walker from two tons or 60,000 square feet of gray paper, such as is used in laundered shirt bosoms, and this paper was all transformed by his magic brush and pots of paint. Imagine making a Japanese Fairyland from shirt bosom paper! His genius in the combination of color and line is amazing; more than amazing when one knows that he delights in working out his fairylike stage effects from mere nothings such as colored paper, gray painted peanuts (which look like silkworm cocoons when attached to a mulberry tree made of tinted tissue paper), and leaves that are pinned to their background in such a way that each pin glistens like a dewdrop when the cleverly arranged lights touch them.

Mr. Walker's message is of the immortal spirit of play and happiness, for he feels that almost every act of ours can be traced back to some childhood memory—and how many memories we have tucked deep down in our hearts!

"Why, do you know," said Mr. Walker, "we haven't any childhood any more. The little folk have been cheated out of their most priceless heritage, as they have been robbed of their imagination. Many mothers, instead of developing the best in them, send their children to the movies to get rid of them, and the average movie isn't exactly the thing to bring out the soul of a child. If our imaginations are stunted, if we are made incapable of believing in fairies and visioned beauty, if we lack the power of transporting ourselves out of our everyday environment into a land of dreams we can never do great things in the field of art, and it will mean the degeneration of the race. Who will compose our music, who will write our stories and who will paint our pictures when imagination is dead?"

Mr. Walker was more than instrumental in the success of the theatrical and entertainment section of Christadora House, a settlement of our city's lower East Side. There many children have been rescued from the whirlpools of filth and vice in which they were born and fed by this Pied Piper (known to them as "Robin Ringlet") to a land of make-believe and "let's-pretend" and have been taught the value of beauty which leads indirectly but unquestionably to virtuous citizenship. Their starved little personalities were discovered, respected and encouraged by this Robin Ringlet and led to that land where dreams come true.

He talks not only to children but to grownups. He has visited cantonments, naval training stations and shipyards where he told men of the dainty intimacies of the fairy folk with always the same result—of completely entrancing his audience and of succeeding in leading them away from their prosaic everyday lives. Once, when lecturing to a Cornell alumni club, he suggested a pocket competition (who could bring forth from his pockets an interesting object, at the same time weaving a make-believe story about it), and these grown men turned their pockets inside out in the excitement of competing for the prize.

"And the prize," he added with a wistful smile, "was only a green feather from a parrot's wing! True, I had beforehand placed my own valuation on the feather by having told them that we should strive to be more like birds—go to flocks—feeling the impersonal unselfishness of the flock.

"All the underlying philosophy of fairy lore contains the golden kernel of that Biblical adage, 'Unless you be converted and become as little children you shall not enter into the Kingdom of Heaven.'

"If you leave two children together for an hour, even two children of widely different cast," he added, "they promptly decide that they love each other devotedly. Children bear no dislike toward anything unless we grownups, either consciously or unconsciously, instill in them a germ of friction or antipathy. These traits are distinctly a product of later years, and this is just as true as is the fact that children's minds refuse nothing we give them, and it rests with us to give them beauty and understanding rather than material values. A discarded spool, its bright silk run off, will give a tiny tot as great delight as some expensive and promptly broken toy."

PORT HOPE ARE HERE SATURDAY.

Old Rivals Will Battle With Petes at Riverside Park in Central League Fixture.

Peterboro's old rivals the Port Hopes Ontario with whom Petes staged several scrappy battles last year, and who would rather beat Peterboro than win the pennant will be here on Saturday for a Central League game. It will be the last home game for ten days, for next week the Petes are "on the road" all week playing at Lindsay on Wednesday and at Leaside on Saturday, so that's Saturday's fixture will be the last opportunity before June 21st of seeing the Petes in action at Riverside Park. Port Hope have McNeil, Hall and Teepel of the Kingston Athletics on their line up this year and are a much imoroved team over last season in spite of their bad beating at the hands of Lindsay. The Ontarios are the only team that have beaten Belleville this season and they are determined to spill the beans for the Petes if there is any possible way of turning the trick.

CASE OF C. G. E. IS PRESENTED.

H. T. McFadden Explains Action Taken By C.G.E. in Recent Controversy.

The following letter has been received from H. T. McFadden, president of the C. G. E. Baseball Club regarding the slight controversy which has arisen over the question of the release of players, and is self-explanatory:

Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—In answer to the article which appeared in the baseball news in The Examiner of 31st May re the action of the C. G. E. Baseball Club's executive in not releasing Rose at the request of parties interested in the Central League Club, the writer wishes to make clear the stand taken by the C. G. E. Club, and their reasons for taking that stand.

The policy of the C. G. E. Club adopted at their open annual meeting in March was to put the strongest team they could get in the field, and later, at the annual meeting of the City League, there were no restrictions made as to the players—any team might sign, except the residence rule, and their amateur standing.

As the Central League had their certificate two weeks before the City League received theirs, that gave them the opportunity of signing whatever players they wished, before they could be secured by any City League team, and moreover, the C. G. E. Club had only five men signed on on 12th May, namely, Rose, Ross, Barrie, Helson, and Corrin, and that was the date on which the Central League Club were supposed to have their certificates in for those who were to play in the first Central League game.

If the Central League Club were dilatory in signing their players, that is their business; but we are opposed to releasing capable players after the season is on—especially when the player does not request his release; and, it is said, is not sufficient proof to us that a player does want his release.

(Signed)
H. T. McFADDEN.
President, C.G.E. Baseball Club.

LINDSAY FALLS BEFORE LOCALS

C. P. C. Football Team Defeats Lindsay in Fast Game Saturday.

The C. P. C. football team defeated the Lindsays aggregation 3 to 1 on the Lindsay grounds Saturday afternoon. The match was played as part of the entertainment for the field day staged by the Lindsay G. W. V. A. Trotting, Baseball and a Boy Scout play were also on the programme.

Lindsay had the better of the argument in the early stages of the game and scored first, a lovely shot by Munt getting past Lasenby. C. P. C. tried hard to equalize but the Lindsay defence playing well and though the ball was often in Abraham's vicinity some one always popped up and got it away.

It took the pakers seventy minutes to equalize the score, a shot by Bradbury from outside the defence beating Abraham. After this success the C. P. C. men were hard pressed to keep level but a break away saw Hotstone flash in a shot from the line and were unlucky not to score when Munt got through only to see Clark cut throufh and clear. In the closing minute Matt Shaw got the best goal of the bunch when he put the ball through following a corner well taken by Follis. The players:

C. P. C.—Lasenby, Oxley, Downer, Brierly, J. Shaw, Edwards, Follis, Bradbury, M. Shaw, Clark and Hotstons.

A NINTH INNING WIN FOR PETES OVER BOWMANVILLE

Tail-enders Play Snappy Ball in Saturday's Fixture and Only a Last Minute Rally Saves the Game for Home Crew.

TRIBUTE TO CHERRETT

IT TOOK a ninth inning rally for the Petes to triumph over the tail enders in Saturday's Central League fixture at Riverside Park for Bowmanville went into the ninth leading 3 to 2 and some of the fans had given up hope when the Solomon crew clouted in two runs and pulled the game out of the fire, the final count being 4 to 3. The boys from "Spud" Wilcox's town didn't perform a bit like cellar champions on Saturday. Their fielding was as good as has been seen here this year, three fast double plays helping them at critical moments, and they were no weaklings on the attack, especially Bates and Hicks who cashed in with three blows each. It was a real snappy ball game, the best contest that has been staged at Riverside this season and the exciting finish sent the home bugs away happy. The rally came after several splendid opportunities to score had been lost and it was all the more sweet on that account.

Manager Solomon presented another shifted line up on Saturday. Holyman was out of the game as a result of the injury he received at Belleville and Shaughnessy was a bench warmer until the last innings because of a sore arm. The gap at short was filled by Fred Rutherford of last year's C.G.E. team, while Harold Long, back in the game after several years played first. Rutherford broke in in fine style, pulling off a sensational one ha. led catch that robbed Hooper of a hit in the fifth and scoring two runs, while Long, although he did nothing with the willow covered first in effective fashion.

It was decided to give Ecobichon a chance to show his wares on the rubber, but that Bowmanville crew is no team for a left hander to face, the first eight batters being right-handed hitters. "Cobey" was not hit hard, but a couple of errors in the first innings presented Bowmanville with a run, and when they came back with another in the second on two hits Manager Solomon sent Heckman to finish the game. The right-hander breezed along nicely for the balance of the fixture and hadn't much trouble until the seventh when two hits and an excusable error by Long sent a run in and left second and third occupied with nobody out. Heckman showed his calibre in that ticklish situation by tossing out two batters and fanning another.

Lloyd Chambers, former Lindsay second string pitcher turned in a nice game for the visitors, and his own cool fielding and good defensive work by his team mates kept the Petes' score down. Chambers handled eight chances, started two double plays at critical moments and for a youngster, showed fine steadiness under fire. Stark, alsoan ex-Lindsay Greybird performed nicely at third and Bates, last year's Lindsay catcher came through with three hits—incidentally more than the whole 1922 Lindsay team were able to nick of Heckman. Moise for several years with Port Hope, was at second base for the visitors.

Outside of the four double plays all smartly executed, the fielding feature was Rutherford's grab of Hooper's fly to short left field which the short stop took on the run with his bare hand. Lowe made a smart play in the fifth when with Chambers on first, Stark singled to centre. Chamber over ran second and Lowe's quick toss to Johnson nailed him before he could get back. Swanston's throwing to second was another feature. The Pete's back stop cut down three base runners by accurate pegs to the keystone station. Johnston handling them in fine style. "Shiner" took care of ten chances without a skip once more demonstrating his value to the team.

The Peterboro players wore a black band on their arms out of respect to the memory of Roy Cherrett and there was an impressive tribute to the departed athlete at the beginning of the fifth innings when the fans, players and officials stood with bowed and uncovered heads for a minute of silent prayer for the popular player.

How They Registered.

With Ecobichon pitching for the Petes, the visitors broke into the scoring column in the first innings. With one gone, Hooper's roller got away from Ruherford. Hooper stole second, Swanston's throw being low. Moise rolled one to Ecobichon who fumbled, and both runners were safe. Moise tried to steal second, but was snuffed out on Swanston's accurate peg to Johnston. Hooper glued to third on this play, but scored a moment after when Piper beat out a slow one to Collins. Swanston cut Piper down when he tried to purloin second.

In the second innings with one down, Bates singled to centre and went to second on Moore's infield out. Hick's single to left sent the run over. Chambers fanned to end the innings.

The Petes had a chance in their half, when Soden doubled to left with one out, but the base runner was doubled on on Dugan's liner to Stark.

The Solomon crew tied it up in the third. Rutherford opened the innings with a single to centre and Heckman beat out a bunt. Lowe laid down a perfect sacrifice advancing the runners and Swanston supplied the needed punch with a ringing double to lett scoring the pair, after Johnston had popped to the pitcher. Long struck out to terminate the innings.

The teams battled along on even terms until the seventh when Bowmanville took the lead. Bates started the trouble with a single to centre. Long lost Moore's liner over first after a good attempt and his throw to force Bates hit the runner. Hicks cracked a long double to left scoring Bates and putting Moore on third. Heckman got out of a big hole by tossing out Chambers, fanning Stark and getting Hooper on a roller to the box, leaving the base runners stranded.

The Petes had a royal chance to sew things up in the eigth. Lowe opened with a single to left. Johnston beat out a bunt and Swanston singled on high bounder which Chambers knocked down but couldn't field. That filled the bases with nobody out. Long, however, rolled one to Chambers who tossed Lowe out at the plate and Bates' quick throw to Cordon doubled up the batter With men on second and third there still was a chance but Piper gathered in Collins' torrid liner to short and saved the situation for Bowmanville.

The home crew were not to be denied in the ninth however. Soden started the rally with a clean single to left. Dugan bunted a fly to Chambers in attempting to sacrifice. Rutherford was hit. Heckman boosted his own game by cutting a single between short and third on which Soden scored from second, Rutherford going to third and Heckman to second on the throw to the plate. Shaughnessy's roller to short sent Rutherford in witn the winning run.

Diamond Dust

Rutherford picked a good bare hand catch out of the air to retire the visitors in the fifth frame.

* * *

Swannie's two bagger in the third was certainly a big help. It brought in the two runs that tied the score.

Saturday's game was featured by four double plays. Bowmanville had three of them and the locals one.

* * *

Shiner and Swannie were obliged to demonstrate to a couple of players from the hosiery town that stealing second is not allowed.

Al and Swanston each got two hits in three times to bat and each had a hit good for two bases.

Toronto is apparently going ahead backwards as fast as they can.

FOUR LOSSES IN A ROW FOR LEASIDE

C.G.E. VICTORIOUS OVER COMRADES.

The Electricians' Football Aggregation is Still Undefeated. Close Game.

The C. G. E. football team defeated the Comrades 2 to 0 in fast game at King Edward Park Saturday afternoon. The C. G. E. men were short Williams and Sharman who where injured during the week. Gash and Hurry were substituted in the places of the absent players.

The C. G. E. were the more agressive in the first half, Garfield opening the score with a shot which Fenner was helpless to save, his view of the ball being blocked. McDougal, for the Comrades had a chance to score from a free kick outside the penalty area but shot over. Near the close of the first half Dyer put his team two ahead.

In the second half Jackson and Ward changed places in the Comrade line up and the change made for better play. Comrades had a slight edge in the outfield play but finished poor most of the shots going over or wide. C. G. E. by reason of better finishing were deserving winners but on the whole the game was rather ragged. The players were:

Comrades: — Fenner, Anderson, Hill, Jackson, Brown, Sayers, Conway, Dingwall, McDougall, Shaw and Ward.

The clubs of the league hope to develop home talent for umpire duties, and the president's gift towards this important part of the game will be of immense value. Mr. A. C. LITTLE LESSONS FOR THE GOLFER.

By George O'Neil.

The drive is the first stroke played in a round of golf. It is the first stroke the beginner learns, usually. It is played with the driver, which is the longest distance club. The first thing the player should do on the tee is swing his driver a few times. This makes the wrists supple and loosens the muscles generally. The clubhead should swing like a weight on the end of a string. Place the clubhead, then, flat on the ground back of the ball and at right angles to the direction which the ball, when hit, is to take. See that the clubhead does not dip at either heel or toe. Then take your stance. The stance is the placing of the feet preparatory to making the swing. I will describe the stance in detail later. Play the ball off the left heel, or between that and a point directly between your two feet. The picture shows a correct and easy manner of standing to the ball preparatory to the drive.

To-day's picture, which is of George Duncan, the great British star, shows a superb golf style. Duncan is a terrific driver. Note his ease and comfort in the drive.

DO YOUR BOWELS MOVE REGULARLY, OR DO THEY BECOME CONSTIPATED

There is no medium through which disease so often attacks the system as by allowing the bowels to become constipated, and there is no other trouble which flesh is heir to that is more liable to be neglected, because material inconvenience may not be felt at once from irregular action of the bowels. When there is not regular action the retention of the decayed and effete matter, with its poisonous gases, soon poisons the whole system by being absorbed into it, causing violent sick and bilious headaches, internal bleeding or protruding piles, heartburn, jaundice, etc.

MILBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

will regulate the flow of bile to act properly on the bowels, thus making them active and regular, and removing the constipation and all of its allied troubles.

Mr. Samuel Bu kler, Tatamagouche, N.S., writes: "For over a year I suffered with constipation, I took several different kinds of medicines, but could only get temporary relief. I was told to try Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. I procured two vials of them, but after I had taken one I found that I was relieved of my trouble. I do not hesitate to recommend Laxa-Liver Pills for any kind of constipation."

"SISTERS" OPENS TO-DAY DEPICTS SPLENDOR OF A WIFE'S COURAGE

"What would you do if you saw, in your own home, your young married sister in the arms of your husband, and the two planning to elope?"

No doubt you would feel a thrill. Anger would overcome you and then sober, quiet thought would prevail. If you loved your husband you would fight for his love. Some women would let matters take their course, but any true-blooded woman would get up her courage and set out to win.

How one courageous girl who fought to hold her husband from her own selfish sister and won the fight is told most vividly in Sisters, a powerful motion picture production from the novel of Kathleen Norris, which opens a 3 days' engagement at the Capitol Theatre, starting to-night.

Seena Owen plays the leading feminine role, that of the wife whose sister attempts to take her husband, and the other featured members of the cast are Matt Moore and Gladys Leslie.

Alix and Cherry Strickland, are sisters, Alix being the elder. Cherry marries the man of her choice and Alix is happy. Peter, a friend of the family, who has appeared to be friendly to Cherry, leaves for a world tour, to forget a woman, none knowing, however, that Cherry is the woman. In the meantime, the father of the girls, dies. Cherry is unhappy with her husband, and Peter returns. He finds Alix lonely and the couple finally marry. Cherry returns to her home after leaving her husband, and Peter, seeing her, once again falls in love. His old spirit is revived, and the couple carry on their romance in the house. Alix discovers the affair and sets out to prevent their leaving. Fate intervenes when Cherry's husband is hurt in an accident and through nursing him back to health, she learns how much she really cares for him. Peter is humiliated when his wife shows him the right spirit by the splendor of her courage, and the greatness of her love. They then find happiness together and a real tragedy has been averted.

"PIPES OF PAN" TICKLE CHAPLIN'S FEET IN NEW PRODUCTION, "SUNNYSIDE"

Classic Dancers Make Chore-Boy Charlie Exercise Sleepy Muscles To Keep Step.

Charlie Chaplin turns back from the prosaic present to play "Pan" in "Sunnyside," his third million dollar First National Exhibitors' Circuit attraction, which will be seen at the Capitol Theatre, starting to-night. This by no means indicates that Mr. Chaplin has taken up serious Greek art. He merely falls in with the spirit of a group of scantily-clad maidens dancing classical themes, who appear when he is accidentally cast into a ditch by a cow which does not think well of him as a rider.

Chaplin Pans "Pan."

Pan was the Greek deity who presided over the shepherds, and who was wont, says Greek mythology, to frolic over the hills with the nymphs. Later the Romans knew him as Faunus. One of his characteristics was a pair of horns, and by means of rumpling his hair, Mr. Chaplin instantly makes it known that he is Pan. He has great sport burlesquing the aesthetic dances which are so popular just now, but comes out of his dream to find that he is still only a suffering farm hand with a domineering master.

Four beautiful girls who understand the art of the Greek dance, and whose movements are as graceful as Chaplin's are grotesque, assist him in the classical dances which are given with a beautiful sylvan background. This is but one of many beauties of "Sunnyside."

AT THE ROYAL.

Rosemary Theby and Sylvia Breamer are the best of friends off the screen. But in "Unseen Forces," the First National and Mayflower attraction opening an engagement of three days at the Royal Theatre, they are quite the opposite. In her role Rosemary weds Sylvia's cinema lover, but Sylvia gets her revenge through uncanny powers.

The filming of one of the scenes for "Unseen Forces," the First National and Mayflower picture, which will be the week's attraction at the Royal Theatre, beginning to-day, was interrupted when Sylvia Breamer, playing the leading feminine role, was suddenly afflicted with a severe toothache and could not go on with hed work. An indefinite and expensive delay was averted, however, when Sam De Grasse, a member of the cast, who formerly practised dentistry, brought speedy relief to the suffering star.

Sylvia Breamer tells a humorous anecdote in connection with her new First National and Mayflower Photoplay Corp, starring vehicle, "Unseen Forces," which opens an engagement of three days at the Royal Theatre, beginning to-day. It seems that Director Franklin was keen upon injecting a scene of Miss Breamer in the act of crystal gazing. The fact that he later changed his mind doesn't matter. When rehearsals were over she asked permission to borrow the little sphere. Miss Breamer says: "It seems to me that for hours I gazed into the little ball, and the only impression I got was a very distorted reflection of my own features. It hasn't discouraged me, however, because some time when I can really take a little vacation I'm going to write several volumes on the relation of unseen forces to photoplays. I expect to be able to tell the gross receipts of a given picture before its release," added Miss Breamer jocularly. "And what could be nicer," says the practical motion picture producer.

Orders for individual suits to measure are sent to the Semi-ready shops by telegraph, by long-distance 'phone and by mail. When it is desired to get greater speed than the four-day delivery it can be done but the photo-type measurement form is really necessary to assure a perfect fitting suit at $25 to $50. The Custom Tailoring Service is an important feature of the Semi-ready shops in Montreal." Stock's Men's Wear Shop is the only place where the genuine Semi-Ready Tailoring can be seen.

45 ENGINEERS MAKE TRIP

Plant on Island

The difficulties encountered have been numerous but one by one have been overcome. The plant is situated on an island made by the canal and the river about a mile below the business section of the town but actually within the corporation limits. The plant is located on a limestone bottom and the tail race was cut through solid rock. The stone taken out has been utilized in the construction of the power house and the building itself which is practically complete is an imposing one.

The plant gets its head from the fall between the canal and the river proper. It was explained, however, that the water taken from the canal will not lower the level to any great extent as the canal is wide at this point and more water will be taken in at the inlet. The result will be, however, that the bed of the river will be left practically dry between the canal inlet and the tail race of the plant, and this condition may entail some trouble with the Council as the Campbellford sewer outlet is in that section of the river which will be left practically dry.

Forty Eight Foot Head

The power plant will be operated by a 48 foot head in summer and a 53 foot head in winter. The engineers were struck in their inspection by the latest hydro engineering improvements that have been utilized, and the plant represents the modern machine that takes every last part of energy out of the water and transforming it into electricity. The invisible power from Ranney Falls will go into the Central Ontario power pool, that operates factories, lights homes and makes for increasing comfort and happiness in this district.

Memorable Experience

The explorations of the engineers in the scroll casings each as large as a six roomed house, where the water rolls down highly polished concrete walls to the turbines, were an experience not soon to be forgotten After seeing the turbines from this point of vantage the party had a look at them from the outlet chambers where they hung suspended high over their heads. The concrete work in the plant is of a high order and the construction forces were highly congratulated by the engineers on the expert and unique way in which the concreting was carried out.

About eighty men are working at the Falls at present. A striking feature noticed was the completeness of the construction plant. A well-equipped carpenter's shop where all the lumber was cut from the rough was noticed and the blacksmith shop was up-to-date in every way. The office and engineering staffs have been particularly well housed.

Party Photographed

The tour of the plant occupied over an hour, following which the party repaired to the inhabitated part of the town, where on the steps of the Public Library a photographer endeavoured to make the best he could of the party which after climbing ladders and raising a big dust generally was more or less of a gypsy appearance. A splendid supper at the Windsor Hotel arranged by the Hydro was next on the program and proved a fitting finale to the affair and demonstrated the courtesy and hospitality of the Commission and the welcome Campbellford always gives to Peterboro citizens.

Time Was Opportune

The engineers ravaged the table and settled back for a few brief words from the hosts and guests. L. J. Ireland who presided expressed the pleasure of the Hydro at having the party visit the plant, and he pointed out that they picked an opportune time as in a few weeks the water will likely be turned in. Mr. Ireland extended a welcome to the citizens generally to visit the plant at any time and he was glad he said that the trip had been found enjoyable, perhaps enlightening.

A vote of thanks to the Hydro was moved by P. P. Westbye, chairman of the Peterboro branch E.I.C. and seconded by Robert Hicks, chairman of the Utilities Commission. Mayor A. J. Meyers, who incidentally remarked that he is a member of the E.I.C., said that Campbellford was pleased to have the Peterboro engineers visit the town in a body, and they were proud of the Ranney Falls plant, he said. Perfection was the watch word of the construction engineers throughout.

A Unique Position

Deputy Reeve Nelson Stone spoke along similar lines and A. E. Caddy remarked on the unique position of the town with regard to Hydro development. Leon Fraser, Secretary of the Trent Waterway Development Association said that that body hoped to take up the advancement of this section electrically and by its representing all the municipalities along the route create a strong force to be reckoned with.

The Guests

Other speakers were P. L. Allison, F. H. Dobbin, R. L. Dobbin, H. C. Don Carlos and G. B. Smith, Belleville. During the program Fred Woolnough entertained the guests and R. L. A LESSON FROM THE CALVES

The Progency of Tubercular Cows Fed Pasteurized Milk Successfully

As further evidence of the value of using PASTEURIZED MILK to prevent the dangers of infection from tuberculous cows, attention has recently been called to the methods adopted on "Bang" Farms to save the calves of infected cattle.

The "Bang" Farms originated in Denmark, and insists in the establishment of a separate stable or farm where all affected cattle are sent from the herd or local breed. The calves are removed at birth, housed in a separate stable and FED PASTEURIZED MILK. It is claimed that disease is largely transmitted to the calves through drinking unpasteurized milk.

The lesson to be learned from the above statement is: That if Pasteurized Milk is the safe remedy for raising healthy calves, it stands to reason that it should be EQUALLY SAFE IN PROTECTING THE HEALTH OF OUR CHILDREN.

Our Milk is not only PASTEURIZED, but CLARIFIED as well, safeguarding our patrons from all raw milk dangers.

Remove the element of chance and let us start your Milk supply tomorrow.

DIVIDENDS OF CANADIAN GENERAL ARE REDUCED

TORONTO, June 5.— (Canadian Press.)—Directors of the Canadian General Electric, after meeting here this morning, announced that the dividend of the company had been cut from 8 per cent. to 6 per cent. It was stated that this was considered the wisest policy to pursue in view of the business of the company during the past six months and the outlook for coming months. It was pointed out that it requires millions of dollars to pay an eight per cent. dividend. Announcement of the cut did not reach the Toronto exchange before it closed at noon, the stock being slightly higher than Saturday.

THE MARKETS

MONTREAL MARKET.

MONTREAL, June 5.—(Canadian Press).—The local Stock Exchange was not particularly active during the early trading this morning, and only a few of the leaders were traded in. Second Preferred of British Empire Steel was also strong, registering a three-quarter point gain to 33 3-4, while Steel of Canada advanced one-quarter to 7-8. Riordon was lightly traded in at 93-4, a quarter below Friday's close. Montreal Power was steady and unchanged at 90 3-4.

IN MEMORIAM.

In memory of General Lord Kitchener, who lost his life on H.M.S. Hampshire, June 5, 1916:

Think of the deeds he did at Khartoum,
Think of the army he built up at home.
Ploughmen, mechanics, merchant and peers
Came when he called them to quell Britain's fears,
Proud of the army that came to his call,
Kitchener, he was beloved by them all.

Gone, not forgotten—nor ever shall be,
There let him sleep in the depths of sea,
Sleep with the braves, 'midst the shells and the guns,
Out of the reach of the hate of the Huns,
Free from the slurs of the few jealous peers,
Those who attacked what he did of late years,
All that was upright and that is great
Knew he who gave all his life for the State.

PILLING.—In loving memory of Mrs. Edward Pilling (nee Bertha Chapman), who died 5th June, 1921.

The midnight stars are gleaming
On a lone and silent grave;
Beneath sleeps one we dearly love,
But whom we could not save.

Her weary hours and days of pain—
Her troubled nights are past,
Her ever-patient, worn-out frame
Has found sweet rest at last.

The happy hours we once enjoyed—
How sweet their memory still!
But death has left a vacant place
The world can never fill.

WATKISS.—In ever loving remembrance of my boy, Jack Watkiss, who was drowned at No. 7. Lock, Peterborough, on 5th June, 1918.

Peace, perfect peace, in this dark world of sin,
The blood of Jesus whispers peace within.

Peace, perfect peace, by thronging duties pressed;
To do the will of Jesus, this is rest.

Peace, perfect peace, with sorrows surging round;
On Jesus' bosum naught but calm is found.

Peace, perfect peace, with loved ones far away;
In Jesus' keeping we are safe, and they.

Peace, perfect peace, our future all unknown;
Jesus we know, and He is on the throne.

Peace, perfect peace, death shadowing us and ours;
Jesus has vanquished death and all its powers.

It is enough: Earth's struggles soon shall cease,
And Jesus call us to heav'n's perfect peace.

PILLING.—In ever loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Mrs. Ted Pilling, who departed this life 5th June, 1921, in her 32nd year.

"Gone, but not forgotten."

Just one year ago you left us—
How we miss your loving face;
But you left us to remember
None on earth could fill your place.

From our childhood you had loved us,
In our sickness cheered our minds,
Now your thoughts of us are ended,
And your loved ones left behind.

Yet again we hope to meet you,
When the day of life has fled;
And in heaven with joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tears are shed.

THREATENS TO SUE CITY FOR FALSE ARREST

Jas. Montgomery, of Belleville, Alleges That He Was Unwarrantably Jailed in Peterborough

THE REVOY CASE

That there is an impending writ for damages for false arrest against this city was revealed at the Council meeting last night, when a letter was read from the Belleville legal firm of Wallbridge & Cameron.

The letter was received at the City Hall on 2nd June, and is dated 1st June. It was referred to the Legal Committee.

The letter was as follows:

"I have been consulted by Mr. James Montgomery, of this city, a retired cheesemaker, in connection with an incident which happened in your city on 18th April last. I am advised that when Mr. Montgomery was in your city on that date, he was, without any cause whatever, arrested by your city detectives or policemen, and lodged in your gaol for two days. Mr. Montgomery gave all the information in his power, which should have enabled your police force to verify his statements as to his identity and address, but in spite of this and of the facility with which his identity could have been established, he was held in custody for forty-eight hours or more, and forced to submit to appearing before your Magistrate on a charge of vagrancy, which, of course, was not established, and where also bail was refused him. Moreover, he was not allowed to communicate with his friends or relatives in this city, and it was only through some of his relatives noticing his arrest in the paper that his release was secured.

Notice of Action.

"As you may well understand," went on the letter. "Mr. Montgomery has suffered greatly in reputation and in his feelings for this unwarranted arrest; and I am instructed by him to notify you that unless settlement is made within one week from this date, a writ will be issued against the City of Peterborough for false arrest and damages."

Thinks City Liable.

The clause in the report of the Legal Committee that no action be taken on the claim of B. Revoy on account of an accident on Woodbine Avenue was struck out in the meeting on the motion of Ald. Gainey and Ald. Dr. Holloway.

Ald. Gainey wanted Mr. Revoy to be heard in the Legal Committee.

Ald. Turner was afraid the committee would not meet soon. "They might not meet till September," he said. "I think we should hear him to-night."

Mr. Revoy told the Council he was injured on 22nd March over a sunken sewer, and he was laid up until 24th May.

The Legal Committee reported no action, Mayor Taylor replied.

"They claim the city is not liable," the Mayor added.

"Well, I think they are," said Mr. Revoy, and sat down.

Ald. Gainey noted his patient endurance of the Council's monthly labours, and when the Legal Committee's report came in, promptly moved that the East City man have a chance to explain his case, which Mr. Revoy himself considered needed planation.

But One Alteration.

The recommendation of the committees came through last night with flying colours.

The Board of Works report only suffered one alteration. Following a letter from John Speer and a personal appear against extending the sidewalk no explanation.

from Hunter Street East to a point 274 feet northerly, the point was fixed at 78 feet north and above this point for the rest of the distance it was decided to construct a cinder path.

Ald. Gainey stood out for this latter improvement, when John Speer objected to putting in the sidewalk, which Ald. Gainey termed "a convenience to the tenants."

CRITICIZE POLICY.

OTTAWA, June 6. — (Canadian Press.)—Criticism of policy of government in refraining from reducing duty on American goods while at the same time duties on British goods are reduced, was expressed in the House of Commons yesterday by Hon. T. A. Crerar, [illegible] amendment to the budget, declaring that "while changes [illegible] policy should be made in such a way as to give industries affected reasonable opportunity for re-adjustment, the principle of protection as a basis for fiscal policy is unsound and not in the best interests of the Dominion."

VERY LAST WORD IN CONSTRUCTION AND EQUIPMENT

New Wing of St. Joseph's Hospital, East City, Will Offer Many Surprices.

OPENS THURSDAY

The addition to St. Joseph's Hospital, which is now practically completed, and will be formally opened on Thursday of this week, promises to provide a complete surprise for the citizens who have not been keeping in touch with the progress of the building, which is described by those in charge as being the very last word in hospital construction and accommodation. Throughout, the most up-to-date innovations have been introduced in matters large and small, and care and forethought exhibited in all matters pertaining to the comfort of patients.

Commanding Site.

The site of the building is one of the most commanding elevations in Peterborough, with an unobstructed view from every side; the hospital possesses its own dairy farm, where thoroughbred Holstein cattle supply milk for the establishment, and its own chicken run, giving the freshest of fresh eggs, and the grounds to east and west have been artistically arranged according to carefully-prepared specifications.

The new addition, which is practically the principal portion of the hospital, is situated south of the parent building, and connected with it by a spacious rotunda, serving as office and receiving room. Four storeys in height, including the basement, and, in addition, the operating, X-Ray, and laboratory departments, the building is 153 feet long, composed of pressed brick, with Indiana limestone trim. The interior of the wall is of patent tile of several air spaces, and, throughout, the building is of fireproof construction. A roof garden on the top storey, together with two splendid sun rooms and three balconies, add to the comfort of convalescing patients.

Spacious Rooms.

Every room and every department has the air space, light, ventilation and heating required by Governmental standards; heat is supplied by forced hot water, supplied by two large Victory boilers in the basement, and the artificial light is the last word in electric installation. Floors in the public rooms are constructed of tile, while the corridors and patients rooms have a patent noiseless flooring known to the trade as T. M. B. Rounded corners make for a minimum of lodging-places for dust, and a powerful vacuum cleaner in the basement furnishes means of cleaning every room in the establishment. Notwithstanding the fact that the building is of fireproof construction, and a fire escape will be placed on the south-eastern wall, there is a line of fire hose for every floor, together with chemical extinguishers.

Latest Improvements.

The latest type of electric push-button passenger elevator has been installed, also an electric dumb waited in the addition, with electric nurse calls of the silent type, in every room, together with a buzzer at the nurses' station.

In the addition, the basement is given over to cold storage rooms, coal rooms, hot water supply, repair shop, etc.; the first floor will be the men's flat; the second the women's department; the third floor the maternity section, and the fourth floor the operating theatre, X-Ray rooms, and laboratory departments. The operating room has been equipped with the most modern inventions in up-to-date fittings, including electric lighting of the "No Shadoe Lite" type, and a Balfour operating table, swung on a pivot, and capable of being moved in any direction with the lightest touch.

A typical floor has its entrance from the rotunda. On the left, the diet kitchen, equipped with electric food elevator, electric refrigerator and electric range, together with cupboards for, dishes and trays and sinks for washing. Then the medicine chest for each corridor, and the general linen room. Next follows the public ward, containing eight beds, and a semi-private ward of three beds. On the other side is the public stairway, passenger elevator shaft, nurses' call station, sterilizing room, and private rooms.

Typical Private Room.

A typical private room has measurements, sunlight, heating and ventilation according to Governmental standards; individual toilet and basin, with hot and cold water, clothes closet, and electric lighting, which includes ceiling light, bed reading light, service plug and nurses' call. In addition, in connection with some rooms are private baths. The furniture throughout conforms to hospital standards.

General contractors for the work are the Russell Construction Company of Toronto, with John Muir, superintendent, and James MacPherson as inspector for the hospital authorities. The normal capacity of the completed building will be for 75 patients, which may be considerably increased without inconvenience to 100, or over.

Reasonable Charges.

The rates will be the same reasonable charges as have always been maintained at St. Joseph's Hospital, together with the same charitable consideration for people without means.

The formal opening of the new wing takes place on Thursday of this week. At nine o'clock in the morning, Mass will be celebrated by Bishop M. J. O'Brien, assisted by a number of local clergymen, and followed by blessing of the addition. No invitations have been issued for attendance at the Mass, owing to the smallness of the chapel, but a cordial and hearty welcome is extended by the Sisters to every citizen of the city and district who wishes to inspect the new premises on Thursday, from the hours of two to nine.

C. S. STAPLETON INSPECTOR FOR LOCAL HUMANE SOCIETY

Will Also Continue to Carry on as Sanitary Inspector Which Duties New Appointment Will Not Interfere With, it is Declared.

Permission was given by the Council last night to C. S. Stapleton, sanitary inspector, to also act as inspector for the Humane Society. E. S. Martin, treasurer, stated that Mr. Stapleton in connection with his work came in touch with many cases that should be looked after by the Society, and the Society considered that he was the most valuable man that could be secured. The work would not interfere with his duties as sanitary inspector, Mr. Martin said, and he asked the Council to permit him to act if at all possible.

Ald. J. Crowe wanted to know what the police were doing. "Have they dropped out of it entirely"? he asked.

"I think the police will act as they have and endeavour to help us in every way, but we considered the work would interfere too much with their duties. There are a great many trivial inspections" Mr. Martin replied. R. Denne also spoke on behalf of Mr. Stapleton, and he assured Ald. Crowe that they did not expect the city to pay his salary in connection with this work also.

On motion of Dr. Holloway, seconded by Ald. Stocker, Mr. Stapleton is allowed to enter into an agreement with the Society.

"This is a matter of education not of prosecution", declared Ald. Stocker. "I think the chairman of the property committee should interview Mr. Stapleton and see if this is going to interfere with his work", remarked Ald. Crowe.

"I might say I have done that and Mr. Stapleton assured me it would not", said Ald. McIntyre.

VETERANS HAVE CHANGED MINDS

Tired of Bivouacing in Rain, Return Home

OTTAWA, June 6. —(Special to The Examiner.)—The veterans' trek is ended. Three hours of bivouacing in the rain was sufficient to make them change their minds after another appeal by Murdock who arrived on the scene by motor at two. After a lengthy talk with General Riley he persuaded him that it would be in the best interests for the men to come into Ottawa and take the train to Toronto. A special of four coaches is being made up and is to leave at nine via Canadian Pacific.

At three the hikers arrived at the Union station, glad to get out of the storm, and headed for home.

Riley stated that they could not have gone very far without any food at all. Four men fell out in the five miles last night. On arrival in Toronto the men will march to Queen's park and disperse.

It is proposed to acquire temporary club rooms for the organization, where they will write up the grievances of the individual hikers to be forwarded to Ottawa for government action.

FREIGHT QUESTION AGAIN DISCUSSED

OTTAWA, June 6. Special. — A. E. Clarke, representing the Canadian Lumber. ns Association composed of the manufacturers of lumber and wholesale dealers in all provinces except Prince Edward Island, told the Committee on Transportation rates this morning that accepting the statem. t of the railways as to the effect the return of the Crows Nest Pass agreement, they were unalterably opposed to such return. The lumbermen were also opposed to the agreement on the ground that in the opinion of transportation interests it would mean the preventing of reductions on basic commodities. They suggested that the latter should be secured and that the suspension of the agreement be continued pending the conducting of a thorough inquiry by the railway commission into the entire rate structure with a view to reductions, and the removal of alleged discriminations.

T. Marshall representing the Toronto Board of Trade, stated his organization took the position that if the reinstatement of the rates under the Crows Nest Pass agreement were to result as was feared, in the depletion of the railways revenues to such an extent as to withhold a general reduction in rates, then the interests of the whole of Canada would in its opinion be best served by the further suspension of the agreement, in order that all traffic the rates of which have been advanced, might share in the readjustment. This position was taken also on the ground that all traffic throughout the Dominion since 1918 had borne heavy increase in rates and was looking forward to relief therefrom and should receive consideration.

Western Brewers Object to a Tax

CALGARY, June 6.—(Canadian Press).—Brewers of Western Canada at a meeting here yesterday protested the ten cents per gallon sales tax on beer, and also sales tax on light wines and beverages. The brewers claim they are having sufficiently hard struggles to make a living as it is during these prohibition times without the extra tax to pay.

MANY PLANTS ACTIVE HERE

While Several of Peterborough's Principal Industries Are in a Slump Others are Humming

Although the metal trades in Peterborough are generally quiet, industrial conditions on the whole are more than satisfactory. Several factories which have been almost dormant for months report more business enquiries lately than for a long time, but one or two of the largest manufacturing plants are still marking time.

Some of the busiest shops in the city at present are not those with the biggest acreage or possibly capitalization, and their activity is so pronounced that citizens fail to realize this comforting aspect of the industrial situation which most persons are inclined to observe through the dark glasses of the more or less stagnant larger concerns, which naturally have a more serious and impressive effect on the community.

The Examiner recently had occasion to interview the heads of many of the local factories and learned that some of these shops were actually experiencing exceptionally brisk trade demands. The plant of J. J. Turner and Sons, Ltd., is working three nights a week. Their travellers are digging up business in a volume that could keep the factory running even into longer overtime, but as one member of the firm said, "We can't ask our employees to work more than three evenings a week these days."

There is no dragging on the wheels of the Turner industry, and down on Sherbrooke Street, a company of the same patronymic, Turner Brothers' cardboard factory, a separmant for months report more busirolling up a volume of business that has set the management to considering plans for an enlargement of the building.

"May was the best month we have had since we opened this plant," said Mr. Robert Abbott, manager of the Canadian Raybestos Company on Perry Street. This is cheering intelligence to the citizens who were impressed with the prospects of the Raybestos company when the officers of the parent plant at Bridgeport, Conn., first decided to locate the Canadian offspring here. The slump in the automobile industry a year ago confronted the local infant factory with conditions that were unforeseen, but the steady development since then has been highly encouraging and gratifying to the public.

The Canadian Nashua Gum and Coated Paper Company, of which Mr. Robert A. Brown is general manager, is also running smoothly and briskly, reporting their best month in May, and generally laying a broad and deep basis for their expanding business.

The Peterborough Lock Company is also in the active list with the Peterborough Canoe Company also in the company of the optimists. This list might be extended, but it is sufficient to show that manufacturies are actually flourishing, not simply in the hope of earlier liveliness starting up, or reporting slight improvements that are welcomed as possible forerunners of a main body of orders flocking behind.

The dead are inmates of the State Hospital for insane. The engineer of the train is believed fatally scalded. The locomotive of the train was derailed.

WILL CHALLENGE U.S. SUPREMACY CANADIAN FIELD

Group of British Electric Interests to Compete for All Power Equipment Contracts.

TORONTO FACTORY

MONTREAL, June 6.—(Special to The Examiner.) — Representing a new and powerful group of British interests which will bid against the largest of American syndicates for contracts in Canada, P. J. Pybus, managing director of the English Electric Company, Limited, arrived here yesterday.

Mr. Pybus was quite frank in regard to the plans of his company, which is represented in Canada as the English Electric Company of Canada Ltd., with a plant in Toronto.

"From now on," he stated, "there will be no big contract in traction or power equipment that we will not be competing for.

"Many of the contracts we secure in Canada, as many as possible in fact, will be looked after by the Toronto factory, which I am now in way to inspect. We will naturally export a lot of equipment to Canada as well and in this respect the new Fielding budget will be helpful with the additional preference shown in the tariff."

One of World's Largest.

Mr. Pybus' company is one of the largest in the world and built the first high tension railway. Details of a new alignment of British interests, the news of which stirred the financial world of Britain, were given by Mr. Pybus. The group is known as the Power and Traction Finance Company, Limited, and comprises the foreign company, John Brown and Co., builders of the Lusitania, Hood and Co., Sir William Arrol, builder of the Forth Bridge, the English Electric Co., Ltd., the North British Locomotive Co., and the Prudential Life Insurance Company, the last named being the largest insurance in the world.

Challenge U. S. Supremacy.

The new company through its connection will challenge American supremacy in the Canadian field and is in a position to meet the strongest and keenest competition. Canada is no to be overlooked despite the fact that it is American's most convenient foreign market. Interests south of the international boundary are to be the first to feel the effect of British competition. "You need not take much stock in the reports you read of labor troubles in Great Britain," Mr. Pybus stated. "There was bound to be a very radical readjustment with labor and wages. Britain, so far as I know, is the only country in the world that faced the worst squarely and got through with the trouble which other countries have only deferred and have yet to face.

Mr. Pybus will go to Toronto this evening.

PETERBORO BAPTIST ASSOCIATION MEETINGS

The members of the Baptist Churches in Peterborough are to have the privilege in their association meetings to listen to two addresses by Mr. S. J. Moore, of Toronto.

Mr. Moore is one of the leading business men of that city, in fact of the Dominion, and is also one of the most prominent laymen in the Baptist denomination. As president of the Baptist convention of Ontario and Quebec in 1920-1921, he attained the highest position in the gift of the Baptist denomination. He has been superintendent of one of the Baptist Sunday Schools in Toronto for 30 years, and at the present time is one of the most active members of the Toronto Baptist Church Extension Board, which is doing such splendid work in that city for the erection of new churches and the strengthening of old ones.

The people of Peterborough, members of other denominations, will also have this privilege, and it is expected that large audiences will be present on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings in Murray Street Baptist Church to hear the message that Mr. Moore has for us.

ALD. PHELAN REOPENS THE PAVING QUESTION

DID CROFT KILL THE MAN FOUND BENEATH STALL?

Coroner's Inquest Endeavoring to Solve the Mystery of Farmer Gustave Noel's Death.

COURT CROWDED

CHATHAM, Ont., June 6. — (Special to The Examiner). — Was the terribly disfigured dead man discovered under a stall in the stable on Gustave Noel's farm, near the village of Charing Cross, Noel himself? Did Clayton Croft, a young man of 20, hired on a partnership basis by Noel, kill the man found under the stall?

With a smile on his face, Clayton Croft himself sat beside his counsel, W. C. Lamarsh, in the courthouse here this morning, listening to Crown Attorney H. D. Smith, K.C., remorsely attempting to pile up evidence to prove both charges made by the Crown. Sitting thirty feet away from Croft was his young wife, Beatrice, just 19 years old, who was married to him two months ago.

The whole countryside had flocked to Chatham. Every available inch in the court-room was filled. Men and women stood even on the radiators and on chairs in the doorway.

More than thirty witnesses will be called by the Crown. These sat in one of the jury boxes. The inquest into the identity and cause of the death of the dead man, supposed to be Noel, began sharp at 10 a.m., standard time.

Burton Croft, elder brother of the man held by the Crown, the first witness, was just proceeding to the witness box when Clayton Croft, handcuffed to a constable, was led through the crowded court-room.

Walked Jauntily.

The young man walked jauntily. Dark, clean shaven, dressed in a blue serge suit, soft blue shirt, black knitted tie and tan boots and stockings, he appeared calm. He smiled at his brother and looked for his young wife, sitting among the crowd of witnesses in the jury box on the east side of the court-room. He found her and smiled.

Burton Croft told of his going to Noels farm on Wednesday, May 17, to help his brother.

"It was a week and one day later, on a Thursday, that I found the body," he said. His brother and his wife were away that day. The elder Croft had been looking for a little pig that fell through a hole in the flooring of a stall in the stable. He at once ran to the road and hailed a man who was passing by. They telephoned for High Constable Peters.

A Gruesome Sight.

The gruesome sight of the clothing that was found on the dead man, which was produced for Burton Croft's identification, had no effect on him. He laughed in a vacant kind of way. A broken Christie hat looked like the one old Gus Noel used to wear, the witness admitted. Tattered blue overalls, mud-soaked vest and other articles of clothing were held up, but these Burton Croft could not identify positively.

Questioned by Crown Attorney Smith, Clayton's brother saisd that Gus Noel had told him once that he had given Clayton $20 with which to get married.

Dead Man's Pipe.

Especially about what kind of a pipe Noel smoked and how the pig came to be under the floor, the Crown Attorney questioned the witness.

"You've seen him smoking a corn cob pipe?"—"Yes."

"Did you see the pig fall through the floor?"—"No," said the witness, who could not see, he said, how the pig could have got through such a small hole in the floor.

"Could the pig have got under the barn any other way?" asked the Crown Attorney. "No," answered the witness as the hush in the room became noticeable.

"Do you say that the pig could not have got there unless placed there?"—"Yes," declared the witness.

Clayton Croft, on the fatal afternoon of May 27, when he came back from Chatham, and heard of the discovery of the body, just said, "How did you come to find it?" his brother declared.

Before this, Clayton, explaining the absence of Noel, said that he had gone to France.

The Father's Evidence.

Ralph Croft, father of the young Croft, when called, admitted having taken his son to task for spending Noel's money too freely. Young Croft, although he had come to his father in March for money with which to get married, told his father later that the money he was spending was his own. He had saved it while working at a tile yard and at Windsor. Clayton, after Noel's disappearance, had said that he had taken over the farm from Noel, who had gone to France.

His By-law to Pave George Street South is Thrown Out by Council on a Division of 7 to 3.

FIRST REPORT OF NEW FIRE CHIEF

It is not likely that there will be any street paving carried out in this city this year as it is apparently impossible to secure a two-thirds support of the Council as required to carry a bylaw. Ald. N. E. Phelan made an attempt last night to have a bylaw passed authorizing the construction of a pavement on George street south from the C. P. R. to Romaine street but three aldermen refused it their support and he lacked one to make the by law effective.

Re-Open Question

The bylaw was intended to reopen the question of paving which Ald. Phelan pointed out was important to relieve the unemployment situation. Mayor W. H. Taylor agreed in this view and Ald. Walter Stocker emphasized the importance of making work in this way. Ald. James Hamilton, Ald. Joseph Crowe and Ald. Malcolm McIntyre formed the opposition, the latter two refusing to have anything to do with the scheme unless the city did the work. The bylaw was supported by Ald. Phelan, Mayor Taylor, Ald. Holloway, Ald. Turner, Ald. Stocker, Ald. Morrison, and Ald. Gainey Ald. Stocker emphasized his position that the matter of who got the contract was of second ary importance as long as the work was got under way.

Too Bad, Said Mayor

"It seems too bad that we can't get something through. The men need the work and I'd like to see it go on. It seems impossible to reach an agreement', remarked Mayor W. H. Taylor. The yeas and nays were taken and the vote stood seven to three with none of the three on the cross benches ready to give an inch. The bylaw therefore expired at the same point as at the last meeting.

Bylaws Passed.

Several bylaws were passed, one authorizing the borrowing of $17,000 by debenture issue for the improvements in the waterworks system made by the Utilities Commission last year and another authorizing an agreement with the congregation of the Sisters of St. Joseph providing that they pay an annual rental of $112 a year for 30 years for sewer connection and an additional $44 a year for 30 years when the sewage disposal plant is constructed.

A bylaw passed gave authority to the city solicitor to enter into an agreement with Alfred G. Austin sole executor of the estate of the late Walter C. Austin in which the city agrees to pay damages of $1850 as stated by Mr. Widdifield last night for damages to the property 64 Hunter street, west occasioned by the construction of the Hunter street bridge. The original writ in the case was for $2200, Mr. Widdifield said.

Gimblett's First Report

Council received its first written reports from Chief George Gimblett of the Fire Department last night. He reported that Fireman N. Pammett had resigned Sunday afternoon a 2.30 p.m. and on Monday at 9 a.m. he appointed Orville H. Wilson, aged 24, a Peterboro boy and returned soldier. During the first half of May in the regime of Chief George Grange 12 alarms were answered and the apparatus travelled 14 5-8 miles, 2,500 feet of hose were laid, 50 feet of ladders and 18 gallons of chemical extinguisher used.

Drills Instituted

Eleven alarms were received, nine by telephone and two by street box and one verbally. Property damage by fire was $3,155, on buildings, $1,055 and on contents, $2,100. Chief Gimblett in his report for May 16th to 31st stated that ladder and hose drill was held three times a week for an hour in the afternoon with once a week both platoons in

BILL TO AMEND SCHOOL LAW PASSES COMMITTEE

Several Important Amendments Are Introduced By Premier Drury.

SCHOOL GRANTS.

TORONTO, June 6.—(Canadian Press)— With several important amendments the bill to amend the School Laws Act introduced in the Legislature yesterday afternoon by Hon. R. H. Grant, Minister of Education which embraces a plan to overcome the situation respecting provincial grants to rural schools, which aroused so much criticism last autumn, was approved in Committee. Premier Drury was responsible for the chief change in the reading of the act when, at his instigation, the clause was dropped which would have placed at the discretion of the Minister of Education the distribution of a portion of the grants according to "the special circumstances of any particular school".

As the bill was originally introduced the measure proposed to add to the list of qualifications on which general grants for the rural public and separate schools might be apportioned, subject to the regulations. Premier Drury, however, thought that the clause placed in the hands of the Minister a power that might be abused in the future with the result that an amendment was substituted to the following effect". "And any other circumstances which according to the regulations should effect such apportionments."

Criticised Last Year

The object of the Government in adding to the provisions on which the money might be distributed was to clear up the situation and criticism of last year when it was stated that certain rural separate schools were being assisted by provincial grants in unfair proportion to similarity situated public schools in the same districts. It was pointed out that the whole difficulty arose over the fact that a large portion of the grants to rural separate schools had not been absorbed on the regular basis of distribution and the department had followed the practice of distributing this unabsorbed portion on a prorata basis.

Premier Drury was also responsible for the inclusion among the considerations governing the apportionments that grants should be made on the basis of the assessment of Separate School supporters. It being pointed out that there were no Separate School sections.
